BLESSINGS

Vīraśaivism occupies a specific unique place in the religious philosophies of India. It is based on the twenty eight Śaivāgamas, such as Kāmikā etc., as stated by Śrī Śivayogī Śivācārya in Siddhānta Śikhāmaṇi, the most illustrious scripture of Vīraśaivism :—

सिद्धान्ताख्ये महातन्त्रे कामिकाद्ये शिवोदिते।

निर्दिष्टमुत्तरे भागे वीरशैवमतं परम्॥

—Siddhānta Śikhāmaṇi 5.98

Thus the doctrine has been supported. Lord Śiva manifests four Vedas from his exhalation where as twenty eight Śaivāgamas have also been emanated by him through the verbal expression. One has been given the right to study Vedic scriptures only on the ground of being 'Dvija' i.e. initiated with sacred thread as per the discipline of 'Varnāśramas'— the four categories of social order. By that some persons are bound to be deprived of the spiritual progress. Then Āgama scriptures are being propounded by the Lord for the spiritual upliftment of those who are eligible on the basis of their own capability irrespective of caste, colour and creed. So, Āgamas advocate the right of religious life only on the basis of spiritual status of the person concerned, not on any other standard or condition. To compare it with the present system of education and occupation, there are two ways of entry— one through reservation and the other on the basis of merit without any discrimination. According to Āgamic tradition everybody is eligible to enter into the spiritual life only on the basis of inner capability as decided by guru irrespective of caste and sex. Lord has imparted the Āgamic tradition to provide a uniform opportunity to all, so that nobody should be deprived of the spiritual upliftment on account of the lineage or social status. In Āgamic Tradition when the disciple aspires for initiation, Guru remains concerned not with the caste or social status etc. of the disciple but only with the symptoms or the preconditions of the onset of grace, as Siddhānta Śikhāmaṇi advocates :

शक्तिपातं समालोक्य दीक्षया योजयेदमुम्॥

Thus keeping in view the welfare of the whole mankind, the religion and philosophy of Vīraśaivism has been propounded.

Though Vīraśaivism is mainly based on Āgamic principles, but it has also adopted the portion of Veda which is in conformity with its doctrine. So, Vīraśaivism may very aptly be termed as 'Tāntric-Vaidic' philosophy. It has been propounded in the later portion of the twenty eight Āgamas that have been emanated from the Īśāna face of Śiva. Pārameśvarāgama is one of them which consists a systematic and complete discussion regarding the Supreme Reality and hence is named as such. Again, the scripture has been advocated by the Supreme God himself. So, it may aptly be called as 'Pārameśvarāgama'. Shaiva Bharati Shodha Pratisthanam, Jangamawadimath, is aimed at the collection, compilation, translation and publication of all the available Śaivāgamas. Learned scholars have been performing this important and auspicious work. Pārameśvarāgama has already been published with Hindi and Kannada translation. Now I feel immense joy in presenting this important scripture of Vīraśaivism with English translation, notes alongwith a detailed introduction by Dr. Rama Ghose, a senior member of the advisory committee of Shaiva Bharati Shodh Pratisthanam. She is also the Reader and Head, Deptt. of Philosophy, Arya Mahila Mahavidyalaya, affiliated to Banars Hindu University. Despite of her busy schedule in the college and other academic works, she has always been associated with the Shodh Pratisthanam from the very inception. Her works on Candrajñānāgama and Makuṭāgama have also been appreciated by the scholars. I extend my blessings and hope that she may continuously be able to render her service to the scriptural literature of the religion and philosophy.

In this regard I would like to inform the honourable readers that a parallel institution, namely, 'Vīraśaiva Anusandhān Saṁsthāna' as a branch of Shaiva Bharati Shodh Pratisthanam, has been established in Bangalore where many learned scholars have translated Candrajñānāgama, Makuṭāgama, Kāraṇāgama and Pārameśvarāgama in Kannad language. More over, seminars and symposiums have occasionally been arranged and the proceedings are also published. On the 3rd and 4th August, 02, a seminar was held on the topic 'Śaivāgamas and the Vacana literature of Karnātaka'. Eight Scholars contributed their essays. All of them were unanimously of the same opinion that the basis of Vacana literatures may very aptly be traced to the teachings of Śaivāgamas. All the publication works and other academic activities have been guided and advised by the eminent scholar Pandit Vrajavallabha Dwivedi, the director of Shaiva Bharati Shodha Pratisthanam. Grace and disency are added by the nice arrangements done by Dr. G. C. Kendadamath. Sri Chidananda O. Hiremath (Kasagi) and Sri Rajashekhar G. Hiremath always remain busy in composing so that the books may see the light of the day. The name of the printer Mittal Offset is to be mentioned for his fine work.

May Jagadguru Vishwaradhya, Kashi Vishwanath and Goddess Annapurna shower grace to all.

INTRODUCTION

Āgama and Nigama are the vast, unfathomable treasures of the Indian Religion and Philosophy. Sanskrit lexicon 'Nighantu' names the Veda as 'Nigama' and Tantras as 'Āgama' and hence both have been regarded under a common caption as 'Śrutī'. Śrutī denotes both Veda and Tantra, the two parallel stream of expressions of the nature of Reality and the means to achieve the one and the same goal, though adopting a different approach of their own. The syllable 'A' denotes that which is originated, 'ga' signifies 'falling' i.e. falling to the Goddess Pārvatī and 'ma' means the religion or the doctrine for the devotee. It is the exposition of divine knowledge, and the way to attain it through the prescribed procedures and meditation along with the hymns. According to Pauṣkar Āgama, there are ten Śaivāgamas and eighteen Rudrāgamas recognised as Siddhāntāgama. Kāmika, Yogaja, Cintya, Kāraṇa, Ajit, Sudīpta, Sūkṣma, Sahasra, Suprabhedha, Śiva and Vijaya, Pārameśvara, Nihśvāsa, Protgīta, Mukhabimba, Siddhamat, Santāna, Nārasimha, Candrahāsa, Bhadra, Svāyambhu, Viraja, Raurava, Makuṭa, Kiraṇa, Lalita, Āgneya and Parākhyā are the eighteen Rudrāgamas manifested by Śiva to the eighteen Rudras. This has been stated in Kiraṇāgama and Śrikanthī-saṁhitā that though the knowledge by itself is undivided and indivisible but Paramaśiva, the omniscient ultimate Reality, out of compassion for the welfare of the world, manifested this eternal knowledge primarily to the ten Śivas and eighteen Rudras for the purpose of revealing it to the empirical world through the divinities and ṛṣis. It is pertinent to note here that the Vedas also represent indivisible eternal knowledge which is revealed to the ṛṣis in a state of spiritual trance of deep meditation.

Pārameśvarāgama, as stated above is one of the famous Rudrāgamas revealed as the discourse between the God (Śiva) and Goddess (Pārvatī). This Āgama often follows the Vedic tradition along with the Āgamic approach, such as, Tapa, Karma, Japa, Dhyāna and Jñāna (penance, action, repetition of hymn, meditation and knowledge) have been regarded as five-fold Yajña named as Pāśupata-vrata (Pāśupata discipline) in the Vāyavīya Saṁhitā of Śiva-Mahāpurāṇa. Sūkṣmāgma and Pārameśvarāgama describe the above mentioned discipline which have again been stated in Siddhānta Śikhāmaṇi (9.21-24). This indicates that in Āgama Tantra much more emphasis has been attached to internal meditation than the external worship. Devikālottara śaivāgama specially describes the nature of internal worship (Antaryāga). Some verses of Pārameśvarāgama are in conformity with Bhagatgītā. Twentyeight elements of Śrīmat Bhāgavat have been recognised in this Āgama. "Tripadārthan catuṣpadam" (2.10-31-32) and "Brahmādyāḥ sthavarāntāśca" (12.60) etc. verses possess the parallel idea of 'Brahma-bhāvanā' in Kūrma, Garuḍa and Viṣṇu Purāṇa. Hierarchy of Śaiva devotee have been enunciated clearly: Pañcasūtra-līṅga, Prāsād Pañcākṣarī, Pañcānuvāk, Rudrādhyāya, Rudraikādaśinī, Aṣṭabandha, Tuti, Dhyāna etc. significant concepts have duly been explained along with prescribed procedures and hymns. Regarding the worship of various spiritual disciplines, Pārameśvarāgama maintains a broad view of recognition of dignity and utility of each and every discipline.

Present scripture is edited by Pt. Vrajavallabh Dwivedi, Director, Shaiva-Bharati Shodha Pratishthanam, on consulting the following copies :

- i. Pārameśvarāgama (with Marathi translation) 2 Vols. Edited and translated by Mallikarjuna Shastri, Solapur, 1904 and 1905. Variants have been indicated by the word 'Kati'.

- iv. Manuscript No. 86113, Saraswatī Bhavan, Sampurnanand Sanskrit Vishwavidyalaya, Pages 121, Size 14 x 4-5, 9 lines in each page, 36 letters in each line, Devnagari script, on paper.
- v. Manuscript available in Jñāna-Mandir of Jangamawadimath. Pages 2-136, size, 12 x 4, 8 lines in each page, 37 letter in each line, in Devanagari script, on paper, broken 23rd chapter is included only in this manuscript.

First chapter deals with the nature of the various doctrines, namely, Saugata, Vaidika, Saura and Vaiṣṇava etc. The name Saugata includes the doctrines of Bauddha, Carvak, Jaina and others. On the other hand Vedic principles are in conformity with the Vedas which again is divided into five, namely, Vaikartan, Āditya, Pauṣṇa, Mārtandya and Saura. Sūrya is known as the 'Adhipati', the lord of all divinities. Again it is stated that the tradition considers Vaiṣṇava doctrines superior to the Saura etc. Vaiṣṇavas worship God as Gopala, Narasiṃha, Rāma, Kriṣṇa, Nārāyaṇa and chant the Vaiṣṇava Gāyatrī. Śaiva doctrines have been declared as supreme and divided into seven sects, namely, Vīraśaiva, Anādi śaiva, Ādiśaiva, Aṇuśaiva, Mahāśaiva, Yogaśaiva and the famous Jñānaśaiva. Among them Vīraśaiva is considered to be the supreme. Apart from them other seven schools have been enumerated, namely, Gāṇapatya, Vīrabhadra, Bhairava, Śarabha, Nāndikeśa, Kaumāra and Paiśāca which are again subdivided into several subsects. Among these schools narrated above, the later is superior to the earlier. But the Śaiva school is the supreme among the all six Tantra schools, namely, Vīraśaiva, Vaiṣṇava, Śākta, Saura, Vināyaka and Kāpāla. It has been advised that adherer should observe the disciplinary path of his own Tantra. It has repeatedly been emphasised that the followers should strictly stick to their own paths. Śaiva schools are further divided into four sects, namely, Śaiva, Pāśupata, Soma and Lākula. Śākta doctrines are classified into four, namely, Nityā, Anityā, Sābarā and Śakti. There are four divisions of Saura sect i.e. Brahmā, Indra, Sāvana and Sūrya. Nirīśvara, Seśvara, Kāpāla and Bhairava are the four sects of the Kāpālika school. Pañcākṣara is the principal hymn of all the Śaiva sects because it assumes the form of Śiva Himself. On an enquiry by Goddess regarding the relative hierarchy among the various sects, God categorically emphasises the uniqueness and greatness of all sects since liberation is the only goal of all. The path of Vīraśaiva as advocated by the Lord is easier to observe and is also provider of benign results. For this reason Vīraśaivism has been considered as supreme among the all, since it bestows both the enjoyment and liberation. Then the glory of wearing Rudrākṣa, sacred ash and Iṣṭaliṅga has been enunciated in details. On enquiry by the Goddess as to why the term Vīra is not attached to any other doctrine except Vīraśaivism, Lord replies that the person attaining the Turya, the fourth state, is named as Vīra but as for Vīraśaiva doctrine the epithet 'Vīra' is applicable to one who constantly observes the path advocated by Guru with firm determination. Wearing Iṣṭaliṅga is unique in Vīraśaivism alone but Iṣṭaliṅga should only be worn after having been initiated into Vīraśaiva religion and bestowed by Guru after Liṅga-dīkṣā. According to Vīraśaivism wearing Liṅga without Dīkṣā is a lapse. Chanting the hymn of Pañcākṣara and wearing of Iṣṭaliṅga with devotion are the means to attain the Grace of Śiva. One is able to realise the real nature and identity of Liṅga and Śiva only through Śiva's compassion. The word 'Liṅga' has also been used in the scriptures to denote the various kinds of 'Līlā', the blissful purposeless sport of Śiva and the body of the devotee is transformed into a principle of divine sport. In Vīraśaivism the glory of Śivayogī has been stated thus that mere perception of Śivayogī is capable of eradicating all sins and inspiring the knowledge of Śiva like the vision of the pinnacle of the Śiva temple.

In second chapter the characteristics of Liṅgas, proper procedure for wearing the Iṣṭaliṅga, method of initiation and also the nature of the casket, the container of Liṅga and Śivasūtra along with the method of igniting the Śivāgni have been described. Liṅgas emanated from the rivers, mountains, holy places, Ganges and the ocean possess the nature of Śiva Himself. Liṅgas made of mercury, gold, silver, copper, zinc, lead, crystal and Rudrākṣa fulfil desires, confer wealth, progeny, annihilate the enemy, remove diseases, eradicate all sins and are the bestower of knowledge, virtues and liberation respectively. But the Liṅgas made of the stone of Śrīśailam is the supreme and the doner of all the happiness of this world and the world beyond provided it is bestowed by Guru at the time of Liṅga-dīkṣā. The results produced by the Liṅgas depend not only on the kinds of metal but also on the size of the Liṅgas. Iṣṭaliṅga awarded by Guru, if worn once should never be separated under any circumstances. Then characteristics and the procedure of preparing the casket (सज्जिका) for the movable Liṅga (चलिङ्ग) have also been described in detail. Wearing and worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga with devotion and observing all the virtuous norms of life is the means for attaining the spiritual progress and finally the Grace of God. Liṅga kept in a casket should be considered as Śiva installed in a temple and is the only worth protecting thing. The characteristics, nature and the procedure for preparing the casket and Śiva-thread and the results as per their mechanism and the material of the things have also been stated emphatically. For spiritual life one is fully dependent on Guru who is the only refuge. Present scripture enunciates clearly the glorious nature of Guru who bears the full responsibility of the spiritual journey of the disciple. following the advise of Guru by fully surrendering is the only duty on the part of the disciple. Much importance has been attached to the observance of all the virtuous disciplines for the Vīraśaiva devotee. Guru also should accept such devoted disciple endowed with all qualities and initiate him with proper śaiva initiation. Prescribed rules for the initiation should also be observed so that favourable results may be obtained. Liṅgas bestowed by Guru is to be worn life long and in case of loss of Liṅga, Guru is the only authorised person to provide it again by duly performing the procedures. So, change of Guru in Śaiva religion is strictly prohibited.

Third Chapter commences with the procedure of initiation and gradually proceeds on to an elaborate description of the other rituals regarding the religious practices of the Vīraśaivism viz. the construction of the canopy for the place of worship during the Liṅga-dīkṣā. Maṇḍapam should beautifully be decorated with the flowers and expensive things to the best of one's capacity. There is the definite procedure for drawing the Maṇḍala and usages of the auspicious things in a particular way. An earthen pitcher with brimming water should be installed for duly observing the rite of 'Prāṇa-pratiṣṭhā' by reciting the original hymn. The procedure of initiation is to be fulfilled by the four persons, named as Ṛtvik along with Guru as the fifth one. Lord Śiva along with Goddess Pārvatī should duly be worshipped on the sacred pitcher by using beautiful sweet odoured flowers, other auspicious items and by chanting the holy hymns. Then Guru should accomplish the rites along with the Ṛtvijas and worship Śiva by chanting the hymns of Sadyojāta, Vāmadeva, Aghora, Tatpuruṣa and Īśāna respectively with an unflinching devotion. Then worship of Liṅga is to be performed by reciting relevant hymns for the various rites of the worship of Śiva. Five kinds of flowers viz., Droṇa, Karavīr, Ketakī, Sevanti, Punnāg etc. along with bilva leaves, rice and sesamum seeds should be offered for the pleasure of God. Devotee is instructed to worship Iṣṭaliṅga with various ingredients like incense powder, camphor, betel leaf and all pure food added with ghee chanting specific hymns for the particular offering. Worship should be performed regularly without any lapse. All the procedures should be followed for the casket and the thread along with the Iṣṭaliṅga without any negligence. One should avoid the company of non-believers and hypocrats rather observe his own principle with all sincerity. Special worship should be performed on the auspicious days as directed in the scriptures. Devotee should arrange all items for worship including bell and crouch-shell which are favourite instruments of God. On the fourth day of Iṣṭaliṅga-dīkṣā devotee should observe the rite of auspicious ablution of Iṣṭaliṅga and perform the worship devotedly with all the items collected to the best of his capacity. Disciple should have the regard for Iṣṭaliṅga as Śiva, for Guru as Liṅga and accept the food offered to Guru as prasāda without having any feeling of left-over (उच्छिष्ट). The glory of wearing Iṣṭaliṅga, Rudrākṣa and smearing the sacred ash throughout the body is considered as the most sacred ritual, so much so that mere vision of such Śivayogī is enough for purifying a sinner. God proclaims that Śiva-yogī who wears Iṣṭaliṅga, Rudrākṣa and besmears sacred ash on the body and chant the Śiva-pañcākṣarī hymn is to be regarded as the Śiva Himself.

Fourth chapter describes, in detail, the procedure of the sacrifice to be followed. It is stated that the alters of sacrifice shaped as square, triangular and circular impart Dharma (virtue), Artha (wealth), Kāma and the sacrificial pits shaped as square, triangular, round, semicircular and of the shape of tortoise bestow Dharma, Artha, Kāma, Sāyujya and Kaivalya respectively. The rule of igniting fire by chanting the Pañcākṣara prefixed with Parṇava and showing the adequate mudrās by Guru have been enunciated gradually. The place of sacrifice is to be sanctified by performing eight rituals, namely, Vīkṣaṇa, Tāḍaṇa, Prokṣaṇa, Abhimarśaṇa, Ghātana, Prāthana, Abhimantraṇa and Namaskāra. Then fire should be installed and praised by chanting the original hymn. Śiva should be meditated upon on the burning fire along with the Goddess Pārvatī sitting on the left lap of Śiva bearing hatchet, stag in two lotus hands and assuming the postures of Abhaya and Vara with the rest of the two hands. Oblations should be made into the sacrificial fire reciting the sacred hymns. Agni itself is to be meditated upon as the form of Rudra bearing different kinds of weapons by seven hands. Then the rite of Jātakarma is to be performed for the fulfilment of the rite of Niṣkramaṇa. After that sacred thread ceremony should be observed chanting the original hymn. The fire should be assumed possessing seven virtuous tongues decorated with seven flames. Seven oblations are to be offered to the seven tongues by reciting particular hymns with a view to obtain wealth, virtues, sons, longevity and extinction of enemy etc. Oblation should be offered to the tongue of Agni named Śiva for seeking liberation. Sixteen Goddesses should be worshipped on the third line of the circle as a part of worship of Mekhalās. Indra etc. eight Dikpālas are to be worshipped along with their carriers etc. Thus Durgā, Gaṇapati, Kṣetrapāla and Mṛtunjaya should be adored on the four directions and Abhayaṅkara is to be prayed in the middle. Now, oblations are to be offered in the name of fifty three deities chanting the Pañcākṣara hymn prefixed with Praṇava. Then burning fire is to be prayed and meditated upon as the form of Śiva. Installation of Paridhi reciting the sacred hymns should be performed. A detailed procedure for the installation of the bowl of sacrifice has been given. Finally the procedure of sacrifice by invoking different deities chanting the specific hymns meant for each of them are to be fulfilled by Guru for the spiritual progress of the disciple.

Fifth chapter continues the narration of the procedures of Liṅga initiation, wearing of Liṅga, Rudrākṣa and besmearing of sacred ash as these are the foremost religious duties on the part of the Vīraśaiva devotee. Assembling of casket, Śiva-thread and Iṣṭaliṅga should be performed as per rule by chanting specific hymns meant for the particular observances and praising for the all powerful Śiva are to be sung with intense emotion. Thus Iṣṭaliṅga should be installed on the seat as earlier alongwith the casket and Śiva-thread. Guru should teach the proper procedure of the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga by performing himself along with the four Ṛtvijas chanting the hymns of Pañcabrahmānuvāk, Praṇava, Pañcākṣara and Rudrādhyāya. Besmearing of sacred ash on the different parts of the body by reciting specific hymns decided for is to be made in order to purify the whole body. Then Guru should preach the disciple the customary tradition of wearing Rudrākṣa, worshipping Guru reciting appropriate hymns as per the regulations of the sect. Guru should tie up the Iṣṭaliṅga on the throat of the disciple chanting the original hymn hundred and eight times which is able to fulfil all desires. After bowing down unto the lotus feet of Guru disciple should seek the blessings of the Śivayogīs by offering them money, cloth, food, betel etc. with devotion to the best of his capacity. Devotee should ever contemplate on his soul, Guru, Liṅga and Śiva assuming them as the same entity and feel blessed and become immersed in ecstasy of Śiva. Vīraśaivism transcends all differences of caste, colour, creed and sex. All human beings are considered of one and the same category. Worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga by offering Droṇa flower and only one bilva leaf incurred immeasurable indebtedness upon God, as stated by Him. He emphatically asserts that He exists in Iṣṭaliṅga for ever. There is no difference at all between the wearers of Liṅgas. Ablution of Iṣṭaliṅga has an immense value in Vīraśaivism. Though the glory of the regular worship of Iṣṭaliṅga has emphatically been asserted but there is the provision for occasional and purposive worships and their specific procedures offering special items with a view to securing the favour of Śiva. Injunction has been issued for the Liṅgī-śaiva never to indulge in mean conduct and wretched behaviour, rather they should express proper regard to the Śiva-yogīs. Blessed is he who worships Jaṅgamas and is endowed with their blessings. It has been advised that the relation of worshipper and worshipped is to be maintained only between the wearers of Liṅga. The wearer of Liṅga is considered to be superior to the non-wearer, as the gold is superior to all metals. As Śiva is the supreme of all the deities, so Śaiva doctrine is the best among all the principles. Śaiva doctrine is seven-fold and Vīraśaivism is the supreme among the all.

Sixth chapter deals with the nature and significance of the Ṣaṭasthalas, one of the special features of Vīraśaiva religious philosophy. The doctrine of Ṣaṭasthalas is so secret and serious that the non-believers and non-devotees should never be advised about it. God asserts that He alone is the Supreme Self, the epitome of bliss, known as the Sadāśiva, assumes the six-fold forms, namely, Ṣaṭasthalas which is both the means and achievements of the spiritual life manifested and also is immersed in it as the substratum (sthala). Bhakta, Māheśwara, Prasādī, Prāṇaliṅgī, Śaraṇa and Śivalingaika are the six esteemed sthalas emanated from Śiva.

Guru, Jaṅgama and Iṣṭaliṅga are only the revelations of Śiva in various phases. One who adores the aforesaid three forms actually worships Śiva and should be known as Bhaktasthala. Such Bhaktasthala is the first among the eight unique manifestations of Śiva who is its presiding deity. One who remains involved in worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga daily for three times and performs virtuous deeds duly prescribed in the religion of Vīraśaivism, is called the Māheśvarasthala who represents the water element. Devotee who never accepts food prior to offering Śiva and without worshipping the Jaṅgamas and never discards the left over of the food offered to Śiva, is known as the Prasādīsthala who is unique in nature and represents the fire element. Sādhaka who has realised the truth that Prāṇa, Liṅga and Śiva are one and the same, is the famous Prāṇaliṅgī who meditates on the subtle nature of Prāṇaliṅga. Such Prāṇaliṅgīsthala represents the air element and is undoubtedly considered as Rudra himself. Devotee who ever remains absorbed in meditating on Śiva and is free from the three kinds of desires i.e. desires of son, wealth and fame. is famous as Śaraṇa. Such state is called the Śaraṇasthala, represents the Ākāśa element and is the unique fifth form of Śiva. The state in which worship, meditation, yoga etc. do not remain a necessity and Śivaliṅgī becomes immersed in the contemplation that everything is in him and he is immanent in everything. One who attains this state of 'identity' with Paramaśiva is named as 'Aikyasthala' and is only the noumenal nature of Śiva. By knowing these six mystic stages of sthalas, one becomes free from the cycle of births and deaths. Supreme Śiva is possessed of and manifests the power of omniscience, complecency, eternal consciousness, freedom, eternally manifested power and infinite immanent power. Māheśvarasthala is the aspect named as Tripti Māheśvara, Prasādīsthala is the state of uninterrupted consciousness of Śiva and Prāṇaliṅgīsthala is the Śiva named as Svātantra. Śaraṇasthala is the state of manifested power of Śiva and the supreme state, namely, Aikyasthala is actually the form of Śiva. i.e. Anantaśakti. These six sthalas are called the Aṅgasthalas which is the supreme and most secret among all the secrets of the spiritual life. By achieving the knowledge of the inseparable relation between the Aṅga and Aṅgī, devotee attains liberation. Apart from these, there are six Upāṅgas, namely, devotion (Bhakti), cessation of all deeds, intellect, thought, annihilation of pride and true knowledge. All religious duties devoid of devotion are totally futile. The power of devotion eradicates all undesirable effects originated from the deeds with evil intention. Glory of the instruction of Guru is inexplicable. It makes one capable to discriminate between good and evil as well as the auspicious and inauspicious matters. One is able to attain the knowledge of Śiva only through Guru, by annihilating all pride and completely surrendering on Guru. Guru is the only refuge. When the vanity is eradicated, devotee is immersed in the knowledge of Śiva and perceives all beings in one's ownself and his ownself in Śiva. True knower is one who is aware of the fact that Śiva, the Supreme Self is the substratum of the phenomenal world of animate and inanimate objects. Upāṅgas, six Sthalas, six Aṅgas etc. are all inter-related and by the mercy of God, obstruction, such as, vanity is terminated and the true knowledge dawns. By attaining the knowledge of Ṣaṣasthalas, one becomes free from all kinds of surges and so attains liberation. Hunger, thirst, sorrow, attachment, birth and death are the characteristic features of the life principle that are inimical and inflict pain and suffering on human beings. To be free from these evil propensities and attain the nature of God is the aim of human life.

Seventh chapter describes the characteristics of the seven-fold śaiva disciplines with specific supremacy of Vīraśaivism. Ādiśaiva, Aṇiśaiva, Mahāśaiva, Yogaśaiva, Jñānaśaiva and finally Vīraśaiva are the seven-fold spiritual hierarchy to be attained in Śiva worship. One achieves the eligibility to enter into the śaiva discipline owing to the virtues acquired by the past good deeds. Disciple should be firmly determined in observing the code of conduct as per the scriptures interpreted by Guru. He should never deviate from the path instructed by Guru. Accepting the ascending order of the spiritual life, devotee, on fulfilling the first stage, should aspire for the second one, the Ādiśaiva. Ādiśaiva follows the duly prescribed rules and procedure of worship of Iṣṭaliṅga for three times along with the adoration of Jaṅgamas. Certainly the status of Ādiśaiva devotee is superior to Anādiśaiva. Next adorer is named as Aṇuśaiva who remains absorbed in the meditation of Śiva, study of scriptures to secure the peace of mind. He lays more emphasis on knowledge than rituals. Having control over senses, such person with cool mind goes on accepting higher and higher doctrines and gradually proceeds to the higher realm by steadily acquiring the spiritual capabilities. He overcomes all miseries in such a way as a strong and stout tree is capable to stand the velocity of the flood. Then the devotee ascends to the stage of Mahāśaiva who accepts everything after surrendering it to the Śiva and Jaṅgamas. Food, bed, cloths and all other objects of enjoyment have been used as the 'prasāda' or the gift of God. Fifth is the state of yogaśaiva in the hierarchy who is capable of identifying himself with Śiva, the cause of all manifestations. Such Yogaśaiva is completely non-attached, non-egoistic and remains absorbed in meditating and contemplating on the identity of his own Self and Śiva. He perceives the whole world as Liṅga and Liṅga as Śiva. Beyond that the characteristic features of Jñānaśaiva is that he regards the knowledge that the whole universe is of the nature of Śiva which is known as the Mahājñāna, the supreme knowledge. Then there is no need of worship and meditation. These various disciplines are to be considered as the ascending order like that of a ladder. Initiation, sacrificial rites, rules of conduct are the common features, to all disciplines. Yoga is important in Yogaśaiva where as Jñānaśaiva always meditates on knowledge. One who is firmly established on Vīraśaiva discipline observes both knowledge and yoga as the combined means to the end since yoga without knowledge and knowledge without yoga can never be accomplished. The epithet 'Vīra' in Vīraśaivism indicates the intense devotion conjoined with the yoga that reaches the goal undoubtedly. A Vīraśaiva devotee should observe all social and ethical disciplines and lead a life of piety and sanctity. Vīraśaivas are endowed with eight protective aura i.e. Guru, Liṅga, Jaṅgama, Pādodaka, Prasāda, Bhasma and Rudrākṣa. A Vīraśaiva should never indulge in any kind of slackness rather observe a disciplined pious life. He should attach more value to a Liṅgī than a non-liṅgī. A Liṅgī should always be considered higher than a non-liṅgī even if he belongs to a lowest category of caste (cāṇḍāl). Then some instructions have duly been given regarding the collection of ingredients and the procedure of worship. All the material as well as the spiritual happiness may be enjoyed only through the Vīraśaiva discipline. It has been asserted that as the walking on the edge of the sword and twisting the ear of a tiger is almost impossible, so also liberation is difficult without acquiring the knowledge of Vīraśaiva discipline. A Śivaliṅgī should only be contented in remaining absorbed in worshipping Śiva and observe complete surrender on the Grace of Śiva.

Eighth chapter deals with the specific characteristic and conduct of a Vīraśaiva. As the brave person, so also one who remains steady in the discipline with true devotion and detachment, is termed as Vīra. Śivayogī who is free from three kinds of desires (desire for son, wealth and fame as mentioned in the Upaniṣads), has intense craving for acquiring various knowledges and is endowed with firm detachment is called the Vīra. Śivayogī who is blind to the beauty of a lady despite of sharpness of his senses, never indulges in abusing or condemning anybody though being an all knowing person, possesses full control over the senses; abandons ego, pride and envy, rather is endowed with the virtue of pardoning, modesty, purity, self-restrain, steadiness and remains immersed in unflinching meditation on Śiva. He is an observer of eight-fold features of celibacy. The daily routine of life of a Vīraśaiva devotee is to get up from the bed in the early morning and perform a regular worship after having proper bath and besmearing the sacred ash and wearing Rudrākṣas. Process of anointing of sacred ash on the different parts of the body uttering particular hymn has been explained in detail. Pañcākṣara hymn should be recited strictly in accordance with the instruction of Guru. While performing japa, the bearer of Liṅga should contemplate on the unity of Śiva, soul and Guru as Śiva is Guru himself and Guru is the form of Śiva. Śiva is endowed with the thirty eight Kalās (the eightfold images), destroyer of enemy, of the nature of Aghora, Śarva, Tatpuruṣa, Īśāna, Īśvara. Śivaliṅgī should collect proper ingredients and observe worship regularly as per the rule duly laid down. Thus by constant recitation of the hymn with unflinching devotion and deep meditation, the devotee attains the supreme state of Vīramāheśvara. Liberation is easily accessible for the devotee whose deeds of the previous life are consumed, the result of the reserved deeds are destroyed by self-knowledge and the future result is ceased due to the non-attachment for the result of the action. When all conducts and desires are dissipated, the ceaseless perfect knowledge arises. The wearer of Liṅga possessed with the aforesaid virtues is superior to all ascetics, greater than wise persons and higher than the persons who are adept in rituals and yoga.

Ninth chapter deals with the eminence of Vīraśaiva discipline. As one is sure to attain liberation only by entering into Kāśī, so also the devotee is certain to achieve the exalted position of union with Śiva by adhering to the discipline of Vīraśaivism. Vīraśaivism ushers joy to both wise and unwise indiscriminately. Vīraśaiva devotee with the profound single minded devotion enjoys the peace of mind by meditating on Śiva, on the one side and discarding the material things of worldly life, on the other. The inner self of such person becomes intensely calm and tranquil. One is able to enter into any sect of śaiva discipline only by the grace of Śiva. As a poor person protects his acquired wealth throughout his life, in the same way, for a Vīraśaiva devotee faith is the essence of devotion. One who adheres to the path instructed by Guru, easily attains liberation by the compassion of Śiva. Vīraśaiva discipline has its eminence in relation to Sanyāsa. One who has accomplished the supreme spiritual practices of yoga takes birth in the family of Liṅgī śaivite and enters into the Vīraśaiva discipline which is the essence of all religious disciplines like a ripe fruit. Besmearing the whole body with the sacred ash three times a day, worshipping the Iṣṭaliṅga to the best of his capacity, accepting alms only from the śaiva devotee are the characteristics of Vīraśaiva. Constantly remembering, worshipping and meditating listening to the glory, praising songs of Śiva, are also the main characteristics of Vīraśaivas. Observing silence, living in solitude, studying scriptures, non-attachment to the objects of enjoyment, tranquility of mind, firm determination, compassion for all beings are the specific nature of a Vīraśaiva. Neither the objects, nor the friends, wealth etc. can protect the devotee, only the firm faith of the devotee towards God can protect him. Serving Guru, contemplating on the scriptures and living accordingly, keeping calm and quiet attitude, solitary living and devotion to Śiva strengthen determination. Worshipping Śivaliṅga requires no special endeavour as there are plenty flowers and leaves in the forest and sweet water in the rivers. So, achieving Śivahood is quite pleasant for a wise devotee. The person who is devoid of devotion, power of discrimination, the glory of firm detachment and having impatience and inaction, if pilot the boat, is sure to sink due to improper means. The wise person should make all efforts to purify all defilements with the water of Vīraśaiva discipline. Then only he is fully purified. As the burning fire burns all fuels, so also the fire of Vīraśaiva discipline annihilates all bondages. The hierarchy of Śaiva disciple has been described clearly. Devotee may choose and accept any one of the Ādi or Anādi categories in Śaiva discipline according to his will and may duly perform the worship of the Liṅga according to the rules laid down.

He should adore the guests and perform all the rites and rituals prescribed in the scriptures. Initiated should worship Iṣṭaliṅga, ever recite the hymn within and contemplate on the teachings of scriptures. Then he should enter into the discipline of Mahāśaiva and again by acquiring the capability for practising the yoga, he enters into the yogaśaiva discipline. Devotee who has freed himself from all cravings, detached and has full control over his senses, is considered eligible for entering into the yogaśaiva discipline. Such a person should learn the scriptures directly from Guru, wears ochre-coloured dress, bear a stick, renunciate house-hold life and keep crest, matted hair and shaven head. Thus after accomplishing the discipline of yoga-śaiva devotee should devoutly and humbly take refuge in Vīraśaiva Guru and with his permission should enter into the discipline of Pāśupata-śaiva. The state named Avadhūt in the scriptures is called the Jñānaśaiva in Vīraśaiva discipline. This Vīraśaiva discipline is never different from the Avadhūt stage which is the supreme. For them, there is neither purity nor impurity, neither adorer nor adored, there is no discrimination between man to man, cow, elephant etc. lowest or a little, bigger or equal. For the stage of Avadhūt, the whole universe is alike and inheres in the indivisible Absolute-the existence-consciousness-bliss. He is the knower, knowledge and known. Avadhūt remains immersed in contemplating the whole universe of animate and inanimate beings as existent in Śiva. For him, there is neither gradation nor affirmative or negative laws nor any defilement. There is no virtue and sin, no lower and higher stages. He himself is everything as he becomes one with Śiva. Such is the glory of Vīraśaiva discipline.

Tenth chapter throws light on the process of spiritual rites and meditation prescribed for the different stages of Śaiva devotee. Yogī aspires for that Being, the Brahman who is the indweller in the lotus-heart of the meditator. There are four-fold categories or stages of Śaiva-discipline, namely, Anādiśaiva, Ādiśaiva, Aṇuśaiva and Mahāśaiva. They are supposed to perform their religious rites and spiritual meditations as per their prescribed rules. Anādiśaiva should always perform his duties with a view to good results and worship the Jaṅgamas as per his capacity. Ādiśaiva should devoutly perform his religious duties as laid down in the scriptures. Devotee of Aṇuśaiva should abandon the desire for the results and fully depend on God while performing the special and desired actions (Naimittika and Kāmya-karma). Mahāśaiva, apart from his regular rites should deeply meditate on Śiva and contemplate everything as embodied in Liṅga. One who has attained the state of Mahāśaiva, should gradually ascend to the stage of Yoga-śaiva. There are two kinds of Yoga, namely, Sākāra and Nirākāra. Nirākāra yoga transcends the states of duality, the trilogy of knowledge, known and knower and Sādhaka who is adept only in both the Jñāna and Yoga, is capable of meditating on the formless, pure, immutable, indescribable Supreme Being. He remains absorbed in his real Self since he does not have any relation with external not-self. But one who is not yet eligible in contemplating the formless, should practice meditation on the image with form. Śiva and Pārvatī should be contemplated sitting happily on a divine throne surrounded with all beautiful and auspicious things ; adorned with divinities their consorts and devotees.

After having accomplished Yoga with unflinching meditation Yogī develops an inward concentration and is free from all the objects of enjoyment. The devotee whoever meditates on the state of 'Śivoham' (identification), is called the Vīraśaiva. He, then, contemplates the whole universe of animate and inanimate objects as Śiva and worships Him with the flower of truthfulness, forgiveness and all auspicious feelings. Such Vīraśaiva is devoid of attachment and aversion and always remains immersed in worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga. Avadhūt, Sanyāsī, Yogī, Pāsupat, Śiva, Vīra, Vīraśaiva, Mahāmāheśvara and Yati are the synonyms of Vīraśaivayogī. No work remains to be done for them except enjoying identification with Śiva. Śama, Dama, Titikṣā, Uparatī, Śraddhā and Samādhi are the six-fold disciplines (virtuous dispositions) to be observed for Liṅgi-Vīraśaiva. For him perceiving Śiva every-where and having compassion and love for all beings is the only means to eliminate the sense of discrimination and remain absorbed in the spiritual feeling of Śivahood. Blessed is he who ever recites Pañcākṣara hymn in all circumstances as this hymn is the bestower of both enjoyment and liberation. There is no place superior to Kailāsa, no divinity superior to Śaṅkar, no discipline superior to Vīraśaiva and no hymn superior to Pañcākṣara. Constant recitation of this hymn surely imparts the closest unison (Sāyujya) with Śiva. This is the characteristics of Śivayogī and his method of meditation.

Eleventh chapter sings the glory of Pañcākṣara hymn. Chanting of and meditating on the Pañcākṣara hymn is the supreme worship in all Śaivism. Pañcākṣara becomes six syllable hymn by prefixing with Praṇava which is the essence of all Vedic hymns. This hymn is capable of fulfilling all aspirations of the devotee and showers Grace in the form of both enjoyment and liberation. Praṇava is the seed of all wisdom, subtle, having esoteric meaning and equal to God himself. Recitation of Praṇava results in devotion which is capable to lead to Śiva. Yogis know the glory of Praṇava in the meditative state as pure wisdom. Śiva in the form of Pañcākṣara hymn is immanent in both preceptor and perceived. Śiva is attainable only by this hymn. The whole scriptures of Veda and its divisions and subdivisions are existent in this six syllable hymn. All the seven crores of hymns along with their auxiliaries are inherent in this great Pañcākṣara hymn as the details implicitly remain in the Sūtra. Devotee who constantly chants the greatest Pañcākṣara hymn gets easy access to the liberation. For a Viraśaiva Liṅgī, Pañcākṣara hymn is the bestower of supreme wisdom and bliss. It is regarded to be a 'Kalpa-vṛkṣa', (a celestial tree assumed to confer all bounties). The supreme wisdom is extremely blissful. Pañcākṣarī wisdom is extremely significant. The term 'namah' is to be uttered in the beginning, then the supreme syllable 'Śivāya' is to be added. Pañcākṣarī hymn becomes six syllables by prefixing 'Praṇava'. So, it is the matrix of all hymns. The luminosity of this hymn is of the nature of Divine Energy. Saint Gautama, Atri, Viśvāmitra, Aṅgirā and Bhāradvāj are the five seers of this hymn and Gāyatrī, Uṣṇik, Anuṣṭup, Bṛhat and Virāt are the five metres pertaining to this syllable of this hymn. Śiva, Rudra, Mahādeva, Īśvara and Pārameśvara are the five presiding deities of the five syllables respectively. The five faces of Śiva are the abodes of the five syllables. The synonyms of Pañcākṣara are Mūla, Vidyā, Śiva, Śivasūtra, Pañcākṣara and Ṣaḍākṣara. The Mūlavidyā is contemplated as heart, the syllable 'na', the form of Śaṅkar as head, syllable 'ma' as crest, syllable 'śi' as shield, syllable 'vā' as the three eyes and the syllable 'ya' represents weapon. Six syllables, such as, 'namah, svāhā, vaṣaṭ and phaṭ etc. are assumed as the six organs of the hymn. The names of Pañcabrahma image of Śiva are Tatpuruṣa, Aghora, Sadyojāta, Vāmadeva and Īśāna. The ritual of Nyāsa should be observed on the five fingers i.e. index, middle, ring, little and thumb contemplating the Pañca-brahma image of Śiva by reciting five syllables of the hymn on the face, anus, heart, legs and head of one's own body. The ritual is to be performed reciting five syllable without Praṇava on east, south, west, north and upper directions and again Vinyāsa of syllable is to be performed with the addition of Praṇava. Then Goloka-nyāsa should be performed for self-defence on the heart, face, shoulders, thighs throat, navel and the two sides. Again the Nyāsa and Vinyāsa should be performed on the different parts of the body reciting six syllables hymns. The worship performed with all sincerity, faith and determination is very esteemed to Śiva. The devotee should perform worship according to his faith, understanding, time, capability and disposition. If worship is performed devotedly anywhere with whatever is available, it leads him to liberation. Rites and rituals devoid of knowledge and reverence remain fruitless. On the otherhand, true recitation of the hymn alongwith the observance of the rituals performed with true knowledge, proper action, perfect reverence and in accordance with the procedures is immensely fruitful. So, the disciple should always devotedly worship Guru with mind, body and word and sincerely follow his instructions. He should respectfully acquire the wisdom and learn the means of purification of Adhvas from Guru for self-realisation. Kalā, Tattva, Bhuvana, Varṇa, Pada and Mantra are the six Adhvas that are purified by the regular observance of rites and meditation on Śiva. Devotee should contemplate on the supreme form, seer, metre, divinity, seed of the hymn, power and the pure form of hymn while reciting the Pañcākṣara hymn. When the hymn is recited in the lowest discernible pitch in which only the vibration of the tongue occurs and is hardly audible by others, is called Upāñśujapa. When the hymn is recited within mind contemplating intellectually on letters, words, syllables and meaning is called Mānasajapa. Upāñśujapa is hundred times better than vocal recital (Vācikajapa) and Mānasa-japa is thousand times superior to Upāñśujapa, it has been stated. Performance of japa during Kumbhaka (holding of breath in inhalation) is called Sagarbhajapa and japa during Recaka (inhalation and exhalation) is named as Agarbha. Sagarbha-japa is considered to be far Superior to Agarbha-japa. Japa with meditation produces immense results. Japa performed by the coral-beads, crystal, pearl, golden beads provide specific results accordingly. Japa performed by the thumb bestows liberation, by the index finger destroys enemy, by the middle finger provides wealth; if performed by the ring finger, peace and tranquility are achieved; little finger provides protection and specially grant progeny. Not only that, the place of japa has the influence of its own circumstances. Japa is being performed in cowshed, forest, garden, on a mountain, bank of river, temple produces more and more results respectively and japa facing sun, fire, guru, moon, lamp, water, Iṣṭaliṅga and cow is always beneficial and yeilds favourable results. Devotee who performs Pañcākṣarī japa with intense devotion is free from all sins and attains Śiva. Such is the glory of the supreme Pañcākāṣra hymn.

Jñāna-yoga i.e. knowledge as the means of liberation has been advocated in Twelfth chapter. On the enquiry of Goddess regarding the glory of the Jñāna-yoga, God asserts that the devotee is one who ever practices non-violence, truthfulness, non-covetousness, possesses theistic attitude and reverence for God, spends time in teaching, learning, worshipping and performing sacrifices and for whom all oblations and sacrifices are really acquiring the knowledge and devotion of God. Yogī, for the fulfilment of the spiritual wisdom, ever remains absorbed in both the internal worship as well as corresponding external religious rites. Karma-yoga i.e. non-attached action leads to the attainment of knowledge after the purification of mental faculty (citta-śuddhi). External, internal and external-internal are popularly known as three kinds of worship but the worship of Śiva is of five kinds, namely, pance, auspicious deeds, recitation of hymn, meditation and knowledge. Internal worship is far more deeply spiritually significant as the external religious rites are purified by the internal spiritual power. It has been advised in the scriptures that both the external and internal worship should be observed with devotion. Devotion is the only element that causes the manifestation of love of God as both are the two aspects of the same principle. Śaiva devotee possesses certain characteristics of superior order, such as, remaining absorbed in Śiva-worship, having intense affection for other śaiva-devotees, devoutly listening to the glory of Śiva and feeling emotional vibrations in the name of Śiva. He is ascetic, virtuous, pure, wise and keep himself away from hypocrisy and deception. Devotee attains the goal and realises the identity with Śiva only through His grace. No rules regarding the injunctions or prohibitions are applicable for him as he attains union with Śiva. As the iron assumes the nature of fire in its companion, so also devotee assumes the nature of Śiva in His proximity. Liberation is accessible only to such yogī who is endowed with knowledge of Śiva. Jñāna, Kriyā, Caryā and Yoga are the four-fold means advised in the Śaiva religion. Worship of Iṣṭaliṅga along with the other rites and rituals are known as Caryā. Observing the path as instructed by Guru, concentrating the mind on Śiva and controlling the dispositions of mind is called yoga. Detachment causes knowledge and yoga is achieved by knowledge. Devotee should worship Śiva by observing the prescribed śaiva disciplines. Pañcākṣarī hymn with Praṇava is the nature and symbolic expression of Śiva who is the bestower of both enjoyment and liberation. The śaiva discipline duly received through initiation and observed with all sincerity extinguishes the various sins and imparts the feet of Śiva. Such Yogī is known as Vīra Māheśvara who is none else but Śiva himself. By constantly observing all the auspicious deeds the devotee develops intense reverence for Śiva and takes His refuge. By firmly and solely concentrating on Śiva, the devotee attains liberation by assuming Śiva-consciousness. While observing forgiveness, peace, contentment, truthfulness, non-covetousness, restrained life, Śiva-consciousness, renunciation, smearing of the sacred ash and abandoning all kinds of attachments, devotee should contemplate the whole world of movables and immovables permeated with Liṅga.

Thirteenth chapter describes the most important rite of Liṅga-worship in Vīra-śaivism. The special feature of Vīra-śaivism, otherwise named as Liṅgāyat śaivism, is the procedure of worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga on the palm of the left hand. It is called the lotus palm seat (कर पंकज पीठ). Iṣṭaliṅga is installed in the middle of the palm of the left hand, then the worship is being performed with prescribed procedure. This palm-seat is the impartor of the four puruṣārthas— Dharma, Artha, Kāma and Mokṣa. Here is a short discussion about the various seats and their relative results as advocated by Pārameśvarāgama.

The seat made of stone bestows son and wealth, of iron accords all kinds of attainments, of cloths provides all kinds of good results and the seat made of leaves accords gold. But the seat made of wood, earth, leather, blanket and grass cause various kinds of suffering and disturbances. Lotus-palm is considered to be the supreme—

तत्र सर्वोत्तम देवि पीठार्थं कर पङ्कजम् ॥१६.१३॥

Devotee should contemplate the five fingers as five petals, the middle of the palm as the centre of the lotus and the lines as the pollen. He should also contemplate the five fingers as the five forms of Śiva (Īśāna etc.). The centre of the palm is to be meditated as the Goddess Pārvatī. Five fingers starting from the thumb to the little finger are named gradually as— Gārhapatya, Dakṣiṇāgni, Āhvanīya, Samya, Āsathya (गार्हपत्य, दक्षिणाग्नि, आह्वनीय, सम्य, आसथ्य). Indra etc. eight protectors are to be contemplated on eight directions starting from the east four goddesses, namely, Durgā, Maheśvarī, Caṇḍī, Bhadrakālī are to be meditated upon the four directions. Devotee should imagine the encircling four directions and Gaṇeśa, Baṭuk, Vīrbhadra and Caṇḍa should be meditated upon. Nandīśa, Ṛti, Bhr̥ṅgī and Tuṇḍī are the four names of the Nāyakas i.e. courtiers and they are to be contemplated in Ājneya (आज्ञेय), Ṛti in Īśāna, Bhr̥ṅgī in Nair̥tya (नैऋत्य), Tuṇḍī in Vāyavīya (वायवीय), direction. Mountains like Śrīśailam, rivers like Gaṅgā, Kalpa tree, gem Cintāmaṇi, Kāmdhenu, four Vedas and Purāṇas, Sāṅkhya-yoga philosophies, Dharma-śāstras — all these auspicious and pure things are to be contemplated and the Iṣṭaliṅga is to be worshipped in the middle of It. Starting from the elbows to the wrist which is like a stem of the lotus on which five faced Lord is to be meditated upon. The glory of Lotus-palm has been sung by the Lord Himself thus—

Proper procedure for the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga has been described by Lord Himself. Contemplating on the aforesaid auspicious things on the lotus-palm, Iṣṭaliṅga is to be installed within and worship should be performed with the oblation etc. to the best of capacity reciting the Pañcākṣara hymn in a sitting position till the completion of the worship. Devotee should meditate the Iṣṭaliṅga as immanent in the whole universe being without beginning, middle and end. Because of the intense devotion of the worshipper of the devotee God resides on the lotus-palm-seat out of Grace.

भक्तीच्छावशतो भक्तपाणिपङ्कज संस्थितम्॥१३.४३॥

It has been said by Lord that performance of ablution with intense devotion is superior to the ablution by the water of the oceans.

It has also been uttered that japa (recitation of hymn), praising the glory (stotra) and paying obeisance (Praṇāmādi) should also be offered while worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga on the lotus-palm-seat.

Immense is the result produced by worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga on the lotus-palm seat only. But the Iṣṭaliṅga must be bestowed by Guru through proper procedure. It is to be noted here that worship of Iṣṭaliṅga and meditating the aforesaid auspicious things within Iṣṭaliṅga and Iṣṭaliṅga permeating in everything is very significant. By constant meditation on Iṣṭaliṅga, devotee thus identifies himself with the God manifesting the universe. Then devotee is able to ascend to Prāṇaliṅgī sthala. The lotus-palm-seat exists in one's own body and this body is the abode of all deities and pilgrimages.

पवित्राणां पवित्रं तत् पाणिपङ्कजमर्चनम्॥१३.८०॥

Pañcākṣara hymn is the Supreme among all hymns—

यथा मन्त्रेषु सर्वेषु मम पञ्चाक्षरः परः॥१३.८०॥

God asserts that as devotion to him is supreme among the devotions to all deities, so also worship on the lotus -palm-seat is the supreme among all types of worship.

The transcendental Being is divided into two, namely, the Liṅgasthala and Aṅgasthala. One and the same spirit divides itself into two, as the worshipper and worshipped to realise the real nature of the self. So also, the power is also divided into Śakti and Bhakti. Śakti is that mystic power which is descending and aims at uniting the soul with the God by removing the bonds of the soul. Thus the one Śakti element flowing in two channels named as Śakti and Bhakti causes the ascending order of jīva from Bhaktasthala to Prāṇaliṅgī sthala through Māheśvara and Prasādīsthala. Devotee endowed with Śiva-consciousness is enlightened with the luminous Liṅga in his heart is known as Prāṇaliṅgī Sādhaka. This, Prāṇaliṅga is meditated upon on the six centres of Mulādhāra etc. then in the Brahmaṇḍa thousand petalled lotus is to be contemplated and uncaused Śiva is to be adorned on the seat. The accomplishment of such meditation is known as Śivayoga-Samādhi.

But this is not the end. For realising the consciousness-bliss, Sādhaka takes refuge in the highest blissful enjoyment with 'blissful devotion'. Ānanda Bhakti indicates the state of Śaraṇasthala, through which Sādhaka finally reaches the highest state known as 'Samarasa-bhakta'- the state of 'Śivoham'. This is the state of complete unison or identity with God transcending the duality of Aṅga and Liṅga.

Thus, the process of journey that started from the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga contemplating the whole universe on the lotus-palm-seat ends with the realisation of the consciousness-bliss of the Supreme of Sādhak's ownself. The process of Liṅga-worship begins with the contemplation of gross-elements on the lotus-palm of one's ownself and then culminates in the identification of his self-consciousness with that of the Supreme self. Liṅgāṅgasāmarasya is the end of life according to Vīraśaivism. So, the journey is from the contemplation of the gross elements through the principles of subtler and subtlest to the pure Being that transcends all relativity.

Thus, the Liṅga-worship, in Vīraśaivism, with intense devotion and unflinching concentration is the means to an end. The fulfilment of goal is possible only through the Grace of Guru through Dikṣā.

Fourteenth chapter continues with the characteristics of the Liṅga which is to be worshipped as per the instruction of the preceptor. Liṅga is of two kinds, viz. differentiated and non-differentiated. Śivayogī who has attained high spiritual level worships undifferentiated Liṅga (akhaṇḍa) which is the Supreme, of the nature of pure consciousness and bliss, where as, other yogīs who are still progressing towards spiritual aim should worship the differentiated Liṅga (Sakhṇḍa) and meditate on God residing in his heart. Iṣṭaliṅga worshipped on the lotus-palm-seat is called Akhaṇḍa where as the Liṅgas other than that is known as Sakhṇḍa. Liṅgas bestow different kinds of results in accordance with the capabilities of the devotees and in this regard devotion is the most important feature. Some specifications have been given for the size and shape of Iṣṭaliṅga. The length of the upper and the lower portion of the base of the liṅga should be equal to the breadth and height of the Liṅga. The size of the Somasūtra Liṅga (Pañcasūtraliṅga) should be equal to the aforesaid dimension. The dimension of the Liṅga should be ascertained according to the dimension of the base and upper portion of the seat. One fourth portion of the Liṅga is to be installed into the base and both the Liṅga and the base are to be attached with the Aṣṭabandha. After completing the procedure of Aṣṭabandha, consecration should be performed. Devotee should perform certain prescribed rites as the atonement in case of the destruction of Liṅga and recite Pañcākṣara hymn for twelve thousand times. Proper procedure of worship of Iṣṭaliṅga alongwith the vessels and ingredients have been stated in detail. For all kinds of prescribed injunctions and prohibitions, the instruction of Guru is the only imperative, since Guru is inherent in everything. So, the devotee should ever take refuge in Guru. Sincere remembrance of Guru burns all sins and imparts the desirables. Both for the attainment of knowledge and the enjoyment of worldly pleasures, one should always remember the divine Guru. As Guru is one with the Supreme and an embodiment of all divine hymns, so the devotee should fully surrender to Guru for the fulfilment of aspirations. The syllable 'gu' stands for the intense darkness and 'ru' for the eradication of the darkness of delusion or ignorance. Such is the glory of Guru which is truly beyond description.

Fifteenth chapter deals with the classification of the Vīraśaiva sect. One should be aware of the mystery of Vīraśaiva religion, otherwise he will not be able to cross the turmoil of the ocean of life. Guru is the only source through whom the light of knowledge pierces to the darkness of the ignorance of the disciple. So, devotee should enter into the discipline of Vīraśaiva religion and ponder over it by listening to the essence of the scriptures from the mouth of divine Guru. Three kinds of Vīraśaiva discipline in accordance with the eligibility of the worshipper has been enunciated and they are Sāmānya Vīraśaiva, Viśeṣa Vīraśaiva and Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva in which the later is superior to the former and Nirābhārī being the supermost. Truthfulness, compassion for all beings, non-violence, sublimation of the sensuous propensities, repression of the evil tendencies, generosity, worshipping God with undivided devotion, practising contemplation of Śiva-consciousness, possessing intense love for all other devotees, serving Guru with devotion are the main characteristics of the Sāmānya Vīraśaiva.

Viśeṣa Vīraśaiva devotee always resides outside the village and enters the village only for accepting alms. He avoids the company of women and never indulges in idle gossip with the ordinary run of people. While entering into a house for alms he observes silence and makes his presence felt by blowing conch shell or ringing the bell. He never keeps himself busy in useless activities and avoids the troubles caused by the provocation of others. This Viśeṣa Vīraśaiva devotee ever remains engrossed in worshipping, meditating and remembering Śiva and abandons all kinds of desires, sensuous pleasures and greedyness. He always observes truthfulness and maintains compassion for all beings. The saint who has established himself firmly in the discipline of Viśeṣa Vīraśaiva religion may be eligible to enter into the next higher stage of Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva, the apex of all spiritual disciplines. Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva resides in forest or strictly in a secluded place. He never shows any inclination or cordiality to anybody nor cares for regard or disregard praise or reproof, rather remains absorbed in the meditation of Śiva and observe asceticism in the principle of life. If unfortunately Iṣṭaliṅga is lost, then Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva should end his life as he never remains without Iṣṭaliṅga. On such decision he attains Śivahood as Śiva is the benefactor of all. Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva is totally an egoless person and so the virtuous results obtained from his service of Śiva is eternal and bestows supreme bliss on him. Devotee should enter into the order of Nirābhārī Turyavīra after having full consideration of the teachings of the scriptures, preaching of Guru and his own determination. On accomplishing this spiritual state with devotion, devotee attains complete liberation.

Six-fold Liṅgas have been described in the Sixteenth Chapter. These are 1. Immovable, 2. Movable, 3. Immovable-movable, 4. Movable-immovable, 5. Immovable-immovable and 6. Movable-movable. Liṅga made of stone installed in a temple after performing the consecration with the procedure of 'Aṣṭabandha' is called the immovable Liṅga. Movable Liṅgas are made of crystal, stone etc. and worshipped alongwith the Sun, Goddess, Gaṇapati and Viṣṇu by other than Vīraśaivas also. Liṅgas which is worn by śaiva devotee and made of the desired dimension (Pañcasūtra liṅga) is stated as Immovable-movable Liṅga. Liṅga named movable-immovable is considered to be excellent for the worship of Sāmānya Vīraśaiva as the body is assumed as Liṅga by them and is worshipped as such. To him the whole universe of movables and immovables and everything is imbibed in the Liṅga. So, the devotee should worship Śiva in the Liṅga since He eternally remains there. A true devotee of Vīraśaiva order does not discriminate between the world, Liṅga and body as the whole universe is the body of the Liṅga and the Liṅga is immanent as the soul of the universe. The corporal body of the devotee is also the body of the Liṅga. So, an ardent Vīraśaiva devotee serves the God as the Lord of the universe contemplating the unison of the universe, Liṅga and body. Śiva is the all pervasive Liṅga, omniscient, inspirer and guide. Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva should perceive the unity of Śiva and the universe. He should always maintain the equilibrium of mind by not discriminating the persons of lower and higher status and not indulging in the feeling of competition, envy and condemnation towards anybody. Turyavīraśaiva need not perform the ritualistic worship, rather he should worship the self by offering his own self meditating on the idea that his own soul and the soul of the universe are one and the same. The measurement of the Liṅga should be half of the size of the height and the measurement of the Soma-sūtra should be half of the breadth. This is named as Pañca-sūtra Liṅga. Liṅga possessing white colour imparts knowledge, red colour encharms, blue colour destroys enemy, yellow colour grants desired results and black colour is said to fulfil all desires. Such is the glory of Liṅga. Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva should lead a strict disciplined way of life. He should neither discriminate on the basis of caste, nor should he be jealous to anybody. He should never accept food by a non-liṅgī.

Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva should ever remain engrossed in meditation, yoga and deliberation on the scriptures. Observance of the rites and rituals of the religion is not obligatory for the Nirābhārī śaivas. Everybody should adore him as he remains one with Śiva. He is adept in yogic postures, intense meditation (Samādhi) with firm determination and maintains equality between desirables and undesirables and contemplate the whole world, self and Śiva as inseparable. One who worships Turyavīraśaiva becomes free of all sins. If a householder desires happiness, he should worship Turyavīraśaiva who is the apex among all the wearers of Liṅga.

Five-fold classification of śaiva order, namely, Śuddhaśaiva, Miśraśaiva, Mārgaśaiva, Vīraśaiva and Avāntaraśaiva have been described in the Seventeenth Chapter. Brāhmin Vīraśaivas who maintain crest on his head, wears the sacred thread, Iṣṭaliṅga, Rudrākṣa, besmears his whole body with the sacred ash, remains engaged in performing rites and rituals related to Brāhmins, is adept in observing the dispositions of śaivas, ever remains engrossed in worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga are named as Śuddhaśaivas. Miśraśaivas are those who belong to the family of Kṣtriya, Vaiśya and Śudra and perform pilgrimage and other religious rites in accordance with their customs, are possessed of good conduct and adept in worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga, Mārgaśaivas are sometimes Kings who protect the people, destroy the enemies, adore the brahmins and worship Śiva. They also maintain all the rules and regulations of their class along with the observance of all the disciplines of Śaivas. The śaiva devotees whose head is clean shaven, ever recites the original hymns, wear Rudrākṣa and saffron clothes and besmear the sacred ash on the body are known as Avāntara śaivas. The Liṅgīs who accept drinks and food everywhere and from everybody are regarded as Mahāśaivas. Those who besmear the sacred ash, wear Rudrākṣa and remain engaged in worshipping Liṅga with the recitation of six syllables hymn are called the Aṇuśaivas. Barber, washerman, prostitute, potter, oil extractor, business community, Śudra and outcaste, all may belong to the category of Avāntaraśaiva. Among all the Vīraśaivas, Turyavīras are the apex of all, wise, free from all desires, sustain their lives on the alms and are known as Carajaṅgas — the Turyavīra. Forgiveness, peace, contentment, truthfulness non-covetedness, control over senses, knowledge of Śiva, renunciation, smearing of sacred ash, and the cessation of desires are the ten unique virtues possessed by the Turyavīraśaiva as described in the scriptures. Then a detailed procedure for preparing and besmearing the sacred ashes — ‘Bhasma uddhūlan’ as stated in the Śaivāgamas have been described clearly. The supreme energy born out of Rudrāgni is known as sacred ash. The devotee whose whole body is glorified by smearing the sacred ash always remains powerful. ‘Tripuṇḍrak’ (three horizontal lines drawing on the forehead by the three fingers) drawn with sacred ash illumines the forehead. Evil spirits, demons and diseases vanish all around from the proximity of the devotee who has smeared the sacred ash. As it makes a man glorified, it is called ‘bhasit’, it extinguishes all sins, so it is named as ‘Bhasma’, it imparts prosperity, so, it is called the ‘bhūti’ and as it provides protection, it is known as ‘Rakṣā’. Vīramāheśvara who wears garland of Rudrākṣa in his neck, draws ‘Tripuṇḍrak’ of the sacred ash on the forehead, chant the original hymn and wears Iṣṭaliṅga in his neck is none but Śiva himself. The house holder, after knowing the arrival of the renunciated yogī, should respectfully offer the food and water and pay obeisance considering him as Śiva himself. Remaining absorbed in worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga, chanting the Śiva Pañcākṣarī hymn and engaging himself in conversing about the glory of Śiva are the special features of the great Māheśvara. Giving trouble to the body for the purpose of Śiva is known as ‘Tapa’, worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga is the real duty, reciting Pañcākṣara, Praṇava-hymn and the Rudrādhyāyī is the real recitation, meditation of Śiva is the real meditation— these are the sacrifices for the Vīramāheśvara.

After explaining the duties to be performed by the śaiva devotee in his life time, Niryaṇayāga — the last rite to be observed at the time of his death, has also been described in the eighteenth chapter. Devotee should continuously remember Śiva and chant the original hymn, wear Iṣṭaliṅga, Rudrākṣa and smear the sacred ash devotedly meditate on Śiva with full awareness during the time of expiry. After the departure of the Liṅgī, his disciple or the son should perform all the last rite duties. He should worship Iṣṭaliṅga after taking bath, besmearing sacred ash and wearing the Rudrākṣa. The body of the deceased Liṅgī should be consecrated with the pure water, sacred ash is to be sprinkled all over the body, kept in a clean place in sitting position and is to be adorned with the Rudrākṣa, flowers, incenses, garland, silken clothes. Thereafter the deceased should be worshipped like an Iṣṭaliṅga. A strong carrier with three or four doors along with a high pinnacle is to be prepared for carrying the dead body which should be carried by the other Liṅgīs reciting the Pañcākṣara. Instruments like Tūrya, Bherī and Mrdaṅga etc. should be played along with the procession of elephants, horses etc. A pit for samādhi is to be dug in accordance with the length and breadth of the deceased near a hill, in a garden, in a forest or in the proximity of Śiva temple. There should be space for keeping and kindling the lamps inside the pit. Then the body is to be lowered inside the pit and after putting sufficient salt the samādhi should be filled up with the earth. A samādhi at least of the double in size of the pit is to be constructed and a Liṅga made of earth should be installed in the middle of the samādhi. This provisional Liṅga is named as 'Preta-liṅga' which is neither worshipped nor prayed. After the observance of the last rite, a new Liṅga is installed which should be worshipped regularly. A detailed process of worship of Iṣṭaliṅga along with other deities has been prescribed in this chapter. Other Liṅgīs and devotees are also to be adorned and pleased by offering many a good things to them. The performer of Niryaṇayāga is obliged to satisfy anybody who demands food. The performer of the Nirayāṇayāga attains the closest unison with Śiva.

Indian religion strictly observes the most obligatory and important relation between the preceptor and the disciple (गुरु शिष्य परम्परा). In Vīraśaiva religion Guru is he who fastens the Iṣṭaliṅga in the neck of the disciple at the time of initiation and preaches the Pañcākṣarī hymn. Disciple is he who is initiated and strictly follows the instruction of Guru. Thus, the tradition goes on and the principle of Guru prevails. According to śaiva religion all the bearers of the Iṣṭaliṅga are of the nature of Śiva. Guru is undoubtedly the all pervasive Lord of the universe. Liṅga is the sustainer of the universe, so Śiva is the only Guru of all. Devotees attain the spiritual status in accordance with their devotion and eligibility. The house holder attains the sphere of God (Sālokya), devotee attains the proximity of God (Sāmipya), Dhyānaliṅgī attains the closest unison (Sāyujya) and the Jñānayogī attains liberation. The disciple should adhere to the tenets of religion on the samādhi of Guru. A canopy is to be constructed on the samādhi. If possible a beautiful pavilion with garden, pond, cowshed, dispensary, protected place for the animals and birds and sanctuary of flowers are to be made. Other beneficial organisations for the society surely provide good results. Proper arrangements should be made for satiating the hunger of all the spirits, animals etc. Useful and significant trees and flowers like Pipal, Bilva, Āmalak, Tulsi, Droṇa, Śami, Apāmārg, Dūrvā, Karavīr etc. should be implanted around the place. Beggars, orphans, poors and donation seekers should be satisfied. There should not be any discrimination of caste and creed in and around the samādhi campus. All the seekers for charity, weak, humble and specially Liṅgīs should be pleased with the food, clothes and water etc. Discourses on the Vīraśaiva religion should be delivered by the wise for the benefit of the people. Financially non-privileged person should observe the religious disciplines with physical endeavour and intense devotion. The day of union of Guru with the Liṅgī is to be regarded as a very auspicious day and the devotee should donate the Liṅgas, caskets, cloths and sacred Śiva-thread. For the attainment of liberation and Śivahood devotion towards Guru, śaiva principles and śaiva scriptures is the only means. Having compassion for all, abandoning envy, considering and treating every being equal, discarding enmity for all beings and worshipping samādhi of Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva with respect, devotee attains Śivahood by removing all obstacles of the physical world. Devotee may also attain liberation by besmearing sacred ash, putting on the Rudrākṣa garland and worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga. Thus worship of and service to the samādhi have been attached immense value as the observance of worship is the destroyer of sin and impartor of liberation.

Various kinds of initiation have been enumerated in the Twentieth Chapter of the scripture. Though the process and the implication of initiation is a secret matter but the eligible seeker is authorised to know and so he should be endowed with the spiritual knowledge and its procedure to keep the tradition alive. Unauthorised person should never be empowered by the teacher, as a non eligible person is unable to bear the spiritual knowledge and its power. So, Guru examine the disciple and only shower the Grace to one who is fully competent, calm, quiet, respectful to Guru, theist, pure hearted, seeker of liberation, conqueror of senses, modest and devotee. Three kinds of initiation have been prescribed for all the three sects of Vīraśaiva discipline. The wise attains the equilibrium of mind by acquiring the insight of the scriptures, preachings of Guru and self-determination. Devotee discards all kinds of wealth and remains non-attached with the bondages of the world, possesses discriminatory knowledge of real and unreal and is endowed with six virtues of sublimation and repression etc. Seeker of mokṣa realises God as the Supreme and Lord of the universe. Considering everything as the manifestation of his own self, living in a lonely place, Śivayogī should constantly contemplate Śiva internally and externally. Keeping control over his mind and speech he should perceive the whole universe as the manifestation of Śiva. There are three categories of Vīraśaivas viz. Sāmānya, Viśeṣa and Turya. The initiation of first two is performed with the three pitchers installing one in the middle and the other two in the north and south. They should be consecrated with the hymns from the Śatarudrīya, Nidhan, Pañcabrahma, Pañcākṣara and Praṇava. The initiation of Turyavīraśaiva is to be performed with the five pitchers. The hymn of Śatarudra, Pañcākṣara, Pañcānuvāk and Praṇava etc are to be recited. Consecration during the worship of Śiva should be performed chanting the eleven Anuvāk, Śatarudriya and Pañcākṣara hymn. Turyavīraśaiva may perform the Nitya and Naimittika karma (regular and occasional deeds) without attachment and desire for the result. He resides in a lonely place renouncing all the objects of enjoyment and abandoning all desires, is calm, quiete, observes the vow of silence, having conquered all the senses, remembering and contemplating God, practices Prāṇāyāmayoga related to inhalation and exhalation. Turyavīraśaiva should maintain purity of temperament, feel equanimity with all and remain engrossed in contemplating Śiva regularly. After igniting Śivafire, oblation is to be poured by reciting Pañcākṣara with Praṇava. On getting this special initiation Turyavīraśaiva has neither the sense of doership nor is he obliged to perform any duty, nor he is desirous of any results. Yogī should discard the Siddhis (accomplishments). Abandoning the aspirations of the empirical world he should contemplate the whole universe as his own self.

The yogī whose mind is restrained, not tired by rigorous labour, happy, free from all propensities, determined and ever blissful, should follow this path which is the only way for liberation. The devotee who takes refuge in Turyavīraśaiva order after gradually crossing all the stages of the Vīraśaiva discipline commencing from Anādiśaiva stage, surely attains liberation. For the wise, gradual ascendance in all stages is not essential. Capable person may proceed further superseding various stages. Perseverence of mind, detachment, wisdom, devotion, firmness in worshipping Śiva, reverence, truthfulness are the qualities possessed by such devotees. The devotee who intends to attain unison with Śiva should always take refuge in Guru and adopt the path of knowledge and action as the means. This has been said to be the only way for spiritual progress.

An enquiry regarding the nature of knowledge and yoga has been put forward in the Twentyfirst Chapter. One who is a devoted theist, tranquil and acquires the discriminatory knowledge of reality and unreality by studying scriptures, from the preaching of Guru and by his own adequate firm understanding, arrives at the truth that Śiva alone is the supreme, is only authorised to receive the mystery of Jñāna and Yoga. Śiva is both beginningless and endless. He exists prior to the beginning, sustenance and end of all creation. Remaining formless, He is adorned with all forms, unknowable, smaller than the smallest and bigger than the biggest. He is uncaused, non-dual, unmanifested but at the same time basis of all manifestations, beyond everything, inherent in all beings, luminous, of the nature of truth, consciousness and all pervasiveness. Paramaśiva is of the nature of luminosity, consciousness, existence and devoid of all evil propensities. He transcends all means of knowledges, again remains unaffected and is unique locus of everything. He is indicated by the supreme syllable like 'tattvamasi' etc. One, eternal self-consistent, unblemished, unthinkable, devoid of three guṇas (Sattva, Raja and Tama), though non-attached but related to all, being the inner self of all beings, Śiva is the enjoyer, enjoyed and the enjoyment. He is not the subject of vision. Wise who tries to know by contemplating Him in mind, attains immortality. He is unperturbed, immutable, uncaused cause of everything. By knowing the nature of Śiva, as stated above, the devotee certainly achieves the state of firmness and tranquility of mind which is termed as knowledge. Śiva is Rudra, Sadāśiva, Hari, Brahmā, Kāla, Jīva, Guṇas, cosmic Buddhi, ego, mind, citta, space, air, fire etc. are all the manifestations of Śiva. He is also the sacrifice, sacrificial rites and oblation. Yakṣa, demon, spirits, animals, birds, worms, insects, stars etc. all are the manifestations of Śiva only (movable and immovable). The devotee who realises that He is the enjoyer, enjoyed and also the enjoyment, is liberated. The power of discrimination between the truth and non-truth leads to yoga. One who has accomplished both knowledge and yoga attains Śiva. The whole creation is the manifestations of Śiva-śakti. Śiva united with Śakti which is non-different from Śiva, is manifested as the whole creation by remaining unblemished and non-attached. Puruṣa seems to be an enjoyer on account of its impact of beginningless 'avidyā', the principle of cosmic ignorance. So, only a seer - the knower of Truth can make him realise, as the puruṣa himself is unable to acquire. Delusion of māyā can affect only the limited beings not the unlimited Śiva. This mysterious power is reflected as names, forms and actions always remains under the reign of Śiva. Unique is the glory of Śiva that He is the soul of the world and the world is His body, the manifestation.

The glory of devotion has been stated in the Twenty second Chapter. No religious rites whatsoever is able to impart the goal if it is devoid of devotion. Devotion purifies all evils and takes the devotee beyond everything. Devotee who is immersed in the self-less unconditional devotion is superior to one who always remains engaged in rigorous penance, performs rites and rituals. Devotee is the supreme among all of the manifestations. Devotion to Śiva sanctifies even the despicable sinner. It is the impartor of four Puruṣārthas along with liberation. It has been stated that devotion is dearer to God than anything else. The devotee who is humble, self-controlled, tranquil, perceiver of equality in all beings, does not expect anything from anyone is considered to be of the nature of Śiva. Devotion bestows inexhaustible results. Though the Karavīr flower, Bilva leaves, Dūrvā, Tulsi leaves and Droṇa flower are very dear to Śiva but if devotee is unable to offer the above mentioned ingredients, he should devotedly remember Śiva by his thought, speech and action. Then only he can attain Śiva. Devotion itself is the supreme attainment. Devotion is panacea for all the miseries of the world as it fully redeems the sufferers from the pangs of the world. Devotee should take refuge in devotion unconditionally without being perturbed. The final declaration of the scripture is that the devotion is the ultimate goal. Remaining engrossed in constant remembrance, meditation, prayer, worship and intense love of Śiva with action, thought and speech in all the states of waking, dreaming and deep sleep.

Twenty third is the concluding chapter that explains the mystery of the formless God becoming the substratum of the universe. All the beings and non-beings of the world are subject to mutation and attachment. How can a detached self-contented God remain associated with a self who is attached with the world — enquires Goddess Pārvati. Śiva replies that He supports the whole universe and beings without touching them as the space bears the air. Even if being perfect and immutable, Śiva is the matrix, the basis of everything. As the growth of the grass on the hill are carried out by the movement of the cloud, rains and the sun, so also the possessiveness, agency, causality etc. are all the assumption of Mahāśakti of Śiva. As earth is the material cause of the pot etc. despite of various names, forms and functions, ear ring made of gold ever possesses the shining of the gold, so also Śiva is the substratum—the waveless ocean of bliss in which the universe of names and forms emerges and submerges. This universe can not be self-caused as it is based on the cycle of birth and death. So, the omnipresence of the eternal is inevitable.

Now, it is my pleasant duty to remember and acknowledge the affection and help of my wellwishers rendered to me in fulfilling the mission of studying the scriptures. First of all I bow unto the feet of His Holiness Shri 1008 Jagadguru Dr. Chandrashekhar Shivacharya Mahaswamiji, the 86th Pontiff of the Kashi Vishwaradhya Jnanasimhasana, Jangamawadimath, Varanasi and most humbly pray for his blessings. I gratefully acknowledge the help and suggestion provided by Pandit Vrajavallabh Dwivedi, Director, Shaiva Bharati Shodha Pratisthanam, Jangamawadimath, Varanasi and extend my most sincere regard to the eminent scholar. My heartiest thanks are due to Dr. G. C. Kendadamath of the Central Library, B.H.U., Varanasi, who has constantly extended his sincere co-operation by way of valuable suggestion to accomplish the book in the present form. Last but not the least my affectionate thanks are due to Shri Chidananda O. Hiremath (Kasagi) and Shri Rajshekhar G. Hiremath for their sincere effort in composing the book. Lastly I gratefully remember the help and inspirations imparted by my well wishers and friends that have enabled me in rendering a little service to promote the cause of Śaivism. Learned scholars may find many mistakes for which I beg to be excused and humbly seek their suggestions for further rectification.

I pray Lord Viśvanāth to pardon me for the errors and omissions which may have occurred in translating this sacred scripture into English. Namaḥ Śivāya.

Chapter - 1

THE NATURE OF VARIOUS DOCTRINES

Auspicious Prayer

I bow unto the Lord of the mountains, Maheśa, whose lotus feet are adored by the daughter of Himālaya (Pārvatī), Dvirānan (Gaṇapati), Agnibhū (Kārtikeya), Nandi, Bhṛīṅgi, Rīṭi and who is the wearer of the skins of elephant and tiger, adorned with the serpent, moon and having five faces (1). I regularly pay obeisance and bow unto the supreme One among the gaṇas (Gaṇapati), the son of Umā, adept in bestowing boons and who bears in his hand the Pāśa, Aṅkuśa, Śiṅgā (the bestower of all desires), the bright Bījpūr fruit, adorned with huge divine bright matted hair and ornamented with the thin line of moon on the corner of the forehead (2). Once upon a time Goddess Pārvatī, who is served by the Siddhas and Gandharvas, the abode of all benign qualities, seated on the top of the auspicious, beautiful, solitary mountain of Kailāśa, the

Nature of Various Doctrines

O Māhadeva, the Lord of the lords, wearer of moon on the forehead, bearer of the Ganges in matted hair ! Please explain, in detail, the nature of all the doctrines (5). What are the different types and characteristics of those doctrines ? Kindly enlighten me regarding the duties and procedures of the atonement and their results (6).

God replies –

O Goddess ! please listen ! Now, I shall describe the characteristics of various doctrines, by knowing them man attains liberation and becomes Śiva Himself (7).

Saugata, Vaidika, Saura, Vaiṣṇava Doctrines

Firstly, the doctrines of Saugata which has fivefold divisions, namely, Bauddha, Saugata, Cārvāka, Jaina and Arhat (8). O dear ! The doctrine of 'Śūnya' is the most important among all of them. 'Tāre tuttāra tāre svāhā'<sup>1</sup> is the supreme hymn they all recite (9). O Īśāni ! the vedic principles are in conformity with the Vedas, among them Brahma-Gāyatrī is the common popular hymn that everybody chants regularly (10). More important is the doctrine of 'Saura' accepting the Gayātrī hymn bearing the characteristics of Saur. O Goddess ! This again is divided into five, namely, Vaikartan, Āditya, Pauṣṇa, Mārtaṇḍya and Saura. Sūrya is the supreme among the all and so is known as the 'Adhipati' — the lord of all divinities (11-12). O the supreme Goddess !

 The Vaiṣṇava doctrine is superior to the above. I am describing its fivefold categories to you (13). O Goddess ! Gopāla, Nārasimha, Rāma, Kṛṣṇa and Nārāyaṇa — all these Vaiṣṇava sects chant the

Seven-fold Śaiva Doctrines

O the daughter of the mountain ! Now I am illustrating the supreme Śaiva doctrine of mine consisting of sevenfold divisions including the virtuous Vīraśaiva sects etc. (15). Vīraśaiva, Anādiśaiva, Ādiśaiva, Anuśaiva, Mahāśaiva and the sixth one is known as the Yogaśaiva (16). The seventh one is the famous Jñānaśaiva. Vīraśaiva sect is the supreme among the all; other doctrines are considered to be the various aspects of the same (17).

Gāṇapatya Doctrine

Apart from the above, there are seven more schools, namely, Gāṇapatya, Vīrabhadra, Bhairava, Śarabha, Nandikeśa, Kaumāra and Paiśāca<sup>2</sup> (18). O dear ! there are eight categories of Gāṇapatya, seven of Vīrabhadra, eight of Bhairava, five of Śarabha and three a each of Nandikeśa, Kaumāra and Paiśāca schools (19-20). Among the above mentioned schools starting from Saugata to Vaiṣṇava, latter is superior to the earlier and My Śaiva doctrine is the supreme among the all (21).

Six-fold Doctrines

As per the six divisions of the philosophical schools, there are six schools of Tantra, namely, Vīraśaiva, Vaiṣṇava, Śākta, Saura, Vināyaka (Gāṇapatya) and Kāpāla. Adherer should observe the disciplinary path of his own Tantra (22-23).

Mixing of Various Doctrines Prohibited

There are four divisions of Śaiva schools, namely, Śaiva, Pāśupata, Soma and Lākula. Followers of these schools should strictly observe their own in pure form without mixing each other (24). First is Anādiśaiva, second Ādiśaiva, third Mahāśaiva, fourth Aṇuśaiva, fifth Avāntaraśaiva, sixth Yogaśaiva and the seventh one is Vīraśaiva. Adherers of the above mentioned schools should observe the religious disciplines of their own (25-26). The religious rites duly advocated in various disciplines should never be intermingled. Gopāla, Pañcarātra, Nārasimha, Vaiṣṇava and Nārāyaṇa are the five-fold schools that should never be mixed with each other. Four divisions of Śāktāgamas, namely, Nityā, Anityā, Śābarā and Śakti also should not be intermingled rather observe separately (27-29). There are four divisions of Saura sect, namely, Brahmā, Indra, Sāvana and Sūrya. The deities of the above schools also should never be intermingled. Arhat, Cārvāka, Bauddha and Jaina are the four heterodox schools (29-30). Likewise there are Vināyaka doctrines that also should never be mixed up with each other (30-31). Nirīśvara, Seśvara, Kāpāla and Bhairava are the four divisions of the Kāpālīka school that also should not be mingled up. Vīraśaiva sect is considered to be the best among all the above mentioned schools (31-32).

Pañcākṣara Hymn

O the supreme Goddess ! Śaiva Pañcākṣara is the hymn advised in my Vīraśaiva system. O the daughter of the mountain ! I shall illustrate the procedure to invoke it, please listen to it carefully (33). 'Javi' (ज) is to be put first, then 'Smara' (म) should be kept and followed by 'Marut' (ः). Pārśva (श) is to be placed keeping the Ādi (इ) before ; 'Dhanu' (अ) should be added with 'Varuṇa' (व) and then 'Ya' (य) is the first latter of 'Vanhi' (रेफ) is to be put at last. Thus the hymn 'namah śivāya' assumes the form, which, O Goddess ! is the form of Śiva and is common to all Śaiva sects (34-35).

Enquiries and Replies Regarding Relative Hierarchy Among Various Doctrines

O the Lord of the lords ! are the schools described by you of equal status or there is relative hierarchy among them ? O Candraśekhara ! if there is any difference, which one is the supreme among the all (36). O Lord ! you have not mentioned anything about the Śākta discipline whether it is superior, inferior or equal to others. Kindly tell me now which one is the best of all (37).

God replies —

O the supreme Goddess ! all sects are great and unique in their own way since liberation is the only goal of all. I am illustrating to you the salient features of all sects (38)

Glory of Vīraśaiva Discipline

O Pārvatī ! much expenses, carefulness and labour are needed in all other doctrines, but great and benign results are easily achieved in the path advocated by Śaivism. There is no doubt in it (39). O Śive !

now, I shall describe to you the doctrine of Vīraśaivism which is the supreme among the all. All are not eligible for it. Śākta sect is easy for all (40). Vīraśaiva is the only means that provides enjoyment and immediate liberation. So, this sect of mine is the best among the all as I am the supreme of all (41). There is no other doctrine in the three worlds like Vīraśaivism as it is the bestower of all kinds of enjoyments, virtues and the closest union (Sāyujya) with Śiva (42). As there is no man like me, no woman like you, so also, there is no sect like Vīraśaivism (43). If a person takes refuge in Vīraśaivism after committing hundreds of sins, knowingly or unknowingly, becomes Śiva Himself, there is no doubt in it (44). Vīraśaivite is neither afraid of sin nor thinks himself special while performing virtuous deeds because he himself is the determiner and the controller of the virtues and vices (45). O Goddess of the divinities ! one who is initiated in accordance with the Vīraśaiva discipline, the attendants of Yama run away from him (46).

Glory of Wearing Sacred Ash, Rudrākṣa and Liṅga

The sinners also undoubtedly achieve immediate freedom from all kinds of sins on beholding the Śivayogī having besmeared the sacred ash and wearing Rudrākṣa and Iṣṭaliṅga (47). O Goddess ! The person whose forehead is besmeared with the sacred ash and an Iṣṭaliṅga, the form of Mine, is tied up on the neck and who has borne the Rudrākṣa on the body, undoubtedly becomes Śiva (48). One who aspires for the state of 'Sārupya' (sameness of form of Śiva), should worship the Śivayogīs. One who condemns the Śivayogī, is sure to fall in the darkest Raurava hell (49). O dear ! Śivayogī of Vīraśaiva sect always wears Śivaliṅga on the neck. So, he is considered to be the supreme and should regularly be seen reverently (50). The kind of reverence shown to me, to you and to Śivaliṅga, should also be expressed towards an initiated Vīraśaiva (51). O Śive ! worshipping him is worshipping me and abusing him is abusing me. One who possesses pure devotion for me, should worship Śivayogīs (52). The place where Śivayogī stays for a moment or half of a moment, turns to be the great Kailāśa. That is also Kāśī where I myself reside (53). O Śive ! only the remembrance of the person who wears Śivaliṅga as per the procedure instructed by Guru immediately destroys the defilement caused by touching the Cāṇḍālas (54). There does not remain any differentiation regarding the caste, nor thinking of purity or impurity. There is no sense of defilement caused by touch or impurity as everything is merged in Śiva (55). O Śive ! the Śivayogī who cleans the utensils after finishing the food thinking it consisting of leftover, is sure to suffer the hell (56). In this school, no defilement is considered if caused by the touch, menstruation, there is no differentiation of woman and child etc., nor any defilement caused by the birth and death and also there is no definite injunction regarding the procedure of bathing (57). Whatever caste he might be, Brāhmin, Kṣatriya, Vaiśya or Śudra and person belonging to other castes, becomes Śiva only by wearing Liṅga, there is no doubt in it (58). O Śive ! woman, child, old, lame, huntch, blind, invalid, insane, deaf, crosseyed, wretched, cunning, deceitful, thief, adulterous, prostitute and untouchable, whosoever one may be, attains my nature, if he wears

O Goddess ! one who has the devotion towards the Vīraśaiva doctrine is considered to be worthy of it, as everybody becomes pure by mere devotion (62).

Goddess enquires —

Enquiries Regarding the Term 'Vīra'

O Śaṅkar, hail to thee ! you are the Lord, omniscient and supreme of all. Kindly enlighten me as to why the word 'Vīra' is prefixed. What is the justification of it? (63). O Lord ! is the word 'Vīra' derived from a root — 'dhātu' (यौगिक), archaic (रूढ) or formal ? O Lord ! kindly tell me, why this word is not attached to any other doctrine ? (64).

God replies —

O Goddess ! you have asked an apt question. The welfare of all beings is implied in it. Though it is a great mystery but out of love I shall describe it to you (65).

The Term 'Vīra'

O the Goddess of the world ! though the persons attaining the 'Turīya' (fourth) state are named as 'Vīra' but as per Vīraśaivism, the epithet 'Vīra' is applicable to one who constantly observes the path advocated by Guru with firm determination (66). O Goddess of the divinities ! though one who has attained the state of Turiya is known as 'Vīra' in every school, but now the word is popularly known in the sect of Vīraśaivism (67). As the other schools are overwhelmed with the religious rites and rituals, so there is the lapse in performance of righteous duties and the inner self is not purified. Therefore, one is deprived of the self satisfaction due to the sense of discrimination (68).

Glory of Wearing 'Liṅga'

O the benevolent ! now I shall describe to you specially the glory of wearing the Iṣṭaliṅga. One crosses the ocean of pleasure and pain easily only through the devotion of Iṣṭaliṅga (69). One easily enjoys the self contentment only by wearing the Iṣṭaliṅga after entering into the discipline of my great Vīraśaivism (70). O Goddess ! there is no rule of wearing Iṣṭaliṅga in other schools. One should wear Iṣṭaliṅga only after having accepted the discipline of Vīraśaivism (71). If unwise who belongs to other discipline wears Iṣṭaliṅga, then, during life, he will be a Cāṇḍāl (the untouchable) and after death he will go to the hell (72). One who himself wears Iṣṭaliṅga without having received the grace of Guru (i.e. without dīkṣā), becomes Cāṇḍāl during life and goes to the hell after death (73). One who intentionally performs the religious rites of other religion despite of being in different religion, becomes Cāṇḍāl during life and goes to the hell after death (74). O Goddess ! if anybody has a firm devotion in wearing my Liṅga, then he should take refuge in a Śivayogī and worship Śiva in the form of Guru (75).

शिवदीक्षां विना देवि यः कुर्याल्लिङ्गधारणम् ।
 स याति नरकं घोरं यस्त्यजेत्तदभक्तितः ॥७६॥

Dīkṣā Without Wearing Liṅga, a Lapse

O Goddess ! one who wears the Iṣṭaliṅga without being initiated in the sect of Vīraśaivism or abandons it due to the dearth of devotion, falls into the abhorrent hell (76). O Goddess ! one should not wear Liṅga without observing the adequate procedure. If anybody does it,

विना विधानमीशानि न कुर्याल्लिङ्गधारणम् ।
कृतं चेदकृतं विद्धि न तच्छैवमतं भवेत् ॥७७॥

वीरशैवमतोत्कर्षः

then that is equal to non-observance because (wearing of Liṅga without having performed the required procedure) it is inadmissible in Vīraśaivism (77).

Glory of the Discipline of Vīraśaivism

O Goddess ! wearing of Iṣṭaliṅga is enough for the attainment of Śivahood, as the discipline of my Vīraśaivism advocates the means for immediate liberation (78). So, the doctrine of Vīraśaivism is the supreme of all. One who wears the Iṣṭaliṅga, assumes the form of Śiva (79). O Śive ! without the compassion of mine, no one can be endowed with devotion in Vīraśaivism and he remains in the cycle of birth and death (80). O Goddess ! one who enters into my faith after passing through many births and deaths, undoubtedly attains Śivahood (81).

Glory of Pañcākṣara Hymn

O Śive ! as the Bhāgirathī is the most auspicious among all the rivers, so you are the supreme among all the women and I am the greatest among all the men (82). Thus Kāśī is the most auspicious place of pilgrimage and Maṇikarnikā is the greatest among all the pilgrimages, so my five syllable hymn (पञ्चाक्षरी मंत्र) is the supreme among all the hymns (83). O Goddess ! please note, as mount Kailāśa is the most pleasant among all the places, so Śaivism is the supreme among all the doctrines (84). As I am the supreme among the all, so the doctrine advocated by me is the best of all. Therefore, the relative hierarchy among the doctrines of others and mine is the same as that of me and others (85). As the king gradually encourages his servants by giving promotion as per their performance, so also I bestow the different status to the devotees according to their observance of my doctrine (86).

Glory of Śivaliṅga

Now I shall divulge a mystery to you, please keep it secret. Never divulge it to anybody except to a virtuous worthy devotee (87). The knowledge of the image seen in the temple, picture and in the house is clear to us (88). So, by receiving hymn at the time of Dīkṣā of Viraśaivism, one becomes free from all sins. O Goddess ! the knowledge regarding me is born only by the perception of Liṅga (89). After many a miserable lives are over, the sacred vision of Liṅga takes place by the grace of mine (90). O the great Goddess ! by that grace only, one is able to know the real nature of my Liṅga and by having attained the real knowledge of Liṅga, one is able to realise that I myself (Liṅga) is the Śiva (91). O Goddess ! such is the glory of the Liṅga. What more ? By wearing it on the body, the whole body becomes one with the Liṅga (92). The word 'Liṅga' has also been used in the scriptures to denote various kinds of 'līlā' (blissful purposeless activity) of Śiva. By wearing that Liṅga, the body also turns to be a principle of divine sport (93).

Why Everybody Should Not Wear Liṅga ?

O God ! the possessor of banner with the bull in insignia, rider of Nandī, three eyed, and drinker of poison ! if it is so, why does everybody not wear Liṅga ? (94).

God replies —

O Śive ! how do the people who remain in confusion by my mysterious power (माया) due to their own deeds, be saved without my compassion ? (95).

Procedure of Liṅga-worship

By mere wearing Iṣṭaliṅga as duly prescribed, one attains the status of 'Sāyujya' — the abode of all goodness (96). O Maheśvari ! if a Śivayogī of Vīraśaiva sect worships Śivaliṅga once, knowingly or unknowingly, with capability or incapability, with scarcity or abundance, all his disqualifications turn into the qualifications (97-98). For the Vīraśaiva Śivayogī, only two means are open for achieving me — either perceiving my presence in everything or an intense devotion in me (99). Women should never abandon the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga even in the condition of menstruation, so also worship should not be left even after taking food and in the state of defilement. I shower my compassion on the devotee who worships the Iṣṭaliṅga in any state (100). Remembering,

स्मरणात् कीर्तनाद् देवि मम लिङ्गस्य धारणात् ।
 अनायासेनातिशयं फलं स्यादुत्तमोत्तमम् ॥१०१॥
 न मेऽस्ति यस्मिन् कारुण्यं न तस्यात्र रुचिर्भवेत् ।

 अत एव महादेवि गुप्तं मतमिदं कलौ । मन्मतज्ञानमात्रेण मुच्येयुरपि पापिनः ॥१०७॥

praising and wearing the Iṣṭaliṅga easily produce extremely good results (101). If my mercy is not showered, attachment for the worship is not developed. If intense inclination for worship is developed, one attains freedom, there is no doubt in it (102). So, a great mystery is concealed in this greatest sect of mine. Vīraśaiva and Pāśupata are the same doctrine though having different names (103). The doctrine of Vīraśaiva is known as the supreme among the seven kinds of śaiva schools. The term 'Vīra' is attached with śaiva since he wears the Iṣṭaliṅga with utmost firmness and strong will (104).

Glory of Śivayogī

It is known in the world that the perception of the pinnacle of the Śiva temple annihilates all sins and inspires with the knowledge of Śiva; so also mere perception of a Śivayogī – the wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga, immediately eradicates all sins as the darkness is removed after sunrise (105-106). O the great Goddess ! therefore, for this reason, this doctrine has been kept secret in this Kaliyuga. Knowing it, the sinners also attain liberation (107). The main purpose to observe the Vīraśaiva discipline is that the devotee is easily attracted to the doctrine of Vīraśaivism and the devotion towards the God, kindness for all beings and the attainment of four-fold liberations are the natural outcome (108). O Goddess ! other doctrines, superior to that of mine, is only possible if there is anybody greater than me. If there is anybody superior to me, then how the freedom of mine will remain in tact (109). O Goddess ! thus I have illustrated to you the different doctrines and their relative results. What more do you want to listen ? (110)

लाभः<sup>३३</sup> शैवमतस्यैको वीरशैवप्रवर्तनम् ।

THE CHARACTERISTICS OF LIṄGA AND CASKET

Goddess enquires —

O the three eyed, annihilator of Tripura, destroyer of Yama, ocean of mercy ! I bow unto you. Kindly tell me the proper procedure of wearing the Liṅga (1). O Lord ! kindly describe gradually, in detail, the methods of initiation, characteristics and the nature of the casket of Liṅga, Śivasūtra and also the method of igniting the Śivāgni (2).

God replies —

O Goddess ! please listen carefully. Firstly, I shall explain to you the various kinds of Liṅga, procedure of Dikṣā and the casket of Liṅga (Sajjikā) that have emanated from me (3).

Characteristics of Liṅga

All things of the world, movable and immovable, are only of the nature of my Liṅga. The things made of stones and metals etc., are also of the nature of me, please note (4). The Liṅgas emanated from the rivers, mountains, holy places, Ganges and the oceans are also to be known as possessing my nature (5). O Goddess ! The Liṅga installed in the temple through the proper procedure is extremely esteemed, but the Liṅga bestowed by Guru duly observing the procedure of initiation is the supreme (6). There are many other Liṅgas that provide desired results. Out of them, the Liṅgas made of gold, mercury etc. confer fruits in abundance as per their size (7). O the great Goddess ! the size of the Liṅga may vary right from the size of a betel nut to the larger one as per the desire of the wearer. The supremacy of Liṅga depends on the dimension of liṅga (8). Liṅga made of mercury fulfils all desires, Liṅga made of gold provides wealth, Liṅga made of silver accords progeny and the Liṅga made of copper annihilates the enemy (9). Liṅga made of zinc, removes diseases, Liṅga made of lead is the eradicator of all sins, Liṅga made of crystal is the conferer of knowledge and virtues and the Liṅga of Rudrākṣa bestows liberation (10). O the great Goddess ! Liṅga made of wood destroys everything, Liṅga made of alloy produces disease and pain. Liṅga made of the stones of Śrīśailam is the donor of all the happiness of this world and the world beyond (11). O Goddess ! out of all the Liṅga that is awarded by Guru (after duly performing the procedures) is the supreme among all and is the bestower of all that is aspired for because that Liṅga is my own form (12). Wearing of Liṅga of the size of Jujube fruit enhances the attitudes towards the virtues and the Iṣṭaliṅga which is of the size of betel-nut accomplishes all desires (13). Liṅga of the size of lemon fulfils all aspirations ; if Liṅga bigger than that is liked imparts the achievements of the four Puruṣārthas (Dharma, Artha, Kāma and Mokṣa) (14). O Pārvatī ! there is no prescribed size for the Liṅga named 'Śivanābha'. Liṅga, bestowed by Guru is considered to be adorned with all qualities (15). O Goddess ! the Liṅga made of stone is generally considered to be good for all and the donor of all fortunes and all achievements (16). O Śive ! the Liṅga made of stones of Śrīśailam is the supreme among all.

Rules of Kecana

O dear ! all other Liṅga may be vitiated but there can never be any pollution in the Liṅga made of the stone of Śrīśailam (17-18). O dear ! during the period of defilement caused by the births and deaths, at the time of nature's call, sexual intercourse and any inauspicious work, in the battle field, during sleep, waking, dreaming and in the state of deep sleep, Iṣṭaliṅga should never be separated from the body in thought, action and speech even at the risk of life (18-20). O Śive ! once having taken refuge in divine Guru and my liṅga, one should adore them. One should accept any of the above mentioned liṅga of mine and wear it by identifying it with his own self. Then a casket as a seat of that liṅga should be prepared (21-22).

Two-fold Liṅgas – Movable and Immovable

O Goddess ! as the temple is made for the immovable Liṅga, so also a casket is necessary for the movable Liṅga. Like the temple for the immovable Liṅga a sound coffer, namely, 'Sajjikā' is prepared for the movable Liṅga (Caraliṅga) (23). O Śāṅkari ! you should know the nature and the characteristics of the Caraliṅga and 'Sajjikā', procedures of the worship of Liṅga, various rituals and the process of wearing the Liṅga. O Śive ! I shall gradually describe to you the respective results of all of them. One who worships the immovable Liṅga in the temple, is not considered to be fit to sit generally in proximity with the auspicious one (पङ्क्तिपावन) (24-25).

Supremacy of the Worshipper of Iṣṭaliṅga

Those who wear Iṣṭaliṅga on the body are fit to sit in company with the pious people. The body without having worn the Liṅga is considered to be impure (26). Such person is not considered to be fit to touch the Liṅga and Śivayogī. Only after wearing Liṅga on the body, one attains the capability to bear the knowledge bestowed by Guru (27). One who wears Liṅga is always considered to be auspicious. He is beyond the state of purity and impurity. One should worship the Liṅga during the state of walking, resting, dreaming, enjoying, waking, laughing, eating and drinking (28-29). As the Śivayogī performs worship sitting on a seat, so worship may be performed while sitting and running also. One need not take any physical trouble nor the pain of observance of fast (29-30).

Four-fold Liberation

One who enjoys various kinds of things according to his own desire, should dedicate the same to Me (Iṣṭaliṅga) while enjoying. Compassion for all beings, devotion to Me, perceiving Me in everything and constantly wearing my Liṅga (Iṣṭaliṅga) are the four kinds of liberation i.e. these are the four means to liberation (31-32).

Preservation of Caraliṅga

O Goddess ! as far as my doctrine is concerned, yogīs are relatively in advantageous position as compared to other religious disciplines because merely by wearing Iṣṭaliṅga (as per my doctrine) all the (aforesaid) states are achieved easily. O Goddess of the world ! a movable Śiva-temple for this Śivaliṅga (namely Sajjikā) should be made (32-33). O Goddess ! a 'Sajjikā' made of gold for a Pañcasūtraliṅga<sup>1</sup> in which the Liṅga may be seated conveniently is considered to be good. It should duly be prepared as per one's capacity (34). This casket may be made by silver, brass and copper but never by alloy, lead, zinc, thread or cloth (35). One should prepare it carefully only by gold, silver, brass and copper, not by the above mentioned prohibited things, even at the risk of life, prestige and wealth (36). O the daughter of the mountain ! undoubtedly Liṅga is the only worth protecting thing which can never be possible by the casket made of thread or cloth alone (37).

Characteristics of Casket

The casket of the shape of cancer is the conferer of the desired results. The casket made according to the shape of Pañcasūtraliṅga<sup>1</sup> is considered to be of the nature of Liṅga (38). Such casket of this Liṅga (Pañcasūtraliṅga) is the bestower of both the enjoyment and liberation. So, the casket of the shape of my Nandīśvara, is the donor of the enjoyment, heaven and the liberation (39). The casket of the shape of the fruit of Arka, is the impartor of both the enjoyment and liberation. The casket of the size of mango fruit grants longevity and health (40). The casket of the size of a round shaped sweet is the giver of long life, son, grandson, wealth and goodluck. The casket of the shape of a Bilva fruit is the donor of wealth, victory, longevity, glory and wisdom. Thus the casket of the shape of Śivaliṅga is the means of both the enjoyment and liberation (41-42). O Goddess ! the devotee who decorates the casket with the various ornaments, gems and gold etc. of his choice, achieves all his desired objectives (43). Some caskets are decorated with entrance, door and three stands and is tied up with a strong thread (44). O Goddess ! there are caskets of the shape of square, lotus like, round like Bimba fruit. One should get the casket prepared as per the instruction of the Guru (45).

Nature of Śiva-thread

If the thread, tied up with the casket, is made of gold, then it imparts various fortunes. Thread made of silver is the donor of worthy progeny and the thread made of copper is the giver of the abundant crops (46). Thread made of brass is the provider of all objects of enjoyment, of alloy is the annihilator of all sins, of zinc is the donor of all desired results (47). Thread made of old cloths invites the poverty and misery, thread made of new cloths is the bestower of all enjoyments and of fibre is the fulfiller of all desires (48). Thread of white colour is the provider of wisdom, of red is capable of enchanting, of black causes the fear to enemy and of yellow colour bestows the son (49). Thread with spotted dots is the donor of peculiar results. This thread should be strong, unbroken, unknotted, uniform in thickness from one end to the other and the length should be equal to the length from the middle of the neck to the navel (50). O Goddess ! the wearer of Iṣṭalinga should put a good Śivasūtra in the casket as desired (51).

Tying of Śivasūtra with Casket

O Śive ! this casket is of your form and the thread is of mine. Thus the whole creation of movable and immovable world has come into existence on account of the union between you and me (52). O Goddess ! all the men of the world are undoubtedly of my form, where as all the women are undoubtedly of yours (53). You have no existence apart from me, nor have I any other nature than you. This one-ness of the nature is expressed by the illustration of the casket and its thread (54). O Śive ! there should be one door for keeping the Iṣṭaliṅga inside and bringing it outside. There should also be one curved hook to close the door. In this way, all are united into one i.e. they don't have any different status (55). O Goddess ! Gaurī and Kātyāyanī reside on the two sides of the door and O Śāṅkari ! Roudrī and Bhadrakālī remain respectively on the lower and upper portion of that door (56). O Goddess ! three stands of the casket symbolise Dharma, Kāma and Artha (the Puruṣārthas). The thread tied up with it is the donor of both the enjoyment and liberation (57). Two circular knots like the two buds of the lotus are tied up by uniting both the ends of the thread that symbolise the existence of the power of cognition and conation (knowledge and action) (58). O the Goddess ! a unique knot should be tied up on these two knots. One side of this knot is to take from the front where as the other side should be brought from behind and then the knot should be tied up as per the instruction of Guru. Thus the procedure of uniting the casket and the thread of the Liṅga has duly been described by me (59-60).

Refuge in Guru for Initiation

Now, I shall describe, in detail, the process of wearing the Iṣṭaliṅga on the chest along with initiation. The aspirer who is befitting of my compassion or whose present life is the final one, develops devotion by wearing Iṣṭaliṅga (61-62). One who is detached from the objects of enjoyments, calm, feels kinship with every being equally, ardent aspirer of liberation and the devotee of God should take refuge in Guru, the manifestation of Śiva (62-63).

Nature of Guru

Guru should be endowed with all pure, auspicious qualities, all knowing and adored by all. He should be adept in virtuous conducts, pure, devotee of Śiva, non-covetous, truth speaking, calm, devoid of jealousy and malevolence, knower of the meaning of all scriptures, comprehender of everything on slight indication, unperturbable, non-avaricious for wealth, adept in self-knowledge, non-sensuous, non-deceiver, orator, knower of the principle of Śiva and of ever delightful disposition. One should take refuge in Guru, the God Himself who possesses all such qualities (63-66). One should not go to Guru without some present and after duly purifying himself should bow unto Guru by falling on his feet and praise him devotedly with folded hands and pray, O Lord ! I bow unto Śiva Himself in the form of Guru (67-68). Kindly initiate me, your disciple in the order of Vīraśaiva discipline, the conferrer of all desired objects. If Guru actually desires to initiate the disciple on his prayer, then learned Guru should put the disciple on test for three years and purify him accordingly (69-70).

Characteristics of Disciple

Disciple should be devoted to Guru, and should do only such acts that please him (70). O Śive ! one who ardently follows Guru like a shadow, in thought, speech and action, maintains a serious attitude of non-differentiation for Guru, hymn (mantra), soul, deity, seat and symbol, truthful, theist, always dedicates life, wealth, prestige, mind, speech, body and action in the service of Guru, unerring, broad minded, possessing firm determination, having sound body and mind, non-indulgent in falsehood, non-deceiver, not an evil hearted, non greedy of wealth, rich, soft spoken, and the possessor of other such benign qualities should be initiated. Hand should be kept on the head while remembering Śiva in this process (71-75). The disciple who has control over the senses and always remains tirelessly and selflessly absorbed in the service of Guru should be accepted and directed to remain with him as per the order of Śiva (76).

Duties of Disciple

The disciple who has been recognised by Guru should always remain at the service of Guru knowing him the form of God. By observing this he (disciple) achieves both the enjoyment and liberation. He (disciple) should neither cross the shadow of Guru nor should he let his own shadow fall over Guru. Disciple who aspires for prosperity, should make efforts to observe these disciplines. He should not sit on an elevated place, nor should he raise his voice before Guru (77-78). He should neither behave arbitrarily before Guru nor should he join in any other association leaving the company of Guru. He should neither walk before Guru nor should he sleep with Guru (79). Disciple should never indulge in any business transaction with respected Guru. He should be careful not to laugh loudly, talk too much and sit with back towards him (80). He should always look at the face of Guru with a pleasant mind and gesture and should at once engage himself at his (Guru's) service on a slight indication. Despite of severe trouble, disciple should not express his sufferings to his Guru (81). Disciple should worship the bed, seat, cloths, shoes, vehicles etc. of Guru and should never take the left side on walking, should follow behind (82). He should enjoy the things of his choice only after dedicating them to Guru. The disciple should contemplate the image of Guru throughout the whole universe (83). He should remember the name of Guru during the state of waking, dreaming and deep sleep. So, he should meditate on his Guru in the heart first while bowing to elders, adorables and Śiva etc. (84). Such disciple should always contemplate on Guru in his heart before paying respect to anybody else. Guru also should accept such devoted disciple endowed with all qualities and initiate him with proper Śaiva initiation (85-86).

Process of Initiation

Śaiva-initiation should be given in the month of Āśvin, Kārtik, (Sept., Oct.), Mārgaśīrṣa, (Nov.), Māgh (Jan., Feb.), Phālgun (Feb., March) or Vaiśākha (April-May) on the moonlit fortnight specially on the day of Pūrṇā (5.10.15) or Jayā (3.8.13). The result of the initiation will gradually be in the increasing order particularly on the above mentioned days (86-87). Initiation given on the day of Pañcamī increases the number of progeny. Initiation given on the day of Daśamī adds the wealth of animals. Initiation bestowed on the fullmoon day imparts the four-fold achievements (Dharma, Artha, Kāma and Mokṣa) (88). Initiation given on the day of Dvādaśī, Caturdaśī, Navamī, Aṣṭamī, Śivarātri, moonless night and on the Monday of the month of Kārtik are considered to be auspicious and good (89). Initiation given on Friday, Sunday and Tuesday and on the time of the following stars such as Maghā, Ārdrā, Revatī, Śravaṇa, Aśvinī, Bharanī, Kṛttikā, Swātī, Mūlā, Phālgunī, Śatatārā (Śatabhiṣā) and on the position of the stars at the time of birth of Guru and himself are known to be most auspicious (90-91). Barring some inauspicious days, such as, vaidhṛti, Vyatīpāta, Atigaṇḍa, Gaṇḍa, Śūla, Vyāghāta, etc. all days are considered to be holy for the initiation (91-92). O Goddess Giriḥ ! except some of the inauspicious Karaṇas (undesirable conjunction of the stars) like Bhadrā, Kinstughna and Bālava etc. initiation should be observed on other auspicious days, i.e. the initiation should be fulfilled on the day characterised with all the auspicious signs (92-93). The main initiation, namely, Apūrva should be observed on the day after making it sure that it bears more auspicious qualities than the inauspicious ones (94).

Duties on Destruction of Liṅga

For other dīkṣās, all days are undoubtedly considered to be appropriate. If the Iṣṭaliṅga is destroyed on account of carelessness, then a new Liṅga with proper procedure of initiation should at once be worn (95). If the Iṣṭaliṅga is destroyed along with the casket, then the initiation should be performed immediately so that the Iṣṭaliṅga may be worn (96). O great Goddess ! if the Iṣṭaliṅga is broken in the middle, then it should be immersed into the deep water. In that case another Iṣṭaliṅga should be worn after purifying it with one night's observance. There is no flaw in it. If the casket also is destroyed, then another casket should be replaced in place of the former one (97-98). All the procedures, right from the installation, are to be performed as per rule laid down. O Goddess ! thus a new śiva-thread should be tied up if the old one is destroyed (99).

Linga Bestowed by Guru to be Worn Lifelong

If the casket, Śiva-thread or Iṣṭaliṅga is destroyed, then it should be worn immediately after following the above mentioned procedures. The disciple should wear the Iṣṭaliṅga for lifelong bestowed by the Guru on the occasion of initiation (100). No other Iṣṭaliṅga should be worn in between. One who does it, is a sinner. The casket, Śiva-thread, clothes etc. bestowed by Guru during initiation should be retained throughout the whole life, otherwise he is destined to suffer in the hell, named Raurava. If the Iṣṭaliṅga bestowed by Guru at the time of initiation named as Prāṇaliṅga, is destroyed due to carelessness, then the disciple should discard his body and attain Śivahood (101-103).

Change of Guru Prohibited

The disciple who accepts another Guru after leaving the former, becomes Cāṇḍāl (lowest among all castes) in this life and suffers the hell after death (103-104). O the great Goddess ! the disciple who is devoted to Guru and always wears Iṣṭaliṅga, enjoys happiness in this world and the world hereafter, attains prosperity at every step in his life. O Goddess ! the procedure of making the casket and the procedure of wearing the Iṣṭaliṅga have duly been described here. Now, O Goddess ! What else you want to listen (105).

the propounder of the doctrine of Śaiva non-dualism describing the wearing of Liṅga, preparing the casket etc. in the procedure of initiation in Viraśaivism ॥ 2 ॥*

1. Liṅga is consisting of five measurements. The circumference of Liṅga, the length of the base, breadth of its upper portion and also the breadth of its lower portion should be of the same size and the length of the 'Gomukh' should be half of the size of the circumference of the Liṅga. This is called the 'Pañca-sūtra Liṅga'. See Vīraśaivācāra Pradīpikā, P. 13

Chapter - 3

THE PROCEDURE OF INITIATION

Goddess enquires —

I bow unto you, the supreme Lord of the universe who bears the arch of the mountain Meru and garland of snakes. O the Lord of the universe ! kindly enlighten me regarding the procedure of initiation (1).

God replies —

O the supreme Goddess ! I am describing to you the supreme procedure of initiation, mere the knowledge of which provides the capability of wearing the Liṅga, please listen to it carefully (2).

Construction of Canopy for Initiation

House (canopy) should be smeared and cleaned with the cow dung on any auspicious day. After white washing place should be decorated with artistic designs on the walls and floors (3). That place should also be decorated with beautiful canopy and various ornamental auspicious items and by making decorative gates. The incense sticks and lamps are to be used gorgeously and elaborately as per one's capacity (4). The place of initiation should be beautified with all expensive things to the best of one's capacity and devotion. O Goddess ! one should not be miserly regarding this matter (5).

Duties for the Worshipper

Worshipper should get up in the early morning and after finishing the morning regular routine he should take the auspicious bath along with the relatives and friends (6). Plain and auspicious place should be smeared and cleaned with the cow dung and coated with the red coloured clay. Then a square Maṇḍala is to be drawn. Lines of the size of a hand (from the tip of the finger to the elbow) should be scribed with five different colours and the lotus flowers are to be painted in between the lines (7-8). Then the Maṇḍala is to be covered with new cloth and five Prastha (eighty handful) rice should be put on that cloth (9).

O Śive ! a clean new earthen pitcher is to be installed firmly on the lump of the rice. That pitcher should be painted with the lines and brimming with water (10). The pitcher should be decorated with the leaves of five trees viz, Peepul, Fig, Plaksa (a species of Fig tree), Banyan and Mango alongwith Kumkum etc. (vermillion coloured powder used in auspicious rites) (11). A red thread is duly to be wrapped round the pot and nine gems are to be dropped with devotion inside the pot as per capacity (12). Gold may also be put into the pot as one's capability and the whole thing is to be dedicated to Guru. O Pārvati ! then the rite of Prāṇa-pratiṣṭhā (installation of life principle) should be performed into the pitcher reciting the original hymn (13). A folded cloth is to be kept on the pot. A piece of cloth duly coloured with the turmeric is to be tied up on the neck of the pot and then the pot should be covered with a beautiful silken cloth (14).

Worship of Earthen Pitcher

The sacred earthen pitcher is to be decorated with the garlands and scented with divine incenses. The procedure of initiation is to be fulfilled by the four persons named as Rtvik alongwith Guru as the fifth one (15). All of them should worship together the sacred pitcher with bilva-leaves, sesamum, rice, dūrva with tender leaves, Droṇa and Karavīr flowers (16). They worship five Śivaliṅgas separately chanting the original five syllable Pañcākṣarī hymn, Praṇava, supreme Prasāda Pañcākṣarī<sup>1</sup> hymn, Śaktipañcākṣarī hymn and with five syllables symbolizing the five Brahmas. O Śive ! one should invoke, meditate and worship me, the beginningless, endless Lord alongwith Umā-Pārvatī on the sacred pitcher (17-18). Lord Śiva is having four arms, wearing the ornament of moon, having the vara and abhaya postures in two hands and deer and axe in other two hands. The daughter of mountain (Pārvatī) is seated on the left lap of the great God who is adored as the supreme Self (19). Then the Śivaliṅga is duly to be worshipped with the sixteen ingredients and the worship of sacred pitcher also is to be accomplished chanting the hymn 'yasya smṛtyā ca nāmoktyā' (20). O Śive ! thereafter five Ṛtvijas should be installed (Upasthāna)<sup>2</sup> reciting the hymn of Śrī Rudra or Pañcākṣara (21). Thus the sacred pitcher should be worshipped for three days regularly. Then the wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga should be made satisfied with the food and drinks containing six tastes (22). O Goddess ! during this time, the bracelet should be tied up in the arms of the worshipper. He should have control on his body, mind and speech and accept the food only once in a day containing fruit and milk (23).

Process of Initiation

A beautiful platform covered with canopy is to be constructed on the right side of the place where the sacred earthen pitcher has duly been installed. Guru should install an unblemish alter on this platform chanting the original hymn. Thereafter the alter should be covered with super fine cloth reciting the Sadyojātantra (24-25). Liṅga is to be kept on it reciting the Vāmadeva hymn. Then the Liṅga is to be installed with the Aghora hymn, casket and śiva thread with the Tatpuruṣa and Īśāna hymn respectively by Guru with devotion (26-27). One should meditate on Śivaliṅga, the form of mine as mentioned earlier. Guru should invoke and worship me along with the Ṛtvijas (28).

Worship of Liṅga

Invocation should be performed by chanting the original hymn, seat should be dedicated by chanting the hymn 'Śambhave namaḥ', water washing the feet should be offered reciting the hymn 'Īśāya devāya namaḥ' and offering should be dedicated chanting the hymn 'Śivāya namaḥ' (29). Water for washing hands and bathing is to be offered reciting the hymn 'Mahādevāya te namaḥ' and sacred bathing by Pañcāmṛta should be performed uttering the five hymns meant for five Brahmas (30). Sacred bath of Liṅga should be performed reciting the hymn 'Āpo hi ṣṭhā'. Then cloths and scarf should be dedicated uttering the hymns 'Kapardine namaḥ' and 'Triśuline namaḥ' respectively (31). O Śive ! thereafter the sacred thread and foodgrain, incense and rice are to be offered gradually reciting the hymns 'Paśupataye namaḥ', 'Kāmāntakāya namaḥ' and 'Mṛtyughāte namaḥ' respectively (32). Different parts of the body are to be worshipped with flower chanting the hymn 'Vṛṣadhvajāya namaḥ'. Feet are to be worshipped by reciting 'Śivāya namaḥ', ankle should be worshipped by reciting 'Gurave namaḥ', thighs are to be worshipped by uttering

'Mr̥dāya namaḥ' (33). Knees should be worshipped by chanting the hymn 'Śaṅkarāya namaḥ', thighs by reciting 'Bhavāya namaḥ', waist by uttering 'Pinākahastāya namaḥ' and navel is to be worshipped by reciting 'Merudhanurbhṛte namaḥ' (34). Belly is to be adored by reciting the hymn 'Viśvarūpāya namaḥ', chest by uttering the hymn 'Virūpākṣāya namaḥ', heart by the hymn 'Pārvaṭīśāya namaḥ' and chest by the hymn 'Kailāśavāsine namaḥ' (35). Throat is to be adored by reciting the hymn 'Nīlakaṇṭhāya namaḥ', neck by the hymn 'Skandasutāya namaḥ', hands by 'Anantabāhave namaḥ' and palms by the hymn 'Hastitvace namaḥ' (36). Fingers are to be worshipped by reciting the hymn 'Aṅgajahr̥te namaḥ', armpit by the hymn 'Pañcamukhāya namaḥ', ears by the hymn 'Dikkarṇine namaḥ' and nose are to be worshipped by reciting the hymn 'Sarvavaktrāya namaḥ', three eyes by 'Tridṛśe namaḥ', eyebrows by 'Bhūbhārābhāṅgāya namaḥ' and forehead by reciting the hymn 'Alikākṣiṇe namaḥ' (38). One should worship the head by chanting the hymn 'Sarvottamāya namaḥ' and all parts of the body should be worshipped by uttering the hymn 'Śaśimauline namaḥ'. Thus after completing the worship of all other parts, one should commence the great worship (39). O Goddess ! this great worship should be performed by chanting the hymns from the 'Śivasahasranāmah' (thousand names of Śiva), names mentioned in the 'Rudra-sūkta', original hymns and any other praising (stotra) and hymn (mantra) (40).

Flowers for Worship

O Śive ! five kinds of flowers<sup>3</sup> should duly be used in worship. Bilva-leaves and the Droṇa flowers should certainly be used in regular daily worship with proper procedure (41). Regular worship may also be performed only with rice mixed with sesamum or rice alone. Apart from that, worship may be performed by any flower with sweet odour grown in the forest or in village (42). All kinds of flowers, new tender leaves and other leaves grown in the village or in forest, are uniformly utilised in my worship. Only the Ketakī flower should never be used in my worship (43). My worship is performed by Lotus, Apāmārga, Red-lotus, Kadamba, Campak, Belā, Mallikā and the flowers bloomed in the forest (44). Thus Blue-lotus, Karavīr, Śevanti, Pāṭalī, Āmramanjarī (flowers of mango), Punnāg, Bakul, Maruvā, Damanak etc. are used in my worship (45). Kutaja, Kurubak, Kunda, Kesar and Nāgakesar and other flowers, either mentioned or not mentioned here, should properly be utilised in my worship (46). Five kinds of flowers and leaves viz. tender Dūrvā, Tulasī and Bilva leaves, Karavīr and Droṇa flower should be used daily in worshipping my Liṅga (47). One who aspires for liberation should worship Iṣṭaliṅga with Bilva-leaves and the rice mixed sesamum and one who aspires for Dharma (desirous of spirituality) and one who is ambitious for wealth should worship with the Droṇa flower and Karavīr flower respectively (48). One who desires to fulfil his ambitions should worship with Dhatūrā, or Arka flower and Apāmārga etc. For the elimination of the enemy and for keeping control on the woman, one should worship with Tulasī leaves and Jasmine (Camelī) flower respectively (49). Worship performed with Arka flower encharms the king and the worship performed with Lotus enables one to subdue over the human being. One who desires for victory should worship with the Mallikā flower and one who aspires for the fame should worship with the Dūrvā (50). One who desires for sound health should worship with the lotus, one who aspires for son should worship with the Kuraṇṭak flower, one who desires the wealth of animal should worship with Punnāg and one who hankers for various things should worship with different flowers whatever is available (51).

Procedure of Liṅga-worship

O the Goddess of the universe ! regular worship should be performed this way for three days. Then the incense powder mixed with eight ingredients is to be surrendered chanting the hymn 'Gaṇdhāvagrahakāriṇe namaḥ' (52). Lamp burnt with the camphors etc. is to be dedicated reciting the hymn 'Somasūryāgnicakṣuṣe namaḥ'. O Goddess ! all pure food with six various tastes should be offered to Liṅga which is my own form with due devotion reciting the hymn 'Annānāmpataye namaḥ' (53-54). Betel leaf along with the Camphor should be offered to me chanting hymn 'Rasajñāya namaḥ' and then perform the rite of waiving the lamp of Ghee around the Liṅga (55). Flowers are to be offered reciting the great hymn 'Tryambakam yajāmahe'. Lastly the verses glorifying me should be sung after taking round around the Liṅga and bowing to my Liṅga (56). One should beg pardon and pray uttering the hymn 'Yasyasmṛtyā ca nāmoktyā' and should remain awakened throughout the night in the proximity of my Liṅga (57).

Ritual for Casket and Thread

All the procedures observed for the installation of the life-principle of Liṅga should also be performed in case of casket and śiva-thread etc. (58). If the casket and śiva-thread are made of the threads and cloths, then the installation of life-principle is not done. If the casket and thread is made of iron or any other metal, then this procedure is carried on (59). All the procedures should be followed for the casket and the thread along with the Iṣṭaliṅga without any negligence. If the casket and śiva-thread become weak then a strong one is to be replaced after consecration leaving the weaker one (60). If the eight fold knots are loosened, then that should duly be tied up again. One who does not observe the due process of consecration is sure to take birth in the lowest order of human being (Cāṇḍāl) after death (61). If the casket and śiva-thread are destroyed, then that should be duly prepared again as per the procedure laid down in the scriptures. Such is the advice of Guru. Iṣṭaliṅga should never be kept any where on principle without performing the worship (62).

Regular Rites for Initiated

The religion of other people can never be considered to be one's own, nor one's religion can be non-religious. One should never remain in the company of the non-believers, hypocrit, one engaged in misconduct and a greedy person (63). One should not accompany the persons who are cheat, disrespectful to Guru, undevoted, untruthful, jealous of the Vīraśaiva discipline, foolish or the adopter of various types of arbitrary way of life (64). Devotee of Śiva should not live with persons who are rogue, greedy, neglectful to the advice of Guru, covetous for the women, thief and ego-centric (65). He (devotee) should not accompany, sit together nor converse and take food together with the persons who always find faults with and jealous of others and incapable in every respect (66). Sleeping and going together, praising, seeing or offering respect to such persons are prohibited. If capable, the devotee of Śiva, keeping aside above, should always remain absorbed in worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga (67). One should perform special worship of the Iṣṭaliṅga with devotion as per his capacity on the auspicious time, special day, saṅkrānti day<sup>4</sup>, viṣuva time continuously for three days commencing from one's birthday, navamī of śuklapakṣa (bright fortnight), Caturdaśī on Monday and full moonday (68-69). One should worship Śivaliṅga specially on Arghodayayoga (on the occasion of Arghodaya etc.) at the time of the solar and the lunar eclipse, on the occasion of Vyatīpāta, Kuhu and Pradoṣa (70). Special worship should be performed on every Trayodaśī night, specially if that falls on the Saturday, on the Caturdaśī of Kṛṣṇapakṣa (dark fortnight), specially if that falls on Tuesday and on the expiry day of Guru (71). Special worship should be performed on the day of final attainment (liṅgaikya-unison with Liṅga) of one's parents, on the fourth of Śukla-pakṣa (bright fortnight) if it falls on Tuesday and on the eighth day of Kṛṣṇa-pakṣa (dark fortnight) one should arrange for dance, songs and music with grandeur as per capacity (72).

Glory of the Sound of Bell

One who is poor should worship with his own clapping and sound of bell. Crores of sins originated by the killings of the brahmins and the sexual intercourse with the most undesirables are extinguished only on listening the sounds of the bell. The ringing of the bell is heard (by the people) even if from the long distance, all kinds of the sins, evil spirits etc. can never remain for a moment. So, O Goddess ! the bell is to be rung carefully with effort (73-75). Thus O Goddess ! Jayghantīkā should be rung carefully. In case of its non availability, the instrument made of alloy should be played carefully (76). During the worship of my Liṅga, the instrument, namely, Kāhaḷ<sup>5</sup> is to be played on. The wearer of Liṅga should specially be worshipped blowing the conch (77). In case of non-availability of any instruments, the conch should be blown because the conch is my favourite instrument. O Goddess ! the lamp is to be kindled before my Liṅga (78). As far as possible pure water should be sprinkled for ablution of the Liṅga. Sacred bathing may be performed with a handful of water and that may be increased as per capacity. More worship fetches more result, it is said (79). One should carefully prepare the scented item with the musk (Kasturī) etc. as per capacity (80). O Pārvatī ! one should devotedly worship only with the Droṇa flower leaving aside everything in case of inability (81).

Ritual for Fourth-day

One should worship Liṅga in accordance with the capacity, devotion, time and pleasure thinking it to be supremely beneficial (82). After observing three days's worship, one should take bath in the morning of the fourth day and then worship the Iṣṭaliṅga with devotion in proper time after collecting the available materials to the best of his capability (83). Knower of the Reality as Śiva should perform the rite of auspicious bath (of Liṅga) alongwith many old people as per the desire of the Yajamāna (worshipper) (84).

Observances for Śivayogī

O Śive ! Śivayogī, the wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga who always remains engrossed in worshipping the Liṅga, should then worship the old Liṅga installed on raised platform alongwith Nandī (bull) (85). Devotee should always wear the ring duly scribed this symbol of Nandī on his thumb. Then the wearers of Liṅga should take the food together and that food should be regarded as free of 'leftover' (उच्छिष्ट) defilement (86). O

 यस्य देहेऽस्ति रुद्राक्षो यावद्भक्त्यैक एव वा ॥९३॥

Śive ! there is no need to wash the hand also thinking it defiled. Disciple should sleep near the feet of Guru (87). Disciple should have the regard for Iṣṭaliṅga as Śiva, for Guru as Liṅga, for Prāṇa as Guru and for scriptures as Prāṇa (88). Disciple should maintain the regard to the principle as he has for the scriptures. Devotion to my Vīraśaiva discipline only justifies the same (89).

Glory of Liṅga and Wearing of Rudrākṣa

O Śive ! the moment one wears the Liṅga, besmears the sacred ash and regularly wears the Rudrākṣa, how can he remain a mere man ? (90). One who wears Liṅga becomes Śiva, there is no doubt in it. O Goddess ! If even a minutest point of sacred ash is seen on the forehead of a devotee, then he becomes the Śiva Himself (91). Besmearer of the sacred ash which is purified by my name, is the Rudra (Śiva) Himself, there is no doubt in it. Sinner becomes free of their sins by looking at the devotee besmearing the sacred ashes throughout the whole body (92). O the daughter of the Mountain ! blessed is he indeed, who purifies others. Looking at one who wears only one Rudrākṣa with devotion, various kinds of sins are removed (93-94). O Goddess ! the devotee who wears all the three i.e. the sacred ash, Rudrākṣa and Iṣṭaliṅga is the Rudra (Śiva) Himself, there is no doubt in it (94-95). Worshipping my Liṅga, besmearing the sacred ash and chanting the hymn (Pañcākṣari) – all these three individually possesses the capability of achieving Me. What to speak of the result of possessing all the three? O Goddess ! one who besmears sacred ash on the forehead, wears Rudrākṣa and chants the hymn of Pañcākṣara and wears the ornament of Iṣṭaliṅga on his neck, undoubtedly, is my own form (95-96).

 the advocator of the doctrine of Śaiva non-dualism, describing the procedure of liṅga-worship in the ritual of initiation in Vīraśaivism ॥ 3 ॥*

- ॐ हां हीं हूं हौं हौं — This is called the Prasād Pañcākṣarī hymn which becomes Ṣaḍakṣarī (six syllabled) by adding 'हः'. By the process of Karanyāsa, Ānganyāsa and Dehanyāsa, it has been used and implied the creation, preservation and destruction etc.
- Recitation of hymn before the Sun or Fire is named as 'Upasthāna'. Here pitcher is replaced as 'Upasthāna'.
- See verse No. 47.
- The transitory period of Sun from one star to another is called 'the Viṣuva' in which the duration of day and night is equal and it falls on the transition of Libra and Aries zodiac.
- 'वीणाभेरिमृदङ्गकाहलकला गीतं च नृत्यं तथा' — Śivamānasapūjā stotram. The word 'कहला' is the distortion of the word 'काहल'।

THE PROCEDURE OF SACRIFICE

God states —

Guru should perform ācamana and prāṇāyāma sitting on the seat and then should resolve thus, 'I shall perform the sacrifice to fulfil the initiation ceremony of Vīraśaiva religion' (1).

Various Sacrificial Pits

O Goddess ! after taking such resolution he should clean the place where the sacrifice is to be performed. Then he should prepare the altar or pit of sacrifice as per his desire (2). O Śive ! performance of sacrifice on the altar fetches all kinds of wealth and offering oblation in the pit (of sacrifice) imparts all kinds of success. Altars are said to be of three kinds and the pits of sacrifice are of five kinds (3). The altars shaped as square, triangular and circular impart Dharma (virtue), Artha (wealth) and Kāma (enjoyment) respectively and the pits shaped as square, triangular, round, semicircular and of the shape of tortoise bestow

Dharm, Arth, Kāma, Sāyujya and Kaivalya respectively (4). O Goddess !
Guru should perform the rite of the sacrifice in any one of them (5).

Ritual of Sacrifice

He should perform the Nandī rite after reciting the auspicious words. Then he should drink the pañca-gavya (a mixture of ghee, cow-urine, cow-dung, milk and curd) etc., adore the congregation of śivayogīs as per capacity and lit the fire. These rites are to be observed alongwith four wearers of Liṅga and yoginīs (6-7). This fire should be kindled either from the sun, Araṇi wood or collected from the Śiva-temple or a house of a śivayogī. Guru should enkindle the fire chanting original hymn (Pañcākṣara) and respectfully invoke it by showing five mudrās (stambhana, caturasra, dhenu, matsya and yoni) (8).

Ritual of Installation of Agni

After installing the fire on the eastern side of the pit, the place should be sanctified with the eight rites, viz, Vīkṣaṇa<sup>1</sup> etc. (9). O Goddess ! these eight rites are Vīkṣaṇa, Tāḍana, Prokṣaṇa, Abhimarśaṇa, Ghātana, Prāthana, Abhimantraṇa and Namaskāra (10). O Śive !

looking at the place of sacrifice, chanting the Praṇava hymn by Guru is called the Vīkṣaṇa. Purifying the place by the water sanctified by chanting the Praṇava hymn eight times is named as Tāḍana and sprinkling the water on the whole space is called the Prokṣaṇa. Chanting hymn by touching the pit of the sacrifice with hand is termed as Abhimarśana (11-12). Digging the place of sacrifice with the spade is called the Ghātana. Praying by reciting the original hymn as per capacity is named as Prayer and bowing to the place reciting the hymn twelve times is called Namaskāra. The place of sacrifice is to be sanctified by performing the aforesaid eight rituals (13-14).

Installation of Agni

The sacrificial pit is to be decorated with the three belts and the peepul leaves (fig leaves). Its length, breadth and depth should be of the size of one and half ambit (15). Fire should be installed reciting the original hymn (Pañcākṣara) and it (fire) is to be praised also chanting that hymn. Then one hundred fire sticks are to be put into that sacrificial pit which is purified with the hymn 'hum' (16). O Śive ! Guru should lit the fire chanting the Kavaca hymn 'hum'. O the supreme Goddess ! he (Guru) should meditate on me in the burning fire (17). O Goddess ! this image of mine having four arms, delicate body, decorated with the imperishable moon, possessing with hatchet, stag in two lotus hands and assuming the postures of Abhaya and Vara with rest two lotus hands and the left side of the lap is adorned with Pārvatī having smiling face and three eyes (of mine) (18-19). Then learned Guru should meditate on the Goddess possessing the red colour of rising sun and wearing the red coloured cloth. The supreme Goddess of sacrificial pit has embodied the great fire in her womb. After meditating the Śiva-śakti in this form, Guru should offer ten oblations chanting the Pañcākṣara hymn prefixed with Praṇava (20-21). O Goddess ! the fire revealed from the sacrificial container is to be payed obeisance reciting the hymn 'Śīroasi jagatāmīśa' (22). Guru should offer one hundred oblations of ghee to the fire reciting the hymn 'Namo agnaye' etc. and uttering the words that 'I bow down to the fire who is of the nature of

Meditation of Rudra

Then Agni is to be meditated upon attentively as the form of Rudra consisting of seven hands, four horns, seven tongues and two heads. He is having three feet and a pious face, is seated comfortably and is accepting the oblations of ghee offered by Srucā (24-25). He bears in his seven hands javelin, tomer, vyajan, vyāt, serpent, bow (dhanuṣ), arrow (vāṇ) and the postures of Vara and Abhaya. This fire decorated with all ornaments is the full form of Sadyojāta Maheśvara (26). O Goddess ! sixteen oblations of ghee should be offered (to the fire) reciting the hymn 'Namo Rudrāya devāya, Īśānāya, Kapardine, Hutāśanāya, Nīlāya, Lohitāya, Kakudmate, adding the Praṇava and Pañcākṣara (27-28).

Rituals of Jātakarma

For the rite of Jātakarma, ten oblations to the fire of sacrificial pit are to be offered chanting the hymn Pañcākṣara with Praṇava (29). O Goddess ! the rite of naming the agni is also to be fulfilled by offering ten oblations to the fire chanting the Rudrāgni hymn with Pañcākṣara and Praṇava (30). Now ten oblations of ghee should be offered to the fire, which has assumed the form of yogī, contemplating it separate from Umā and Maheśvara for the fulfilment of the rite of Niṣkramaṇa (31). Ten oblations should be offered contemplating the ears of the fire ornamented with the rings of gems to fulfil the sacred ear-piercing (कर्णविध) ceremony (32). For the rite of first-feeding (अन्नप्राशन) and first-shaving (चौलकर्म) ceremonies, ten oblations are to be submitted gradually to fulfil the above mentioned purificatory sacraments. Then sacred thread ceremony (उपनयन) should be observed chanting the original hymn (Pañcākṣara). For the pleasure of the fire, twenty oblations are to be offered reciting the hymn 'Namo Rudrāya' adding Praṇava and Pañcākṣara (33-34). O Pārvaṭī ! then the sacrament of marriage (विवाह) between Agni and Svāhā should be observed by dedicating 108 oblations by chanting the Pañcākṣara hymn (35). Then the young handsome fire radiant with lustrous flames and adorned with Svāhā sitting on his left side of the lap is to be meditated upon (36).

Seven Tongues of Agni

O the supreme Goddess ! that fire possesses seven virtuous tongues decorated with seven flames. O Śive ! seven oblations are to be offered respectfully for each, meditating on them (37). Lelihānā, Karālī, Rocīṣkeśā, Trilohitā, Vidyut, Prabhā and Śivā are the names of the seven tongues of Agni. The tongue, namely, the Śivā is situated in the middle of them (38). O Goddess ! ten oblations should be offered specially to this tongue chanting the Pañcākṣara hymn prefixing the Praṇava and Agni is to be meditated upon in the form of the divine Rudra (39). One who aspires for wealth should offer oblation to the Lelihānā, desirous for virtues, to the Karālī and the person who hankers for child, fame and achievements should submit the oblations to Rocīṣkeśā tongue (40). One who desires longevity and the wealth of animals should calmly submit oblation to the Trilohitā tongue. Person who craves for the extinction of the enemy and the achievement of the domain of Śiva should offer the oblations of the tongues, namely, Vidyut and Prabhā respectively. O Goddess ! seeker of liberation should dedicate oblations to my tongue, namely, Śivā (41-42). O Śive !

for the fulfilment of the above aspirations ten, twelve, five, thirtyeight, seventeen, sixty and one hundred sixty oblations are to be dedicated to the seven tongues of Agni respectively (42-43).

Worship of Mekhalās

Worship of ten Goddesses, namely, Jayā, Vijayā, Bhadrā, Tīvrā, Gaurī, Kakudmatī, Īśvarī, Śāmbhavī, Divyā, Jvālīnī, Bhogadāyinī, Kalyāṇī, Gaganā, Raktā, Nandā and Jyotiṣmatī should be performed gradually according to their directions commencing from the east chanting the hymn of their name prefixed with Praṇava in the beginning and 'Namah' at the end (i.e. aum Jayāyai namah). These sixteen Goddesses assuming the four postures (mudrā), namely, Pāśa. Aṅkuśa, Vara and Abhaya with hands and decorated with the half moon on their forehead are to be worshipped on the third line of the circle (43-46). Sixteen Goddesses, namely, Hṛllekhā, Gaganā, Raktā, Mahochhuṣkā, Kapiñjalā, Aruṇā, Mālīnī, Śāntā, Nidrā, Krodhinī, Kriyā, Alambuṣā, Sinīvālī, Kuhū and Rākā are to be worshipped gradually on the middle line of the circle (47-48). Sixteen Goddesses, namely, Amṛtā, Mānadā, Pūṣā, Puṣṭi, Tuṣṭi, Rati, Dhṛti, Śāśinī, Candrikā, Kāntā, Jyotsnā, Prīti, Priyambadā, Gāndhārī, Hastijihvā and Vipani are to be worshipped gradually on the first line of the circle (49-50). O Goddess ! Indra etc., eight Dikpālas (protectors of the directions) are to be worshipped along with their carriers etc. Thus Durgā, Gaṇapati, Kṣetrapāla, and Mr̥tyunjay should be worshipped on the four directions and Abhayaṅkara is to be worshipped in the middle. Oblations should respectively be offered attentively on the sacrificial bowl after worshipping the deities separately with their carriers and weapons (51-52). O the supreme Goddess ! now the oblations are to be offered in the name of fifty three deities right from the Goddess Jayā to the God Abhayaṅkara chanting the Pañcākṣara hymn prefixed with Praṇava (53-54).

Prayer to Agni

Now, burning fire should be prayed and meditated upon as my own form. I bow to this fire of initiation possessing seven tongues which is Rudra Himself and the consumer of all oblations (54-55).

चतुश्शृङ्गाय शान्ताय वीतिहोत्राय ते नमः ।
 वैश्वानराय देवाय वह्नये विश्वकर्मणे ॥५६॥

 प्रणवेनाहतैर्दर्भैः परितोऽग्निं परिस्तरेत् ।
 प्रणवेनाग्न्युपस्थे च पालाशान् परिधीन् क्षिपेत् ॥६२॥

I bow to the fire that possesses four horns and tranquility and is the receiver of oblations. I submit to the fire that is the creator of the world i.e. the Vaiśvānara and Viśvakarmā. I submit to Dhananjaya, Rudra, the ever inflammable fire. I bow unto the fire Jātaveda that wakes in the morning and imparts knowledge to others. I bow unto Ahirbudhnāya, the eternal, exterior pyrogenic and benedictory fire. I bow down to the fire Bṛhadbhānu, known as Kṛpitayoni and Kṛṣṇavartmā that fulfils the aspiration of one who takes refuge in him (56-59). O Śive ! prayer should be offered to the fire of sacrificial pit who is our son and meditate on it assuming it non-different and one with us (60). Avakṣaṇa rite is to be performed around the fire chanting the Praṇava for eight times. Parisamūhan rite is to be fulfilled reciting the hymn 'aum namah' (61).

Installation of Paridhi

Dūrvā should be spread around the fire chanting the hymn Praṇava, then sticks called Paridhi<sup>2</sup> (size of the length of palm) of the Palāśa are to be offered to the fire reciting the hymn (62). O Śive ! the Paridhi of the Udumbar (species of fig) and Śamī are the fulfiller of all desires. The sticks of Palāśa, Pipul and Kāśmarī are to be used for the regular rites (63). Then worship of Agni should be performed with the red rice on eight directions right from east to Īśāna by going round and reciting the eight names viz., Śivāya, Rudrāya, Mṛdāya, Śaśimaulaye, Īśānāya, Girīśāya, Rudrāya and Aṣṭāṅgamūrtaye (64-65). O Śive ! Agni should surely be adorned with the flowers reciting these eight names and lot of kuśas are to be spread on the northern side of the Agni (66).

औदुम्बराः शमीजाता यदि कामप्रदाः शिवे ।

 प्रणवेन हृदा मूर्ध्नि प्रोक्षणीमग्रतो नयेत् ॥६९॥

Installation of the Bowl of Yajña

O Īśāni ! six sacrificial pots, namely, Darvī, Ājyasthālī, Prokṣaṇī, Pūrṇapātrikā, Idhma and Srucā should be installed on the kuśas reciting the hymn Praṇava and Namah (67-68). O Dear ! Durvā should be taken in hand and water is to be sprinkled by the tips of the Durvā on all the pots. Then the rite of 'Prokṣaṇa' is to be observed after putting the pots downward. That pot is to be taken upward from the heart to the head reciting the hymn Praṇava (68-69). Water mixed with the rice is to be taken on this clean pot chanting Mūlamantra (Pañcākṣara) adding Praṇava. All the ingredients of the sacrifice should be cleaned with the holy hands reciting the hymn 'Śivāya Śambhave'. Then keeping the Prokṣaṇi pot aside, the Pūrṇa pot should be taken (70-71). This Pūrṇa pot is to be taken up near his own face and then is to be kept on the northern side of the fire reciting the hymn 'hum phat svāhā' (72). Guru (Ācāryā) should put eight Durvās upon the Pūrṇa pot which should be adored, bowed down and sanctified with the Praṇava and Pañcākṣara hymn (73). O Goddess ! then Ācāryā should take 'Ājyasthālī' (Pūrṇapātra) on his hand and that material is to be sanctified by putting aside the undesirables (74). After that, the pure ingredients should be separated from the pot by putting that into the fire chanting 'aum namah' and 'svāhā' (75). O Śive ! the tips of the two Durvās of the Ājya pot are to be dipped in the ghee reciting the hymn 'hum phat' and ignited Durvā should be offered to the fire contemplating it as Śiva chanting the hymn Pañcākṣara adding Praṇava (76-77). O Goddess ! then Guru is to ensure the uninterrupted flow of ghee towards the sacrificial pit from the direction of Vāyavya to Āgneya and Nairṭya to Īśāna chanting the hymn Praṇava and Kavaca (huṁ) (77-78). O Goddess ! then oblation of ghee should be offered with the spoon (śrucā) assuming its upper part (head) as the scriptures. Thus oblations are to be offered with the eye-shaped spoon to Śiva chanting the hymn Pañcākṣara prefixed with Praṇava (79).

Procedure of Sacrifice

Now Ācāryās and Rtvikas should offer oblations of ghee to the fire sitting on south, west and north of the sacrificial pit (80). They should offer oblations one hundred and eight chanting five hymn of Pañcānuvāk<sup>3</sup> and one thousand chanting Pañcākṣara with Praṇava (81). O the daughter of the Mountain ! Guru should regularly offer oblations to the fire thus after offering eight oblations to eight Dikpālas (ruler of the directions) chanting the hymn Praṇava and 'huṁ phat'. He should offer oblations in the name of Durgā, Gaṇapati, Gaurī, Īśvarī, Acalātmajā (daughter of Acalā), Durvāsā, Śiva, Rudra, Tryambaka, Umāpati, Kaśyapa, Kapila, Kaṇva, Jamadagni, Nandī, Vṛṣabha, Bhṛṅgī, Rīṭi, Kumāra and other courtiers (82-84). O Dear ! eight oblations are to be offered to each of them. Final oblation should be dedicated after offering oblations to nine planets (Graha) with their respective hymns (85). After surrendering the 'Sviṣṭakṛt' offering the oblation for atonement is to be submitted chanting the 'Anuvāk' hymn of Agnimūrdha, Agnaye, Kadrudāy, the hymn of Pañcabrahma and Pañcākṣara added with Praṇava. Then Guru should complete the rest of the sacrificial ceremony without fail as per the rules of the sect chanting the Pañcākṣara hymn with Praṇava (86-87).

Here ends the fourth chapter of Pārameśvaratantra, the advocator of the Śaiva non-dualism elucidating the procedure of the sacrificial rite in the performance of the Vīraśaiva initiation ceremony ॥4॥

Notes & References (in English Text)

1. The description of the procedure of purification of land, digging of pond, lighting the fire, purification of ghee are almost the same as that prescribed in Veda.
2. The word 'Paridhi' is used for the measurement of a piece of wood which is usually understood as equal the length of palm. See Candrajñānāgama, p.129.
3. The word 'Pañcānuvāk' or 'Pañcabrahma' indicates the hymns describing the five brahmas such as Sadyojāta etc. as elucidated in the Taittirīya Āraṇyak and Mahānārāyaṇopaniṣad.

Chapter - 5

INITIATION FOR WEARING THE LINGA

O the supreme Goddess ! now listen to the characteristics of the initiation and the ritual of assembling the casket, śiva-thread and Iṣṭalinga respectively (1).

Assembling of Casket, Śiva-thread and Iṣṭalinga

The cloth covering the Iṣṭalinga is to be removed first chanting the hymn Praṇava. Then Iṣṭalinga should be worshipped with various ingredients as per capacity (2). After meditating on me with original hymn, Guru should accept the śiva-thread invoking the casket and consecrating it reciting five Anuvāk hymn of Pañca-brahma (3). Śiva-thread is to be purified by reciting the Pañcākṣara hymn twelve times and then to be adjoined with the casket chanting the Pañcākṣara hymn along with Praṇava (4). Cloth is to be spread out in the casket reciting original hymn prefixed with Praṇava and Iṣṭaliṅga is to be worshipped, the golden flower is to be offered chanting the same hymn (5). Liṅga without gold is never to be worn. Śivaliṅga adorned with the gold fulfils all desires, there is no doubt in it (6). O Goddess ! the door of the casket should be closed and the hook of the door also should be fixed reciting the hymn Pañcākṣara in the same way the casket is to be tied up with cloth as per the advice of the sect and Guru reciting the hymn Pañcākṣara (7). O Goddess ! then one should offer special worship and contemplate on the casket. O Pārvatī ! thereafter my supreme nature is to be duly meditated upon and praised (8).

Hymn of Praise to Liṅga

I bow unto Śiva, Rudra, Śaṅkar, Kapardin, Mr̥da, Nīlakaṇṭha and Dhūrjaṭi (9). I bow unto Praṇava, the supreme God which is of the nature of 'Aum'. I bow unto Ghaṇṭāpriya, Śarva, Sarva and Śaśimauli (10). I bow unto the Lord who wears the ornament of the king of serpents, skin of the tiger and elephant. I bow unto one who possesses

I bow unto the Lord of Pārvatī, father of Gaṇapati, father of Kumāra (Kārtikeya) and the bearer of Ganges (13). I bow unto the destroyer of Tripura, Lord of Viṣṇu and Śambhu who possesses the radiance of moon (14). I bow unto dreadful, valient Paśupati and Hara. O the Lord of the Girijā ! kindly save me and pardon my faults (15). Kindly have your residence in my body for ever and may my body always be your own. O Īśāna, Śiva, Śaṅkar ! kindly bestow all fortunes and the status of 'Sāyujya' (closest unison with God) to me (16). Thus the Iṣṭaliṅga should be praised and installed on the seat as earlier alongwith the casket, thread and cloth ; then it should again be glorified, bowed down and anointed (17).

Ablution of Liṅga

There after Guru along with four Rtvijas should sprinkle the water of the pot gradually on the disciple sitted on the seat (18). Chanting the hymn of Pañcabrahmānuvāk<sup>1</sup>, Praṇava, Pañcākṣara and Rudrādhyāya, the disciple who has worn the pure cloth and bedecked with all ornaments, is to be consecrated (19). Guru himself should besmear the sacred ash on the body of the disciple consecrating it by chanting the hymn Pañcākṣara added with Praṇava for eight times (20).

Wearing of the Sacred Ash

Sacred ash should be besmeared first on the head chanting the hymn Pañcākṣara, on the forehead chanting Praṇava, on the throat and eyes reciting 'namah' and on both the ears and shoulders uttering 'svāhā' (21). O Goddess ! sacred ash again is to be besmeared on the two arms reciting 'vauṣaṭ', on the middle and front part of the arms reciting 'hum' and 'phaṭ', on the heart chanting Praṇava and on the chief place, the throat, reciting the 'Hṛdaya' hymn i.e. 'svāhā' (22). O Śive ! sacred ash should be besmeared on the bosom chanting the hymn Praṇava, on the abdomen chanting the hymn Pañcākṣara and on the navel, thigh, legs, feet and shank reciting the hymn Praṇava (23).

Wearing of Rudrākṣa

Then Guru himself should make the disciple wear the Rudrākṣa as per his capability. The initiation ceremony of Rudrākṣa and sacred ash are duly to be observed according to the customary tradition of the sect (24).

Worshipping Guru

O Goddess ! now the devotee should worship Guru with the gems, gold, cloths etc. as per the best of his capacity (25). Disciple should tie up the thread with the base of the toe of the right leg and should sit down holding the thread with two hands (26).

Preaching of Hymn

Now Guru should preach my hymn (Śiva hymn) in accordance with the rules and regulations of the sect (27). O Goddess ! thus Guru should carefully tie up the Iṣṭaliṅga on the body of the disciple after accomplishing the preliminary aspect of the ritual of initiation (28).

Wearing of Liṅgas in Accordance with Aspirations

Guru should tie up the Iṣṭaliṅga on the crown of the crest (tuft) of disciple seeking liberation, on the arms desiring the religious life, on the waist hankering for sex. O Dear ! all the desires are fulfilled if one ties up the Iṣṭaliṅga on the throat (29). Guru should tie up the Iṣṭaliṅga carefully on the body of the disciple reciting my great original hymn hundred and eight times (30). All the housewives should sing the auspicious songs. Various instruments are to be played on and other sacred festive rituals should be performed with grandeur as per capacity (31). Then disciple should bow down to Guru with devotion. Guru should bless the disciple keeping his hand on his head thus 'be endowed with son, wealth, property, strength and immense courage'. O Goddess ! thus obtaining the blessings from Guru, the disciple should worship the congregation of the Śivayogīs with devotion according to his capacity (32-33). They (Śivayogīs) should be worshipped bowing with devotion and offering money, cloth, betel etc.. Those who are the wearers of Liṅga should be offered the pure water, drinks and food etc. (34).

Initiated Disciple Ever Worships Liṅga

Thus the devotee obtaining the initiation according to his capability and devotion feels blessed and becomes immersed in ecstasy of Śiva. Then he should worship Iṣṭaliṅga regularly (35). He should always contemplate on his Soul, Guru, Liṅga and Śiva assuming them as the same entity and worship the Iṣṭaliṅga three times with the money earned by legitimate means (36). He should worship Iṣṭaliṅga atleast twice on dawn and dusk or once in a day regularly. One should never abandon the worship if in health. So also worship can never be forsaken if there is no calamity (37). If it (worship) is abandoned by any wretched person then he falls in awful Raurava hell. One should daily take bath with the sacred ash to accomplish all kinds of rituals (38). If one takes bath in order to be purified from the defilement caused by being touched, would be considered as sinner because he has worn my Liṅga which only is the extinguisher of all deeds of the world (39).

Discrimination of Caste and Creed Forbidden

For all Śivayogīs various differences of castes are non-existent rather means one and the same. So, he should think all the human beings of the world as his own brothers born of the same mother (40). According to Vīraśaivism, the difference between men and women, caste, creed and the classifications of men (Varṇāśrama) do not exist. Please know that this discipline of mine, namely, Vīraśaivism transcends all differences (41). O Goddess ! mere wearing of my Iṣṭaliṅga and worshipping it regularly fetch both enjoyment and liberation easily (42).

Glory of Worshipping Liṅga

O Śive ! such worshipper need not perform any other rite or duty. The greatest of all auspicious vows for him is to offer to me one Droṇa flower regularly. I shall be standing at his door as an attendant. Worshipping with Droṇa flower causes the attainment of my proximity (43-44). O Goddess ! If one offers me even a single Bilva leaf, I am not relieved for the crores of years from this indebtedness incurred upon me

(45). I specially reside undoubtedly in my Liṅga for ever. So, one should worship me on the Iṣṭaliṅga regularly with the sesamum, rice, Śamī leaf, Apāmārga, milk, Lotus, Dūrvā and other fragrant flowers and leaves. Thus no one should express the feeling of jealousy towards the Liṅgī-śivayogī since I remain in them (46-47). There should never be any discrimination among the Śivayogīs with regard to their age i.e. child, young and old etc. Wearers of Iṣṭaliṅga should express honour on seeing each other by standing and showing regard (48).

Non-discrimination Among the Wearers of Liṅga

They should greet each other. There is no difference at all between the wearers of Liṅga. Neither the rules of Brahmacaryā nor the regulations of Vānaprastha create any obstruction (49). If the devotee possesses intense attachment in worshipping the Liṅga, then there is no need of celibacy or detachment ; nor is it necessary to observe the ritual of shaving, to keep the crown of the crest and wear white or red clothes. Wearing one or more clothes is not obligatory for him, as he is considered to be the master of his own will (50).

Regular-Occasional-Purposive Worship

Normally the śiva-devotee should observe the worship of Istaliṅga as a regular duty. Ofcourse, there is the prescribed injunction for the special occasion. Worship in accordance with the intention of the devotee is involved there in. One should collect various items even while performing the regular daily worship (51-52). Worship is to be performed with the things available easily and as per capability. The occasion and the worship should also be performed in the aforesaid manner on the birthday when the stars are in the same position (53). On such an occasion, special anointments should duly be accomplished with the curd, honey, sugar, milk with thick consistency and ghee etc. as per capability. O the supreme Goddess ! my Liṅga, on such special occasion, is to be anointed with the water of the fruits, such as, coconut etc., food grains, butter, little sugar and Pañcāmṛtam (a mixture of five ingredients), five nector to the best of capacity (54-56). After anointing with the cold and pure water and offering incense, lamp and flower, some food also should duly be offered (57).

Worshipping of the Wearer of Liṅga

Now, the devotees, the wearers of the Liṅgas, should be offered food, Liṅga, clothes, śiva-thread and other things of their likings and be worshipped to the best of one's own ability (58). After fulfilling the worship with the gold, betel, flowers etc. as much as possible, the disciple should offer all the accessories of worship before Guru and utter 'I have surrendered every thing to you to the best of my capacity'; any other thing if desired by Guru should also be submitted to him (59-60). Thus the worship of the wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga should be performed with devotion and to the best of the capacity on the day of the birth and death of the Guru, when the positions of the stars are the same (60-61). If a genuine Śivayogī is not available, then worship should be performed only of the wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga, whether with or without righteous dispositions because mere wearing of Iṣṭaliṅga, besmearing of great sacred ash and wearing of Rudrākṣa. is considered to be the signs of Śivayogī. The worshipper of Śiva should be considered as possessing the nature of Śiva (61-63). O Goddess ! if the Śivayogī resides in a distant place, then he should be prayed to come over there and all the religious rituals should be performed considering such Śivayogī as possessing my nature. In case of non-availability of the householder-Śivayogī, the wearer of Liṅga may also be eligible for the performance of all religious rituals (64).

Rules for the Initiated

Devotee may perform special worship of Liṅga to the best of his ability. In case of inability, he should only observe the regular worship of Iṣṭaliṅga. The initiated person in Vīraśaivism should never cultivate the land. He should not dig the field with spade nor should he pierce or tie up any object. He should not carry the load on the head nor should he carry any light load on his head. If he wants to put anything on the head he should carry the flower; clotted hair and head gear may also be put on as decorations (65-67). One who is initiated in Vīraśaiva religion and wears the Iṣṭaliṅga awarded by Guru should never indulge in mean conduct or wretched behaviour (67-68).

Purposive Worship

Now I shall describe the prescribed rules for special desired rituals for the wearer of Liṅga. If he is living with yoginī (female counter part), he should observe some auspicious vows. Droṇa flowers are to be collected on Monday, consecrated with Pañcākṣara and then offered to me one by one gradually chanting the Pañcākṣara hymn. Thus one thousand Droṇa flowers are duly to be offered daily as per prescribed rule for one year (68-71). He should keep fast for the whole day and take food in the evening after having seen the stars. Such observance will result in obtaining the wealth and son; and he will undoubtedly be of the nature of Śiva (71-72). Performance of worship with Bilva-leaves imparts both the enjoyment and liberation, worship with Dūrvā grants the honour of king and worship with the Lotus fulfils all desires, worship with the Tulsi leaves destroys the enemy and worship with the Dhatūrā flower eradicates all diseases, worship with the Śami leaves extinguishes the enemies and the sesamum and rice imparts the fame and reputation (72-74). O the supreme Goddess ! one should take bath in a lake in the dusk which is full to the brim on the day of Śivarātri and worship the Iṣṭaliṅga installing it on the palm of the left hand (74-75). One who longs for daughter should worship with the flowers and leaves of Arka, who hankers for alluring power should worship with the Śami leaves, who aspires for liberation, with the Bilva-leaves and one who intends to fulfil all desires should worship with the Droṇa flowers. For enchanting the king and gaining potency one should worship the Iṣṭaliṅga with the Dūrvā and blue Lotus respectively (75-76). O dear ! one who hankers for hypnotic power should worship with white Lotus, desirous for everything with the Lotus ; yearns for son with the Pāṭal flowers and one who wants to destroy the enemy should worship the Iṣṭaliṅga with the flowers and leaves of Arka (77). Wisdom is attained if Iṣṭaliṅga is worshipped with the Karavīr flower, knowledge with the Punnāga flower and wealth is obtained if the Iṣṭaliṅga is worshipped with Kurantak flower. Enemies are annihilated provided the worship is performed with the Dhaturā flower (78). Worshipping with the flower of mango eliminates the effect of poison ; the wealth of cattle is increased with the Madhuk, friendship is acquired by worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga with the Champaka flower and the Nīpaj flower is the bestower of wealth (79). Worshipping with the flower of Jātiphal grants the enjoyment and the creeper of Mallī enriches with the wealth. For the

Welcoming the Guest

Guests and Śivayogīs are to be worshipped with the grains as per the best of the capacity (81). They should carefully be satisfied with the seasonal things available at the time. O Śive ! they should be honoured by standing while seeing them coming and should be sent off respectfully while retiring. They are to be saluted with devotion and addressed with sweet words and should be worshipped by offering seat, food and drinks as far as one's capability (82-83). If one is unable to adore them with the aforesaid ingredients, they should be welcomed and shown respect atleast with modesty (83-84). If the guest returns from the house with a feeling of humiliation or disappointment, then he takes away along with himself all the earned results of the auspicious rites of purposive, sacrificial and philanthropic deeds of the house holder (84-85).

O the consort of Maheśa ! I wander on the earth assuming the form of Jaṅgama (ardent devotee) to shower the grace on the true devotees. So, the Śivayogīs should be worshipped with devotion to the utmost of one's capacity (85-86).

Worship of Jaṅgama

O the daughter of the mountain ! one who knows these Śivayogīs thoroughly, undoubtedly knows me. Blessed is he who worships the Jaṅgamas coming home in the evening (87). If one leads his life in a disciplined way on whatever is easily available and pays regards to the Jaṅgamas devotedly with the remaining portion of whatever he could save from the domestic life, in a way, worships me (88).

Maintaining the Needy

O Goddess ! such devotees should be entertained with bed, seat and food considering them as my own form. Notwithstanding the state of being helpless, ill, poor, dumb, deaf, lame, dull and deprived, the wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga should never be humiliated (89-90).

Duties Obligatory for Śivayogī

O Goddess ! Śivayogīs should not quarrel among themselves. They should never indulge in complaining, accusing each other, also should not possess jealousy, inflict pain on others. They should never touch the arms even at the risk of losing their lives (90-91). O Śive ! the tree having the signs of Śivaliṅga<sup>2</sup> should not be cut. Climbing on such tree, evacuating the bowels or passing water beneath it are also prohibited (92). If the dry wood of the tree possesses the sign of Śivaliṅga, that should never be used as the fuel. Stone, bull and tree, if seen on road, possessing the sign of Śivaliṅga, one should pass further keeping them on the right. Such Śivayogī should not travel on chariot, horse, elephant or bull (93-94). Wearer of Śivaliṅga, if desires, may travel freely by putting on the sandal and shoe. The dead bull bearing the sign of Śivaliṅga, if seen, should duly be buried in the earth (95). It should be saved from the flesh hungry dogs. Śivayogī who is initiated in Śaiva religion should not worship an uninitiated person (96). He should not expect to be worshipped by non-liṅgī person. He should get himself worshipped only by the wearer of Liṅga. The relation of worshipper and worshipped is to be maintained only between the wearers of Liṅga (97). He should not be afraid nor should he scare others. This should be the code of conduct among the wearers of Liṅga. One who has abandoned my principle can never be equal to my followers (98). Non-liṅgī is not eligible to maintain the relation between the worshipper and the worshipped and also not fit for worshipping Śiva. So, O dear ! during adoration, worship, holy vision, preaching, communion, congregation (of holy people), conversation, group feeding, sleeping, travelling in the same vehicle, the state of happiness and misery, it is prescribed that the Liṅgī devotees should only be related with the wearers of Liṅga (99-101). O Goddess ! the non-wearer of Liṅga is not considered to be pure, even if endowed with the various knowledges and enriched with many sources and means (101-102). The wearer of Liṅga is considered to be superior to the non-wearer, even if he is cultured or uncultured, devotee or non-devotee, as the gold is superior to all metals. What is the use of saying much? Please listen to the essence of my doctrine (Vīraśaivism) from me (103).

Supremacy of the Doctrine of Vīraśaivism

The essence of all doctrines is to take refuge in my discipline which is the most beneficial for all men, as I am the supreme of all the deities and you are the sinless among all women (104). As the liberation is the highest of all to be attained, so Śaiva doctrine is the best among all the principles. Śaiva doctrine is seven-fold and Vīraśaiva is the supreme among all (105). O Goddess ! one can not obtain happiness without taking refuge in Vīraśaivism. So, one should accept the principle of Śaivism with all efforts (106). One should specially take refuge in the Vīraśaiva order. So, O Goddess ! thus I have described to you the nature and religious rites to be observed in the supreme religion of Vīraśaivism. Now, what more you desire to listen (107)?.

2. See chapter IX of Candrajñānāgama. There are sixteen procedures of ‘Śivācāra’. Symbol of Nandī and Śivaliṅga are to be scribed on the things used in worship. So, Śivaliṅga should be scribed on the Bilvatrees and the tree should be regarded as Śiva Himself and never be pierced into.

Chapter - 6

THE NATURE OF SIX STHALAS

Goddess enquires —

O the supreme God, the omnipresent, the possessor of matted hair, ocean of mercy, bearer of the arch of Meru ! kindly narrate to me the characteristics and knowledge of Ṣaṭasthalas and its results (1).

God replies —

O Goddess ! please listen. I shall describe the nature of Ṣaṭasthalas by knowing which one immediately becomes Śiva, there is no doubt in it (2). O the strict observer of the religious virtues ! this knowledge should be preserved in such a way as a poor man protects his belongings or the woman guards her chastity (3). Person who is devoid of the devotion of Śiva, involved in misconduct, atheist and evil, should never be advised about the stages of Ṣaṭasthalas (4).

God Manifested as Six-sthalas

I am alone, the supreme bliss, the supreme self, the Sadāśiva ; again by operating the power of māyā I assume the six-fold manifestations (5). Vīraśaiva initiation is a Kalpavṛkṣa (the celestial tree that fulfils all desires), as a fruit of which I have produced the Ṣaṭasthalas which is the principal means of liberation (6). I am the creator of the world which again immerses in me. Please know me as the substratum (sthala), six are the manifestations of mine (7).

Ṣaṭasthalas

Bhakta, Māheśvara, Prasādī, Prāṇalingī, Śaraṇa and Śivaliṅgaikya are the six sthalas that are esteemed by me (8).

Bhaktasthala

In Guru, Jaṅgama and Iṣṭaliṅga, it is my nature only that is revealed in phases. One who worships these three manifestations of mine, is famous as Bhaktasthala (9). Such Bhaktasthala represents the element of Earth. This is my unique manifestation (the manifestation of Śiva as the Earth is the first among the eight phases of manifestations), as I am its presiding deity. O Goddess ! there is no doubt in it (10). O Goddess ! one who worships the Jaṅgama, the image of mine, really worships me, as Jaṅgama is my own form. So, one who worships Jaṅgama worships me there is no doubt in it (11). So, O Śive ! one who adores the divine soul like Jaṅgama to the best of his capacity, please know him as Bhaktasthala. He is very dear to me (12).

Māheśvarasthala

One who remains involved in worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga in accordance with the instruction laid down by Guru and adores the Jaṅgamas as per the best of his capacity, is known as Māheśvara (13). O dear ! one who worships Iṣṭaliṅga for three times, respectful to my devotees and observes virtuous deeds duly prescribed in the religion of Vīraśaivism, is called the Māheśvara (14). O Goddess ! this Māheśvarasthala is the representative of the water element, the unique image of mine. I myself is its presiding deity, there is no doubt in it (15). O Śive ! one who remains absorbed in observing all righteous duties as mentioned earlier and duly worships the Jaṅgamas as per prescribed rules, is known as Māheśvarasthala who is esteemed to me (16).

Prasādīsthala

O the consort of the Maheśa ! one who never takes his food prior to offering me and without worshipping the Jaṅgamas and never discards the left over of the food offered to me, is known as Prasādī. He is undoubtedly the form of mine. O Śive ! know him as Prasādīsthala who is very dear to me (17-18). O Goddess ! this Prasādīsthala is unique in nature and represents the fire element (Agni) which is the form of mine. I myself is its presiding deity, undoubtedly I am that (19).

Prāṇaliṅgīsthala

One who has the realisation of the Prāṇa as Liṅga and Iṣṭaliṅga as Śiva i.e. one who has realised the truth that Prāṇa, Liṅga and Śiva are one and the same, is known as Prāṇaliṅgī (20). O Goddess ! one who meditates on the subtle nature of Prāṇaliṅga is called the Prāṇaliṅgī and is undoubtedly the Rudra himself. This is called Prāṇalingīsthala and is very dear to me (21). This represents the air element which is the unique fourth form of mine. I am its presiding deity, undoubtedly I am that (22).

Śaraṇasthala

One who is free from three kinds of desires, viz., desires of son, wealth and fame, always lives in solitude and ever remains absorbed in meditating on me, is famous as Śaraṇa (23). One who is eligible to the state of Śaraṇa becomes Śiva after shedding the body. O Śive ! such state is called the Śaraṇasthala which is very esteemed by me (24). O Goddess ! this represents the Ākāśa element (space) and is the unique fifth form of mine. I remain as its presiding deity, undoubtedly I am that (25).

Śivaliṅgaikyasthala

O Śive ! the state in which worship, meditation, yoga, karaṇa<sup>1</sup> etc. do not remain a necessity, when the Śivaliṅgī becomes immersed in the contemplation-‘everything is Me, there remains nothing apart from Me’, is called the stage of ‘Śivaliṅgaikya’ (26). O Śive ! one who attains the state of 'identity' with Paramaśiva is named as 'Aikyasthala', who is very dear to me (27). O Śive ! such Śivaikyasthala is of the nature of Sākṣī and the noumenal nature of mine. Please know him as a manifestation of Mine. Yogī who has attained the state of Śivaikya is identical with Me, there is no doubt in it (28).

Glory of the Knowledge of Ṣaṭasthala

Thus these six stages of sthalas are the mystic states of the supreme Reality, knowing which one becomes immediately free from the cycle of birth and death (29). O the supreme Goddess ! the realisation of the six sthalas is rare for the celestial deities also. No body other than me has any knowledge about it (30). As I am bound with your affection and so, I submit the knowledge of Ṣaṭasthala to you (31).

Six-fold Aspects of Maheśvara

O the consort of Maheśa ! now, I unfold a unique mystery to you that the supreme Soul Maheśvara has six aspects (32). Omniscience,

सर्वज्ञता तृप्तिरनादिबोधः स्वतन्त्रता नित्यमलुप्तशक्तिः ।
 अनन्तशक्तिश्च विभोर्विधिज्ञाः षडाहुरङ्गानि महेश्वरस्य ॥३३॥
 यद्भक्तस्थलमित्याहुस्तत्सर्वज्ञत्वमुच्यते ।
 यन्महेश्वरकं नाम सा तृप्तिर्मम शाङ्करि ॥३४॥
 यत्प्रसादाभिधं स्थानं तद्बोधो मे निरङ्कुशः ।
 यत्प्राणलिङ्गकं नाम तत्स्वातन्त्र्यमुदाहृतम् ॥३५॥
 यदस्ति शरणज्ञानमलुप्ता शक्तिरुच्यते ।
 यदैक्यस्थानमूर्ध्वस्थं शक्त्यनन्तेशिता मम ॥३६॥
 १३ एतदङ्गस्थलं देवि गुह्याद् गुह्यतमं परम् ।
 एतानि मम चाङ्गानि चक्षुरादीन्यसंशयम् ॥३७॥
 एतदङ्गस्थलज्ञानं यदि पुंसां महात्मनाम् ।
 सहुरोरुपदेशेन वर्तते स परः शिवः ॥३८॥
 न यस्याङ्गपरिज्ञानं नाङ्गाङ्गिभावबोधनम् । न तेन लभ्यते मुक्तिर्दूरस्था हि यतः शिवे ॥३९॥

complacency, eternal consciousness, freedom, eternally manifested power and infinite immanent power are the six aspects of the Maheśvara as depicted by the learned ones<sup>2</sup> (33). O Śāṅkari ! the Bhaktasthala is known as the state of omnipotence of Śiva. The Māheśvarasthala is the aspect named as 'Tripti' of Maheśvara (34). The Prasādisthala is the state of uninterrupted consciousness of Śiva and the Prāṇalingīsthala is the aspect of Śiva named as 'Svātantra' (35). Śaraṇasthala is the state of manifested power of Śiva. The supreme state, namely, Aikya is the form of mine, namely, Anantaśakti (36). O Goddess ! the aforesaid six sthalas are called the Aṅgasthalas which is the supreme and most secret among all the secrets. Undoubtedly, these are not other than my sense organs, viz., eyes etc. (i.e. they represent five sense organs and mind) (37). The pious souls who attain the knowledge of these Aṅgasthalas through the instruction of the divine Guru become the supreme Śiva (38). O Śive ! one who does not achieve the knowledge of Aṅgas and is not aware of the inseparable relation between Aṅga and Aṅgī can not attain the liberation, as he remains far from that (39).

Six-fold Upāṅgas

O Śive ! now I shall tell you something special, please listen to me attentively. There are six Upāṅgas like Bhakti etc., apart from the aforesaid six āṅgas which are considered to be the bestower of the supreme state (40). Bhakti, cessation of all deeds, intellect, thought, annihilation of pride and true knowledge are called the six Upāṅgasthalas which are very dear to me (41).

Bhakti

As the mind of the lascivious remains attached with the adulteress, the mind of the poor remains engrossed in the treasures that is obtained all of a sudden, so also, O the supreme Goddess ! the mind of whom becomes detached from the objects of the desire and is attached with me, the God, as the genuine sāttvik affection, is named as the pure devotion (42-43). O Goddess ! devotion is both the mother and father for such devotee. It is both the 'Kāmadhenu' and 'Kalpavṛkṣa' for him. O the goddess of all ! please know that devotion is the nectar in your hand (44). All the efforts of the person who is devoid of devotion become fruitless. He can not attain an adorable state after death rather takes birth in the species of dog in future (45). All worships, japas and other rites of a person who is devoid of devotion are futile, as a widow can never be considered auspicious by wearing even the sacred thread. He has to suffer the bondage owing to the deeds performed in the previous lives. Such deeds may easily be exonerated by the pure devotion (46-47).

Cessation of Actions

The deeds of the past originated from the evil intention and the deeds of the present, both are eradicated by the power of devotion (48).

Buddhi

O Goddess ! intellect becomes pure as a result of the cessation of the bondage of action (karma). It, then, becomes firmly steady in Me, the supreme Self instead of being inclined towards the objects (49). O the graceful ! one whose pure intellect becomes embedded to me, the

 ध्यायतो विषयान् पुंसः सङ्गस्तेषु<sup>१५</sup>पजायते ॥५१॥

४. विचारलक्षणम्

तया गुरुक्तवाक्यार्थचिन्तनं निश्चयो हृदि ।
 हिताहितविवेकस्य<sup>१७</sup> विचारः स उदाहृतः ॥५४॥
 विना गुरुक्तवाक्यार्थविचारं न प्रयोजनम् ।
 विचारेणैव जानाति सकलं च शुभाशुभम् ॥५५॥

Śaṅkar, the lord of all, attains me, as the insect is transformed into a bee (due to constant companionship)<sup>3</sup> (50). One whose intellect is not undefiled, always craves for the objects. Pondering over the worldly objects produces attachment<sup>4</sup> (51). Attachment produces the sensuality, sensuality produces the anger, anger produces the delusion and delusion ruptures the memory (52). Because of the ruptures of the memory the intellect is defiled and the defilement of the intellect leads to all round devastation. So, one whose pure intellect is attached to me, attains me (53).

Thought

Contemplating on the significance of the instruction of Guru, one attains the capacity to discriminate between the good and evil which is termed as thought (54). Contemplation on any other subject barring the significance of the instruction of Guru does not bear any fruit. One is able to know all the auspicious and inauspicious matters by the instruction of Guru (55).

भक्तादिसर्वज्ञत्वादि भक्त्यादिक्रमशः शिवे ॥६०॥

Removal of Pride

Thus reflecting on the scriptures as per the instruction of Guru, one attains the knowledge of mine as the Lord of the universe as well as the knowledge of the nature of his ownself which annihilates his pride (56).

Real Knowledge

O the daughter of the mountain ! when the vanity is eradicated, he is immersed in the knowledge of Śiva. Then real knowledge dawns soon (57). On attaining the true knowledge one perceives all beings inhering in one's ownself and one's ownself in Me. Such person who realises this unity is known as the true knower and attains the nature of mine (58). O the consort of Maheśa ! one who knows the phenomenal world of animate and inanimate as the nature of mine, the supreme Self, is called the true knower (59).

Relatedness of Aṅga and Upāṅga

O Śive ! the aforesaid six Upāṅgas, viz., devotion etc. and the six Sthalas, viz., Bhakta etc., six forms (Aṅgas) of Śiva viz., the omniscience,

यस्य सर्वज्ञता भक्तिर्या तृप्तिः कर्मसंक्षया ।
 अनादिबोधो या<sup>१०</sup> बुद्धिर्विचारो मे स्वतन्त्रता ॥६१॥
 अलुप्तशक्तिरिति या सा च मे गर्वसंक्षया<sup>११</sup> ।
 अनन्तशक्तिरिति मे सम्यग्ज्ञानं ददाति सा ॥६२॥

 परित्यज्याथ महताऽहङ्कारं स शिवो भवेत् । ऊर्मिवर्गभयं यस्य न स मुक्तो न संशयः ॥६६॥

etc. are all related to each other (60). Omniscience is devotion, contentment is the cessation of the action (karma), knowledge of beginninglessness is the intellect, freedom is the thinking, eternally manifested power is the eradication of vanity and my infinite power is the bestower of the true knowledge (61-62).

Ṣaṭasthala

O Goddess ! thus one who knows the six Sthalas as inherent in the Aṅga and Upāṅga is undoubtedly Śiva Himself (63). O the supreme Goddess ! six folds Sthalas i.e. Bhakta etc., six omnisciences etc. and the six Bhakta etc. are known as the legs, arms, head and the whole body of Śiva or the six parts of the Bhaktas (64). After attaining this knowledge of Sthalas from Guru one becomes free from all kinds of surges and six types of inimical forces (65). By eliminating the ego one becomes Śiva Himself. The devotee who has no fear of devastating surges (of life), undoubtedly attains liberation (66).

 तदूर्मिषट्कमरिषड्वर्गं त्यक्त्वा विमुच्यते ॥७२॥

Six Waves

O the consort of Maheśa ! hunger-thirst, sorrow-attachment and birth-death are the six waves or ripples of the ocean of the world. As the waves of the sea are incessantly coming out, so also the six surges always create sufferings to the worldly people (67). Hunger and thirst, sorrow and attachment, birth and death are the characteristic features of the life-principle, mind and body respectively. These are the six surges (68). They cause misery both by their relation and separation. Incessantly they come and go and never allow anybody to remain in peace (69). Since they are of the nature of waves of the ocean and so are called the 'waves'. They always inflict sufferings on the human being and regarding this matter inimical six propensities connive with them (70).

Six-fold Enemies

Sex, anger, greed, delusion, pride and envy are the six inimical categories (71). As they are antagonistic like the enemies and so they are called the six inimical categories. One who conquers these six enemies along with the aforesaid six fold surges, achieves liberation (72).

Different Means

There is the hierarchy among the Upāṅgas right from the six Aṅgas, viz., Bhakta etc. to the true knowledge. Among them the former sthalas are considered to be the means and the later ones are known as the end (73). Freedom is easily accessible to one who is devoid of six waves or surges, having true knowledge and is adept in the knowledge of six sthalas (74). O Goddess ! the devotee who has intense love for me also becomes dear to me. So, one who is endowed with the above characteristics is me (Śiva), there is no doubt in it (75). O the daughter of Himālaya ! the ardent devotee who has been initiated in Vīraśaiva religion on account of the virtues acquired by the deeds of the past lives, should sing my glory with the praising for thrice a day (76).

Praising the Glory of Śiva

I bow unto Śiva, Rudra. I bow unto Śiva who is of the nature of 'aum'. I bow unto the Śivaliṅga which is manifested as Bhaktasthala (77). I bow unto the Śivaliṅga manifested as the Māheśasthala who puts

I bow unto the Śivaliṅga manifested as the Prāṇaliṅgasthala possessing the pure lustre of the crystal (80). I bow unto the Śivaliṅga manifested as the Śaraṇasthala having blue throat, is eternal, unblemish and the supreme Self (81). I bow unto the Śivaliṅga manifested as the Aikyasthala who bears trident stag and hatchet in the three hands and assumes the posture of 'Abhaya' by the fourth hand (82). I bow unto that omniscient Śivaliṅga who is the destroyer of the sacrificial ritual of Dakṣa and the annihilator of the demon Andhak (83). I bow unto the Śivaliṅga, the Lord of Pārvaṭī, who is all pervasive transcendent, supreme and ever contented (84). I bow unto the Śiva who is of the nature of Veda, the wearer of an armour of

I bow unto the Śivaliṅga, the eternally manifested power, the bearer of moon in his (matted) hair and having the lustre of the thousands of moon (87). I bow unto the Śiva, the possessor of infinite power who is the resident of the mount Kailāśa and annihilator of the demon Tripura (88). I bow unto the Śivaliṅga who himself is the form of devotion, from whose breathe the Vedas are revealed<sup>5</sup> and who is the protector of the three Vedas as a witness (89). I bow unto the Śiva who is adored by the lotus-born Brahmā and having matted hair. I bow unto you, the Śivaliṅga who assumes the form of Upāṅga-karma-kṣaya (cessation of action) (90). I bow unto you who is adorned with the sons like Gaṇeśa and Skanda. I bow unto the Śivaliṅga as the manifestation of intellect (Mahat) (91). I bow unto the Śivaliṅga, the substratum of the universe, of the nature of all, the Lord of the creation and dissolution, of the nature of true knowledge (94). I bow unto the Śivaliṅga who is of the nature of eternal consciousness, the form of existence-consciousness-bliss and of the nature of divine opulence (95). I bow unto the supreme omnipotent Śivaliṅga, the conqueror of death, Rudra, valient, possessor of three eyes and three images (96). I bow unto you, the great illustrious Śivaliṅga, most judicious and the essence of Veda and known by the wisdom of Vedas and Upaniṣads (97). I bow unto the Śivaliṅga, the possessor of the three eyes, namely, moon, sun and fire named as Aṣṭamūrti (eight-fold images) and endowed with the supreme splendours (98). I bow unto the Śivaliṅga, the formless, omniscient creator of all, endowed with six kalās (six-fold manifestations), namely, Nivṛtti, Pratiṣṭhā, Vidyā, Śānti, Śāntyātīta, Śāntyātītottarā and of the nature of

I bow unto the Śivaliṅga who is endowed with the six-fold forms (aṅgas), bestower of six kinds of fortunes, I bow unto you, the image of liberation and the basis of liberation (101). I bow unto the Śivaliṅga who is beyond the twenty four elements (categories) and at the same time immanent in all the twenty four elements and is, therefore, known as the twenty fifth element (102). I bow unto Śaṅkar, the supreme among the gods who assumes the posture of 'Varada' (boon), bears the stag, hatchet and again assumes the posture of 'Abhaya' (assurance of fearlessness) with his fourth hand, whose crown of the head is adorned with moon, accompanied by the daughter of the mountain, having the delicate, unblemished body like Dūrvā. I bow unto Śaṅkar who is of the nature of Omkāra (103).

Result of Singing the Glory of God

O Śive ! thus to the devotee who sings my glory daily for three times, everything seen by him as Śiva. There is no doubt in it (104). O

Goddess ! one who perceives everything as Śiva, there remains nothing else to be known beyond Him. Undoubtedly he achieves me (105). One who sings the glory of mine, the Lord of all, with the above praises, attains the status of Śivasāyujya, the imperishable state, on leaving the body (106). O Śive ! one who contemplates and reflects on the truth listening it from the mouth of Guru, is never thrown again in the sea of suffering, namely, the world (107). If one desires to achieve happiness, then he should only take the help of this procedure with all sincerity leaving everything aside (108). O Goddess ! thus I have already told you the supreme knowledge of the special features and the achievements of the six-fold Sthalas. What else you want to listen to ? (109).

 the propounder of Śaiva non-dualism narrating the features of six-fold Sthalas while describing the procedure of initiation ॥ 6 ॥*

SEVEN-FOLD ŚAIVA DISCIPLINES

Goddess enquires –

O Śaṅkar ! the enjoyer of boating in the waveless sea of bliss, I bow unto you. Thou art the immutable, undifferentiated Śambhu and the bestower of happiness on all (1). You have preached me earlier about the various doctrines of seven kinds that are seven-fold doctrines of Śaivism including Vīraśaivism etc. (2). Now, please preach me the characteristics of the various doctrines, viz., Anādi etc. by knowing which people immediately enter into the Vīraśaiva discipline (3).

God replies —

O Goddess ! please listen attentively the glory, characteristics and the conduct of my doctrines, namely, the Anādiśaivism etc. (4).

1. Nature of Anādiśaiva

How can an unwise person attain liberation by mere entering into the Śaiva discipline without having the true knowledge of my nature and without the grace of mine, the Śambhu (5) ? One achieves the eligibility to enter into this discipline owing to the virtues acquired by the past deeds. Then wise should be alert with firm determination (6). Disciple should follow the code of conduct as per the scriptures interpreted by Guru. He should adhere to the path instructed by Guru and should never abandon it despite of the risk to life (7). Devotee should worship the Iṣṭaliṅga regularly for three times a day without weariness and adore the Jaṅgamas by providing them foodgrain, water etc. to the best of his capacity (8). One who feels happy to acquire the things and unhappy to loose it like common people is neither aware of the bondage nor of liberation. He should take refuge in the discipline of Anādiśaiva (9). One who observes the atonement to exonerate the misdeeds done in delusion, indulges in good conduct on getting good result and indulges in bad conduct on getting bad result are eligible for the Anādiśaiva discipline (10). One who does not want to stop here, rather aspires to know something special should accept the discipline of Ādiśaiva (10-11). Accepting the spiritual hierarchy of the Śaivism one should enter into the Ādiśaiva discipline for securing special knowledge (11).

2. Nature of Ādiśaiva

O Goddess ! Ādiśaiva should adore the Jaṅgamas who have come to his house with food etc. as per his capacity and worship the Iṣṭaliṅga for three times in accordance with the Śaiva discipline (12). O Śive ! Ādiśaiva should follow the procedure duly prescribed in the scriptures. Ofcourse, some relaxation may be allowed in case of inability. He should not observe the rites that he is not able to follow. Such Ādiśaiva is superior to Anādiśaiva (13).

3. Nature of Anuśaiva

One who worships the Iṣṭaliṅga once in a day and also worships Jaṅgamas and ever remains absorbed in meditating on me is named as Anuśaiva (14). Knowledge remains in abundance in him and he remains absorbed in studying the scriptures to secure the peace of mind. He lays more emphasis on knowledge and so does not observe much of rituals (15). He, among the various doctrines, attains a special ability by his intelligence. Having control over senses, with cool mind, such person gradually goes on accepting the higher and higher doctrines (16). Dullard can never dare to take refuge in the higher discipline. One who does so, falls down into the vicious hell as one slips and falls down from the top of the tree (17). One who gradually proceeds to the higher realm by steadily acquiring the spiritual capabilities, overcomes all miseries in such a way as a strong and stout tree is capable to stand the velocity of the flood (18).

4. Nature of Mahāśaiva

Now, I am describing the discipline of Mahāśaiva. One who adheres to this discipline of Mahāśaiva religion never accepts the food without worshipping and surrendering it to the Jaṅgamas (19). O Śive ! he surrenders his bed and seat to Śiva as the offerings of the worship before using it for himself. He remains ever engrossed in worshipping Śiva leaving aside all other sensuous enjoyments (20).

5. Nature of Yogaśaiva

The whole movable and immovable world is of the nature of Śiva. One who is capable of identifying himself with this (thought) should live in the discipline of Yogaśaiva (21). In the Yogaśaiva discipline of mine, there remains no need of external worships, ritualistic performances, worshipping of Jaṅgamas and standing on the arrival of others (in order to pay the respect) (22). Such Yogaśaiva lives in an isolated place, relinquishes the cravings of the wealth. He is non-attached and non-egoistic and remains absorbed in meditating and contemplating himself as Śiva (23). He perceives the whole world as Liṅga and the Liṅga as Śiva. One who is established in the discipline of Yogaśaiva ever meditates on my supreme Self (24).

6. Nature of Jñānaśaiva

O Goddess ! the characteristic features of Jñānaśaiva is that it regards the knowledge that the whole universe is of the nature of Śiva. This knowledge is known as the Mahājñāna, the supreme knowledge (25). O dear ! there is no need of meditation, rigorous efforts, worship of Jaṅgamas, Liṅga and practice of Yoga for my devotee who is firmly established in the discipline of Jñānaśaiva (26). O the Goddess of world ! when the Jñānaśaiva devotee leads his life as per the aforesaid devout practices becomes Śiva Himself in this life, there is no doubt in it (27). These various disciplines should duly be considered as the hierarchical states as that of the ladder. One who acts contrary to it, undoubtedly falls (28). If one follows the previous stage instead of adhering to the ascending order owing to any inability, undoubtedly falls (29). In order to attain the authority of the path of knowledge one should duly observe the rituals prescribed in the scriptures. He should only abandon the religious rites on attaining the matured state of the knowledge, not otherwise (30). If one abandons the observance of rites and rituals even prior to the attainment of the right of the path of knowledge, is never able to shed the miseries. He always swims and sinks into the world of objects and desires (31).

Similarities and Dissimilarities Among Doctrines

Initiation, sacrificial rites, rules of conduct and devotion are common to all disciplines (32). O dear ! regular worship of Iṣṭaliṅga and adoration of Jaṅgamas are the necessary regular duties among the various disciplines. So also, the devotion is inevitable in all Śaiva disciplines (33). Righteous deeds is considered to be the greatest means in Anādiśaiva discipline where as constant remembrance of God is regarded as the principal means in Ādiśaiva discipline (34). For the adherers of Anuśaiva, contemplation is considered to be the principal means. Firm determination is the supreme path for the highest attainment of Mahāśaiva (35). One who is established in Yogaśaiva discipline considers the eight fold means of yoga as the essential path. The adherers of the Jñānaśaiva always meditate on knowledge (36).

Vīraśaiva Discipline

One who is firmly established in Vīraśaiva discipline observes both knowledge and yoga as the means, since yoga without knowledge and knowledge without yoga can never be accomplished (37). One is not able to cross the ocean of the world and is deviated without the knowledge and yoga even if one takes shelter in Vīraśaiva discipline, there is no doubt in it (38). Person who shows gallantry in war is called brave but in Vīraśaivism, one is endowed with this epithet only on the basis of devotion not because of enmity, valour or any other work (39).

Prohibition of Non-vegetarian Food

O Goddess ! the worshipper of Iṣṭaliṅga never eats meat nor accepts any undesirable drinks. He does not eat anything non-eatable despite of unavoidable circumstances (40). Vīraśaiva house holder does not cook food only for himself nor does he take food without offering it to the guest and adore Jaṅgama to the best of his capability who has come to his house (41). One should not accept the food of non-liṅgī nor should he take the food seen by the non-liṅgī. If the non-liṅgī comes home and demands the food, he should be offered (42). Wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga should be careful in the matter that he should never be indifferent, jealous, violent or deceitful towards the followers of other disciplines (43). Regarding the relationship of worshipper and wor-

Hospitality

The householder who humbly entertains one who has come to his house in the same way whether he is an honourable or an ordinary person, is considered to be great person. One who behaves contrary to it, can never be called so (45). Liṅgī should show respect to the guest seeing him coming to his house by standing and paying obeisance. He should felicitate him by fanning to ease his fatigue (46). He should welcome the guest by bowing to him, washing his feet and worshipping him with incenses and flowers and again washing his feet (47). He should contemplate Rudra on his (guest's) thumb of the feet, Śaṅkar on the first finger, Mahādeva on the middle finger and Tryambaka on the ring finger (48). Īśāna on the little finger, Kapardi on upper side of the feet, Pañcavadana on lower side of the feet and on the muscles of both the legs Ugra and Bharga are to be contemplated (49). Thus Liṅgī should wash the feet of the Jaṅgama with water, thinking his feet as the form of Liṅga, then drink a little of that water and sprinkle it on his head (50). Not a single drop of water washing the feet of Jaṅgama should be allowed to fall on the ground. Thus, after drinking the water washing his feet, the householder should again worship his feet with incense, flower and incense stick gradually (51). The guest should always be adored whether male or female. It is customary that the male is to be adored by male and female by female by offering incenses etc. in the hand (52). O Śive ! caste discrimination is non-existent among the yogīs of the wearers of Liṅga. Defilement on account of seeing and touching is also not accepted because according to the discipline of Vīraśaivism everything here is pervaded by Śiva (53).

Eight-fold Protective Aura

O Goddess ! the Vīraśaiva is he who adores Guru, Liṅga, Jaṅgama, obtains Pādatīrtha and Prasāda, besmears the sacred ash, wears Rudrākṣas and recites my Pañcākṣara hymn i.e. those who are endowed with these eight protective aura, wander in this world only as my form (54-55).

लिङ्गिनां पालनीया नियमाः

 नाश्नीत <sup>१५</sup>दद्यात्पक्वं च स्वस्यान्यस्य यथारुचि । अपक्वं न पिबेत् तोयमलिङ्गिस्पृष्टमीश्वरि ॥६१॥

Observances for Liṅgī

The left over food taken by Jaṅgama should never be considered defiled and discarded nor the vessel should be cleaned. Such left over of food should not be thought as different from that of Śiva (56). In case of want of vessel, other liṅgīs also may take food on the same vessel once used by a liṅgī for the purpose of taking food (57). If liṅgī aspires happiness in life, he should not adopt the profession of Brahmin, Kṣatriya, Vaiśya and Śudra (58). If liṅgī obtains his food easily and in a pleasing manner, then he should neither accept donation and lone nor should he collect articles. If he does not get food easily, then he may receive alms (59). O Goddess ! he should accept the cooked food only from the liṅgī householder, not from non-liṅgī, but he can gladly accept the uncooked food from other castes (60). O Goddess ! one should not give food cooked by him to others nor should he accept the food cooked by others. Uncooked food may be exchanged as per one's will. Thus the water should not be accepted if it is touched by non-liṅgī (61). O Goddess ! the food and drink touched by the wearer of Liṅga is considered to be fit for taking, even if he (the liṅgī) happens to be a Cāṇḍāl (lowest of categories). But it is not so for a non-liṅgī, even if he belongs to the highest caste (62). One should aspire and try for the food from the wearer of Liṅga. If not possible, then uncooked food may be demanded from non-liṅgī (63). O dear ! curd, ghee, milk, yoghurt etc. are not considered impure, even if cooked. Discrimination of castes regarding the cooking of the milk-mades should not be done (64). Water, touched with the rays of the sun, is not worthy for the worship of Śiva. So, the water should be collected at night before the sunrise (65). The reflection of the rays of sun should not fall on the water contained in the pot. So, the edge of the pot should tightly be covered after collecting the water for the worship (66). O Śive ! the water pot should not be kept on other than the place of worship. If kept on other place, then it becomes impure. Such impure water should be discarded (67). O the daughter of the mountain ! if the wearer of Liṅga performs worships with the leaves and flowers collected by the non-wearer of Liṅga, then he suffers in the vicious hell, namely, Raurava (68).

O Goddess ! if the worship is performed with the ingredients brought by an impure liṅgī, then also one has to suffer in the Raurava hell (69). O Śive ! every wearer of Liṅga should get up in the early morning, get himself purified by washing, besmear the sacred ash and wear Rudrākṣa, chant the Pañcākṣarī hymn and recite my name (70).

Collection of Flowers

O Goddess ! devotee should observe silence, refrain from other activities and without looking in other directions, pick up the flowers contemplating, 'in these flowers I reside with you' (71). O Śive ! he should pluck the flowers that have not been eaten by the insects, are not separated from the branch, fully bloomed, beautiful, matured and unique (72). Flowers should not be kept in the wooden or earthen pot, hand or cloth. They should be kept either on leaves or in the pot prepared by leaves (73). O Ambike ! flowers should not be kept on the ground, impure place or on the body. Those should only be kept in a clean temple (74).

Worships

O Goddess ! worships should be performed with the sesamum and rice mixed with water and also with the pure, dry, unbroken sesamum and rice that are kept after cleaning it with water (75). The sesamum by which worship is to be performed should not be mixed with sand and should not have red and blue colours. Worship should regularly be performed three times a day by the sesamum and rice mixed in equal quantity (76). O Goddess! one should worship Śiva regularly shedding off lethargy with the Karavīr, Droṇa flowers, Dūrvā, Bilvaleaves, sesamum, rice and five flowers (77). The aforesaid five ingredients must be collected. If other things are easily available, then those also are to be accepted because more and more results are obtained with more ingredients (78). Dhatūrā, Arka, Palāśa, Lotus, blue Lotus, Pāṭala, Nīpa (Kadamba), Campak, Punnāga, Madhūk, Bakul, Nāgakeśar, Śevantī, Nīlī, Kurabak, Mallīkā, Jāti, white Lotus etc. various flowers are available in the villages and forests. Various kinds of flowers and leaves are easily available on the earth. So, my worship should be performed with pleasure without any effort (79-81).

Śamī, Apāmārga, Tulasī, Br̥hatī, Asmānta, Arjun, Viṣṇukrāntā, Āmalak, Devadāru etc. and their leaves and flowers may be used in worshipping Śiva. The flowers and leaves that are easily available, that are obtained with much difficulty, that are very costly, all such items may well be used in worshipping Śiva (82-83). My consecration is to be performed at the best of one's capacity with the water which is extremely pure, cold, lovely, sweet, easily digestible and the purifier of all (84).

Timings of Worship of Liṅga

The wise devotee should pass his time regularly since he gets up in the morning till goes to the bed at night in the service of Iṣṭaliṅga (85). Without surrendering to me and performing the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga one can not secure happiness only by performing the deeds to fulfil other necessities (86). O Goddess ! my service is a spiritual discipline, O Śive ! my service is a penance. The wise who aspires for happiness should take refuge in me which is liberation itself (87).

Supremacy of Vīraśaivism

The happiness enjoyed by the blind on regaining his eyes, poor by securing the property, hungry by getting the food, covetous by fulfilling his desires, woman by getting good husband, childless by getting child, disable by acquiring good health, dead by regaining his life, O Goddess ! please note, such pleasures are enjoyed by one who takes refuge in the discipline of supreme Vīraśaivism. O Śive ! the essence derived from all the śaiva sects is the supreme Vīraśaiva discipline (88-90). Various sects are developed owing to the different natures and inclinations of the people. Such differences are imagined by me in accordance with the various interests of the persons. Knowledge is the only means inherent in all (91). As the blind man falls if he walks with the help of an another blind man, so also one who depends on a man who is not conversant with the Vīraśaiva discipline, is sure to fall (92). O Goddess ! as walking on the edge of the sword is difficult, twisting the ear of a tiger is difficult, so also liberation is difficult without acquiring the knowledge of Vīraśaiva discipline (93).

Śiva Worship

O Goddess ! Śivaliṅgī should be contented and remain absorbed in worshipping Śiva with whatever is achieved by the grace of God without exerting much in religious austerity. This only means liberation (Kaivalya) for the wearer of Liṅga (94). O the daughter of the mountain ! the foolish who becomes infatuated with his objects of desire leaving aside the śaiva rituals accepted earlier by him, is always sure to fall (95). O Goddess ! the means of liberation in Vīraśaiva discipline is one and the same for both the capable and incapable. The wise surely acquires the happiness through it where as the unwise is sure to fall (96). Śivayogī should take refuge in solitude after extinguishing the fire of hankerings for the objects of the world with the high flames generated from his rigorous spiritual discipline (97).

Vīraśaiva

As one is scared by seeing the rope assuming it to be a snake, so also Vīraśaiva is afraid of remembering the offer of respect by others. In the same way Vīraśaiva devotee is also afraid of or avoids the female, it is said (meaning there by that Vīraśaivite refrains from the charms of name and fame as well as the attraction of the women) (98). Vīraśaivite remains fully contented with whatever is received by luck. He is free of all conflicts, remains immersed in meditating on Śiva, firmly determined, conqueror of senses, regularly worships thrice a day, performs japa, recites the Śiva-pañcākṣara hymn, sings the glory of the name of Śiva and contemplates on the thought 'I am Śiva' (99-100). The whole world of beings is the conscious image of Śiva. Iṣṭaliṅga is of the nature of Pañcākṣara hymn and the Pañcākṣara hymn represents that supreme Principle (101). O Goddess ! śivayogī perceives the whole world inherent in him and his soul pervaded in the whole world. So, he should perceive both the world and himself existent in Me, the pure Consciousness (102). Such person secures the right, adheres to the principle of Vīraśaiva discipline, then he, being endowed with firm detachment should seek the initiation from Guru as per the prescribed procedures (103). One who indulges himself in arbitrary conducts by leaving aside the scriptural procedures, neither attains the accomplishment, nor happiness nor ultimate end<sup>1</sup> (104). Regarding the judgement of what is to be done and what is not to be done, the scriptures are the only authority. One should adhere to the instruction of the scriptures received from Guru (105). O Goddess ! thus I have illustrated to you the various kinds of the noble śaiva doctrines and have also revealed the mystery of Vīraśaiva discipline. What more you desire to listen ? (106).

VĪRĀŚAIVA NATURE AND CONDUCT

An Enquiry into the Concept 'Vīra' in Vīraśaivism

I bow unto the ocean of consciousness, bliss and knowledge, the great Self, the bearer of Trident, the Lord of the Paśus (1). O the sinless ! you have explained to me the seven-fold categories of Śaiva discipline along with the Vīraśaivism (2). O God ! how should I understand the word Vīra ? What should a wearer of Liṅga do after entering into the discipline of Vīraśaivism ? (3). O Śiva ! what would be the fate of the person who comes back to the infatuation of the senses after accepting and adhering to the discipline devoutedly and attaining control over the senses on account of detachment ?<sup>1</sup> (4). O the Lord of the universe ! please explain to me gradually all these issues in detail. O the extinguisher of all miseries ! please narrate to me the respective natures of the results to be achieved by one who follows the path related to the world (5).

God replies —

O Goddess ! I am narrating to you in response to your inquiry, please listen. I am describing, in detail, the mystery and glory of my Vīraśaiva discipline (6).

Nature of Vīra

O Goddess ! as the bravery is shown in the war by the brave person, so also one who remains steady in the discipline with true devotion and detachment, is termed as Vīra (7). Śivayogī who is free from three kinds of desires (desire for son, wealth and fame as mentioned in Upaniṣads), has intense craving for acquiring various knowledges and is endowed with firm detachment is called the Vīra (8). O Goddess ! the śivayogī who is like a blind person in seeing the beauty of a lady despite of young age and sharpness of the senses is called the Vīra (9). O Goddess ! the wearer of Istalinga who keeps mum on listening to the condemnation of others and assumes the nature of a child despite of being an all knowing person, is termed as the Vira śivayogī (10). Śivayogī who becomes impotent towards the women of others and becomes invalid in inflicting pain on others, tongueless in enjoying the tastes, is called the Vira (11). The śivayogī who has abandoned the ego, pride and envy is endowed with the virtues of pardoning and simplicity and adept in worshipping the Guru (Ācārya), is called the Vira (12). The śivayogī who is devoid of egoism, modest and has attained the state of equilibrium of the mind and possesses a vision of oneness for all on account of purity, self restrain and steadiness (13). The śivayogī who possesses a pure devotion for me, enjoys the solitude, ever remains immersed in meditating on me, is called the Vira (14).

Eight-fold Characteristics of Celibacy

Remembrance, praising, enjoyment, secret conversation, resolution, efforts, cessation of duties are the eight marks of sexual enjoyment as per the learned ones.<sup>2</sup> The reverse of the above are considered to be the eight fold features of the celibacy (15-16). The great soul, the śivayogī who is endowed with above mentioned eight-fold special marks, observer of celibacy and remains absorbed in practising yoga, is called the Vīra (17). The śivayogī who takes the vow to utter the truth, is not covetous for the wealth of others and non greedy, is called the Vīra (18). Śivayogī who is non-envious, critical to the person who is more virtuous than he, non-critical to the person who is equal to him and non-abusive of the person who is less virtuous than he, who is non-competitive, non-critical, non-abusive and ever remains quiet and absorbed in meditating on me, is called the Vīra (19-20). O Śive ! one who is clad in deep orange coloured clothes, always begs for food and remains ever immersed in meditating on Śiva, is called the pure Vīraśaiva (21).

Instructions for Vīraśaiva Discipline

There is no other work for the observer of Vīraśaiva discipline other than the worshipping, meditating, remembering and praising the glory of Śiva (22). O Goddess ! such Vīraśaiva devotee should get up from the bed remembering Guru and Śiva. He should also contemplate on Linga, the form of Śiva and Guru after getting up from the bed (23). He should cast aside the old clothes and wear the fresh clean ones and then should wash the feet and hands, besmear the sacred ash and wear the Rudrākṣa (24).

Besmearing of Sacred Ash

Appropriate proportion of sacred and soft ash should be taken and kept in a pot and cover it with another pot (25). Sacred ash should be taken and kept on the left hand and cover with the right hand and then chant the Pañcākṣara hymn for 108 times (26). Then pure water should be taken in hand and covered chanting the Pañcākṣara hymn. The sacred water mixed with ash should be sprinkled over the body. This is called bathing by the sacred ash (27). I bow unto Śambhu manifested as the form of Bhava, Rudra, Śarva, Ugra and Śambhu. I again bow unto Śiva, the form of the Siddha and splendour of Śiva. The sacred ash is to be taken in hand as required and anointed throughout the whole body from the head to the feet

(28-29). Sacred ash should be besmeared to the hand chanting the Praṇava hymn, to the fore head chanting the Pañcākṣara hymn, to both the eyes reciting the Sadyojāta hymn and to both the ears uttering the Vāmadeva hymn (30); to the throat by Aghora hymn, to both the neck reciting the Tatpuruṣa hymn, to chest uttering the Iśāna hymn and the sacred ash is to be besmeared on the belly and navel reciting all the Pañcabrahma hymn (31). Sacred ash is to be besmeared on both the thighs chanting the hymn 'Namah Śivāya Rudrāya ca' and 'Namo Bhavāya' and again on both the thighs reciting the hymn 'Namah Ugrāya' and 'Namah Kālāya' (32). Upper part of the legs should be besmeared uttering the hymn 'Namah Śivāya', 'Namah Śāntāya', then all the ten fingers of the feet are to be besmeared chanting all the hymns mentioned above (33). O the beautiful Goddess ! the sacred ash is to be besmeared starting from the little finger of the left leg to the little finger of the right leg reciting the following hymns (34). 'I bow unto Ūrdhvaliṅga', 'again and again I bow unto Ūrdhvaliṅga', 'I bow unto Hiranyaliṅga', 'again and again I bow unto Hiranyaliṅga' (35). I bow unto Goldenliṅga, again and again I bow unto Goldenliṅga, I bow unto Divinelīṅga, again and again I bow unto Divineliṅga. I bow unto Bhavaliṅga, again and again I bow unto Bhavaliṅga. I bow unto Śivaliṅga, again and again I bow unto Śivaliṅga (36-37). Sacred ash should be besmeared on the two ankles reciting the hymn 'Agni' etc<sup>3</sup>. Thus right hand, arm, elbow and wrist and left hand, arm, elbow and wrist are to be besmeared with the sacred ash reciting the following hymns (38-39). 'Jvālāya namah', 'Jvālaliṅgāyanamah', 'Ātmane namah', 'Ātmaliṅgāya namah' (40). 'Paramaliṅgāya namah', 'Śivāya namah' – the lines of neck are to be besmeared reciting the above hymns, back reciting the hymn 'Triśuline namah' and to ribs reciting the hymn 'Mahādevāya namah' (41). Sacred ash is to be besmeared on the two arm pits reciting the hymn 'I bow unto Śambhu who possesses the eye like bees' and the whole body is to be besmeared with the sacred ash chanting the original hymn (Pañcākṣara) prefixed with Praṇava (42).

Prohibition of Washing the Hand after Besmearing

O the epitome of beauty ! the hand should not be washed after besmearing the sacred ashes throughout the whole body because dropping

Chanting of Pañcākṣara Hymn

The Pañcākṣara hymn is to be chanted in accordance with the instruction of Guru one thousand times, three hundred times or hundred and eight times (44). O Goddess ! while performing japa, the bearer of Liṅga should contemplate on the unity of Śiva, soul and Guru<sup>4</sup>(45).

Singing of the Glory of Śiva

I bow unto Śiva who is Guru himself and Guru as the form of Śiva. I bow unto Śivaliṅga as the image of the Guru and Guru as the form of Śiva (46). I bow unto Sadyojāta, the Truth, the Śiva who ever enjoys the nature of truth ; I bow unto Guru the form of Śiva who is the originator of the whole universe (47). I bow unto you as Aṣṭamūrti (the eight-fold images), who is endowed with the thirty eight Kalās. I bow unto Vāmadeva, Guru and the form of Śiva (48). I bow unto the Supreme, the most eminent destroyer, the enemy of Kaliyuga, omnipotent God Śiva and

I bow unto Śiva who is of the nature of Aghora and as the form of Guru (50). O Śarva ! I perceive all kinds of Śarvas (Rudras), their frightening and ever frightening nature and I bow unto the most abhorrent nature of Śiva who is both Śiva and Guru (51). I bow unto Mahādeva as the form of Tatpuruṣa. I bow unto Śiva, the Guru who is the form of Viraśaiva order (52). I bow unto Mahāvīra Śambhu who is the Lord of Viraśaiva order, again I bow unto Viraśaiva discipline and the Guru who is the form of Śiva (53). I bow unto you as the form of Īśāna, I bow unto you as the Īśvara. I bow unto the great Guru as the form of Śiva, the Mīdhuṣṭama<sup>6</sup> (who is the fulfiller of all aspirations) (54). I bow unto you as the form of Varuṇa who drinks the deadly venom and punishes the evil doers. I bow unto Guru as the form of the supreme Śiva who is adorned with the snakes (55). I know the bearer of Ganges, the white complexioned spouse of Pārvaṭī. I meditate on the Lord of all. May this God Rudra inspire us in all noble deeds (56). I bow unto Guru as the form of Śivaliṅga and also the form of Śiva, unto

O Śivā ! the wearer of Liṅga who regularly worships me for three times singing the twelve verses containing the divine glory of mine, the imperishable one, is only the form of mine though he resides among the mortal ones (58-59). O dear ! that day is considered to be auspicious on which the devotee devoutly sings the aforesaid glory of mine, his other days are futile (60).

Morning Worship

One should go out only after fulfilling the regular duties of the morning. If he possesses devotion for Īśvara, then he should also adore Śiva in the morning as per his capacity (61). O Goddess ! he should collect the ingredients such as the leaves, flowers, rice etc. whatever is available easily one day before the worship (62). O Śive ! he should regularly perform worships three times a day i.e. in the morning, noon and evening. One who is incapable of performing worship in the evening and noon must perform worship in the morning (63). O Śive ! if one is unable to perform worship in the morning must perform it regularly in the evening. Time may be preferred according to interest (64). O Śive ! worship should be performed regularly thrice a day or only in the noon according to interest. Thus regular worship may also be performed once either in the morning or in the evening (65). One who is capable or helpless may perform the regular worship as per his will. One is sure to suffer in the heinous Raurava hell provided he does not perform the regular worship despite of being capable (66). One who pretends and does not perform my worship, despite of being capable and in possession of all necessary ingredients for worship, such wretched sensuous and indulgent person who is deviated from both the action and knowledge ever remains immersed in the ocean of miseries. He resides in heinous hell till the moon and the stars remain in the sky (67-68).

Hierarchy of Beings

Animates are better than the inert. Among the animates, those that possess intellect are superior and again among them, the beings who are more evolved are undoubtedly far better (69). Human beings are superior among all such beings and Brāhmin is far higher in hierarchy. Among all the Brāhmin, the knower of Veda, the observer of rites and rituals and the knower of the significance of knowledge are gradually superior (70). One who knows the essence of Vedānta is considered to be higher but the ascetic is higher than the former, the follower of Pāsupata śaiva discipline is higher than the previous ones and the wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga is greater than the former (71). O Śive ! Vīramāheśvara is the supreme among all the aforesaid categories. Among all the followers of the Vīraśaiva disciplines, no one is superior to Vīramāheśvara (72). Vīraśaiva who is endowed with such glory, ultimately attains me. Such follower of Vīraśaiva assumes my form (73).

Conduct of Vīraśaiva

One who possesses control over his senses, resides in solitude and ever meditates on me, successfully overcomes all miseries (74). One who is not steady in detachment, rather is unduly attached and hankers for sensuous enjoyment, is sure to take birth again and again. The present life being spent is considered to be happy (not miserable) (75). Till one attains the firm detachment and the propensities for sense gratification are not ceased, can not attain liberation, since he is not free from the attachment of the senses (76). When the deeds of the previous lives are consumed and the results are dissipated and the results of the reserved deeds are destroyed by self-knowledge and the generation of the future Karma is ceased due to the non-attachment for the results of the action. O the supreme Goddess ! for such Vīraśaiva līngī, the liberation is easily accessible (77-78). When all the conducts and desires pertaining to the waking and sleeping states are dissipated, the ceaseless perfect knowledge arises. Such devotees are called Vīraśaiva (79). Devotee who is unattached to the worldly affairs and takes a limited food and transcends the states of waking and sleeping<sup>7</sup>, is called the Vīraśaiva (80). One who ascends (on the spiritual states) gradually, easily gets rid off the bondage. If one jumps to a higher stage, falls suddenly and so liberation is delayed (81). O Goddess ! one who adopts the auspicious means is never liable to suffering.<sup>8</sup> How can one fall in heinous hell as Raurava who wears my Liṅga (82) ? Such deviate of the sacred observance, on account of virtuous deeds performed in the past lives, enjoys for many years in the virtuous spheres and then takes birth in the house of a Liṅgi (83). Such birth is regarded as unique. He regains his previous states by performing and revoking his intelligence (84). O the daughter of the mountain ! he again endeavours and gradually achieves the state of 'Vīra' by entering into the discipline of Vīraśaivism (85). One who adheres to my discipline, for him this life is the last one. One who makes sincere effort to achieve me, why should he not achieve me ? (86). Devotee is gravitated towards me on account of the spiritual proficiency gained in the past lives and thus attains the supreme state of Śiva by the penance of many lives (87). The wearer of Liṅga is superior to all ascetics, greater than wise persons and higher than the persons who are adept in rituals and yoga (88).

Time of Worship

Duration of one Muhurt (3 hours) before the rise of sun is called the time of Uṣā. This time is known as the best period for the worship and attainment of Śiva (89). The worship of Śiva may be performed after sunrise and the worship may also be performed at midday or in the evening after perceiving the stars (90).

Rules for Collection of Alms by Jangamas

After fulfilling the morning worship, recitation of mantras and singing the divine glories etc., śivayogī should go for collecting alms after bowing to and taking permission of Guru (91). Śivayogī should go out for collecting alms if he so desires because there is no compulsion for this. Knowledge is the only means for achievement (92). Liṅgī should visit the house of the devotee of Śiva only for collecting the alms. He should receive food cooked or uncooked only as per requirement (93). Śivayogī should be adorned with the ringing bell in his feet or keep a small or big bell in his hand ; he should blow the conch shell or the instrument made of horn or should tie a ring in his stick and ring it while roaming about (94). He should wear the garland of Rudrākṣa and cover his body with the Kanthā and blanket and inspire the householder to give alms with symbolic words (95).

Hospitality of Jaṅgama by Householders

If a wearer of Liṅga comes to the house and begs for the alms, the householder either man or woman should receive and bow unto him remembering the tradition and the instruction of Guru assuming him to be Jaṅgama (96). The Jaṅgama should be considered and worshipped as Śiva and should be seen off fully satisfied. If he has brought with himself the uncooked food, then that should duly be cooked and offered to me (97). If he brings the cooked food, then that is to be accepted after offering me. For Jaṅgamas, there are no injunctions for taking food once only or keeping fast and observing vows (98). He should worship Liṅga for three times, roam about with pleasure after having full control over the senses and make his conduct effortless (99). The Jaṅgama who makes all efforts to tread the right path, easily achieves happiness and is able to face the adverseries like cold, storms and heat etc. (100). O Goddess ! such Viraśaiva devotee reaches the ultimate end bearing the sufferings of the path and never takes birth as a woman or in the family of an incapable and non-religious person. He also does not take birth in the lower species of animals such as birds etc. (101-102). The devotee of Viraśaivism who worships Jaṅgama as Śiva, causes emancipation of his ten posteriors (102-103). O Goddess ! on the contrary, the wretched who condemns the wearer of Liṅga, suffers in the heinous Raurava hell along with his millions of generations. O Goddess ! thus I have enunciated to you the characteristics, religious conducts and their results of Viraśaiva discipline. What more do you want to know ? (104).

 the propounder of Śaiva non-dualism describing the nature of the wearer of Liṅga while enunciating the procedure of Viraśaiva initiation. ॥ 8 ॥

Chapter - 9

EMINENCE OF VĪRĀŚAIVA DISCIPLINE

Goddess enquires —

I bow unto you, the epitome of pure consciousness, the possessor of five faces. O Lord ! kindly describe, in details, the glory of the Vīrāśaiva discipline (1). You have enunciated the various categories and characteristics of śaiva disciplines and also depicted its eminence (2). When one who possesses the aforesaid eligibility and have its knowledge enters into the Vīrāśaiva discipline, attains the adequate results, I have learnt this all (3). O Śiva ! if one accepts the Vīrāśaiva discipline on account of the company of good people, arising of the past dormant desires, willingly or by other's inspiration serially or non-serially without consulting scriptures or following the instruction of Guru without possessing the knowledge and power of discrimination, due to obstinacy or by reasoning, for fulfilling an aim or due to fear because of non-possession of true knowledge, having neither steadiness, nor dynamism, then what would be his fate?<sup>1</sup> (4-6). O Śaṅkar ! if one enters into the Vīraśaiva discipline without acquiring the adequate eligibility for the same, is he deviated from both the sides after death ? (7).

God Replies —

As you know that one is destined to secure the result of his deeds, I am depicting the significance and destiny of the deeds and their results for the benefit of others (8).

Liberation on Death in Kāśī

As the blind, lame, dumb, deaf, insane, wise, poor or king, virtuous or sinner, noble or wicked, pious or unpius, attains me merely by entering into Kāśī or within the boundary of Pañcakrośī, in the same way all who enter into Vīraśaiva discipline are sure to attain me (9-11).

Liberation on Mere Entering into Vīraśaiva Discipline

O Śive ! the devotee surely attains me by merely adopting my Śaiva principle. What to speak of the devotee who enters into Vīraśaiva discipline ? (12). As the sugar remains sweet for both the hungry or satisfied persons, in the same way the Vīraśaiva discipline imparts pleasure to both the wise and unwise (13). If one remains infatuated with the worldly pleasures thinking that there is no harm in it and discards the righteous disciplines, fall for ever into the heinous hell of Raurava (14). On the other hand, if one remains engrossed in meditation having full control over all his sense organs, does not expect anything and is satisfied with whatever is easily received by him and adept in meditating on self, with profound single minded devotion, perceives Him (God) everywhere, attains unhampered peace owing to the awareness of self and one who is compassionate to all beings adheres to all the rules and regulations duly prescribed by the scriptures and spends his life by observing the duties gradually and steadily, does not harm anybody as long as alive by the grace of God (15-17). O the consort of Maheśvara ! the inner self of such person becomes intensely calm and tranquil. Any fool that inflicts pain to him is sure to fall (18). If any Viraśaiva attains the aforesaid state on account of his accumulated past virtuous deeds, surely ever attains me (19). O Goddess ! one is not able to enter into any sect of śaiva discipline without my grace. What to speak of the Viraśaivism order (20)? O Goddess ! when the results of all non-virtuous deeds are dissipated and the result of all virtuous deeds arise, then only one attains the discipline of Viraśaiva, not by any other means (21). O the virtuous ! whenever a devotee belonging to the sect of Ādi or Anādiśaiva deviates from the path, is again purified by entering into Viraśaiva discipline with my grace (22).

Prohibitions for Viraśaiva

If one's intellect is infatuated with the sensuous gratification despite of having accepted the Viraśaiva discipline, he is sure to take birth in the canine species hundreds of times and then is to be born in the family of an untouchable. (23). If one indulges in violence towards other living beings by action, mind and speech, then he suffers for ever in the heinous hell of Raurava (24). If one inflicts pain to others, collects the objects for enjoyment and enjoys the liquor, meat, women and intoxicating drug, steals the gold, sleeps during the daytime, always takes food alone, lives in the company of fools and leaves the company of the wearers of Liṅga, then he takes millions of births in canine species before taking birth in the family of untouchable on the earth (25-27). Vīraśaiva devotee should neither use vehicle nor should he generally mixup with the people, nor should he indulge in conversing with or seeing women, nor should he be disrespectful or lethargic (27-28).

Characteristics of Vīraśaiva Devotee

Vīraśaiva devotee réacts like a blind man seeing the women, like a deaf hearing the sound and perceives the body as if looking towards dead wood. Such person is called the Vīraśaiva (28-29). After accepting the discipline of Viraśaiva religion, the intellect of the devotee should be free from the hankering for wealth. Such person is sure to attain freedom even if he is drowned in the ocean of miseries (29-30). One whose mind is devoid of atheistic thoughts, who does not perceive distant object on the way (i.e. perceives only one step)<sup>2</sup>, does not inflict pain to others, is called Viraśaiva (30-31). O Goddess ! one whose intellect hankers after the objects of enjoyment, even having the knowledge of the essence of scriptures, will never be able to achieve me (31-32). As a poor person protects his acquired wealth throughout his life, in the same way for a Viraśaiva devotee, faith is the essence of devotion. One who adheres to the path instructed by Guru, easily attains liberation by my compassion and one who does not know it, can never be free from the ocean of miseries (32-34).

Prohibition in Entrance in Viraśaiva Discipline by Obstinacy Alone

No one should be coerced into entering into the great ocean of Viraśaiva religion (34). If any intelligent person obstinately enters into the discipline of Viraśaiva religion easily and without following proper means with a view to enjoying pleasures, often becomes insane. If he does not have control over the senses, he is sure to fall (35-36). O Goddess ! as the fourth state (Sanyāsa) is considered to be superior according to all disciplines, in the same way Vīraśaiva religion as Āśrama is known as the superior among the all (36-37). O Pārvatī ! Vīraśaiva discipline has its own eminence in relation to Sanyāsa, which I am telling you. Please listen to it carefully (37-38).

Similarity and Dissimilarity Among Non-liṅgī, Ascetic and Jaṅgama

Sleeping on the cot, sleeping during daytime, taking betel leaves, massaging the body, wearing gold and white clothes are prohibited for the non-liṅgī ascetics (38-39). Residing constantly at one place, eating only one type of food, eating delicious food, having sensuous relation, socializing and participating in ceremonies are also prohibited for the non-liṅgī ascetics (39). For the non-liṅgī ascetics taking food twice a day, shaving and hair cutting according to his wishes, eating in an iron pot, taking bath in any water are prohibited (40). Non-liṅgi ascetic should not beg for alms during day and night after solar and lunar eclipse (41). For the non-liṅgī ascetics washing and purifying hand and feet without earth, taking bath without considering the touchable and non-touchable, not adhering to the prescribed ritual to be performed prior to (marriage etc.) and after the same are prohibited<sup>3</sup> (42). Wearing the shoes, riding on a bullock cart, selfcooking, using scents, not washing the hands after taking the food are also prohibited for a non-liṅgī ascetic. (43). Mainstruated, pregnant and women having impurity due to birth and death etc. are considered to be defiled. Even if in difficulty, the non-liṅgī ascetic should never accept food from them though offered devoutly (44). O Goddess ! the observance of such rigorous disciplines by non-liṅgī entails considerable sufferings. On the contrary, the wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga who leads the path of renunciation enjoys bliss in worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga (45).

Special Features of Viraśaiva Discipline

O Goddess ! the Viraśaiva liṅgī is not required to bear the physical discomfort; he is also not required to observe rigorous vows, fast and various kinds of conflicting vagaries like heat, cold etc. (46). One who is infatuated, ensnared in worldly affairs, can never attain my form (Sārupya). This is applicable to all but not for the Vīraśaiva devotee who easily achieves this state (47). Vīraśaiva devotee who worships my Liṅga even without taking bath, without purification or sitting on the cot, surely achieves me (48). O Goddess ! the devotee after taking births and deaths hundreds of times in the lower species like animals and birds etc. and observing the rituals of Arhat discipline acquires virtues and at last by my grace takes birth in the family of twice born (Brāhmin) and attains the essence of Veda-vedānta through the teachings of Guru (49-50). One who abandons the attachment towards the objects of the senses, has compassion for all beings, renounced the world and assumed ascetic life and practices yoga, attains me (51). One who has accomplished the supreme spiritual practices of yoga, takes birth in the family of liṅgī śaivite and enters into the Vīraśaiva discipline which is the essence of all religious disciplines like a ripe fruit<sup>4</sup> (52). Gradually by ascending all the steps of śaiva disciplines, one attains the highest Vīraśaiva discipline which is the supreme among the all (53). The shade of difference as thin curtain remains between me and Viraśaiva devotee which vanishes after the death of the devotee (54). O Śive ! if devotee is able to have full control over the velocity of the sex and anger, even prior to death, can easily achieve me<sup>5</sup> (55). O Śive ! one who has no control over the senses even after entering into the discipline of Viraśaiva religion, rarely achieves the peace of mind (56). One who enjoys the happiness received through providence, remains engaged in worshipping Śiva and attains the stage of Viraśaiva, easily achieves liberation (57).

The Characteristics of Viraśaiva Jaṅgama

Besmearing the whole body with sacred ash three times a day, worshipping the Iṣṭaliṅga to the best of his capability, accepting alms only from the śaiva devotee are the characteristics of Viraśaiva (58). Constantly remembering, worshipping and meditating, listening to the glory, praising songs of Śaṅkara and Maheśvara are also the main characteristics of Viraśaiva (59). for alms, a piece of Kanthā, (rag or patched cloth), black blanket, sound of the stick and devotion to Śiva are also the characteristics of Vīraśaiva (60). The begging bowl 'Culikā', stick, Kanthā and black blanket are the four 'Mudrās' symbolic of Vīraśaiva Jaṅgama and so they are known as the characteristics of Vīraśaiva (61). Observing silence, living in solitude, studying my scriptures, non-attachment to the objects of enjoyment are the characteristics of Vīraśaiva (62). Tranquility of mind, firm determination, compassion for all beings, full control over the faculties of citta, perceiving the identification of God with all and everywhere are the characteristics of Vīraśaiva (63).

Glory of the Firm Determination (Niṣṭhā)

O Śāṅkarī ! neither the objects, nor enjoyments, friends, wealth and poverty can protect the devotee, only the firm faith of the devotee towards God can protect him (64). O Goddess ! serving Guru, contemplating on the scriptures and living accordingly, keeping calm and quiet, solitary living and devotion to me etc. strengthen determination (65). Ever remaining absorbed in worshipping Liṅga, submitting to the devotee of Viraśaiva are the main steps for achieving me (66). There are no impediments in worshipping my Liṅga as leaves and flowers are plenty in the forest and there is no dearth of sweet water in the rivers and the devotee can easily worship me with his hands and feet (67). The worship of Liṅga requires neither special endeavour nor service nor efforts nor incurring expenses rather achieving Śivahood is quite pleasant for a wise devotee (68).

Glory of Viraśaiva Discipline

Who else can be so ignorant as one who does not adhere to the discipline of Viraśaiva religion even if having entered into it due to the virtues acquired in past lives (69). O Goddess ! one who aspires for other pleasures even after accepting the Viraśaiva religion is like an imbecile person who licks the container shedding aside the jaggery (70). One who has already been initiated in the discipline of Viraśaiva religion, craves for momentary pleasures is like a man who intends to enter into a dirty drainage riding on a decorated elephant (71). One who abandons the path of Viraśaiva discipline and aspires for attaining me is like a man desires to cross the sea by holding the tail of a dog (72). Who will be more ignorant than the person who purposelessly spends his time even after accepting the Vīraśaiva discipline on account of his past good deeds (73)? One deviates on the wrong path even having a lamp of Vīraśaiva religion in his hand, is like a man having eyes but behaving as a blind man (74). One who has established himself on the strong boat of firm determination acquired through the discipline of Vīraśaiva religion can easily cross the ocean of the miseries of the world (transmigration) being piloted by devotion (75).

Precautions for Vīraśaiva Devotee

One who becomes entangled in the unfavourable wind of his own laziness even having acquired such a strong boat, is destroyed and again rises and drowned in the ocean of miseries (76). Person who is devoid of devotion, power of discrimination, the glory of firm detachment and having impatience and inaction, if pilots the boat, is sure to sink due to improper means (77). O Śive ! the sensuous desires and covetousness are like the thieves that always are trying to steal the gems of knowledge of the devotees (78). Such an imbecile person who is incapable and intolerant is always victimised by the duality of pleasure and pain. He constantly suffers like a honey-bee protecting her honey-comb (79). The objects of the enjoyment that are prohibited and are not available for enjoyment inflict pain both in enjoyment and in detachment. They are like enemies that always destroy pleasure (80). Knowing this, the wise person should make all efforts to purify all defilements with the water of Viraśaiva disciplines. Then only he is fully purified (81). O Śive ! as the burning fire burns all fuels, so also the fire of Viraśaiva discipline annihilates all bondages<sup>6</sup> (82). O Adrije ! as the duck always resides happily inside a strong cage, in the same way, the ardent devotees of Śiva feel pleasure in the strong protective discipline of Viraśaiva (83).

Hierarchy in Śaiva Discipline

Devotee may choose and accept any one of the Ādi or Anādi categories of śaiva discipline according to his will and may duly perform the worship of the Liṅga according to rules laid down and at the same time may fully enjoy the worldly pleasures (84). He should adore the guests and perform all the rites and rituals prescribed in the scriptures. Initiated Ādiśaiva devotee should worship the Iṣṭaliṅga, recite the hymn within and listen to the scriptures (85). Then he should enter into the discipline of Mahāśaiva by means of contemplation (Manana) etc. and again by acquiring the capability for practising the yoga, he enters into the Yoga-śaiva discipline (86). O Goddess ! the devotee who has freed himself from three types of cravings (for son, wealth and fame) is detached and has full control over his senses, is considered to be eligible for entering into the yoga-śaiva discipline (87). Such a person should learn the scriptures directly from Guru, wear ochre-coloured dress, bear a stick, renunciate house-hold life and keep crest, matted hair and shaven head (88). Thus after accomplishing the discipline of yoga-śaiva, devotee should devoutly and humbly take refuge in Viraśaiva Guru and with his permission should enter into the discipline of Pāśupata-śaiva (89).

Avadhūt is Viraśaiva Himself

O Goddess ! this Pāśupata is named as Jñāna-śaiva discipline. Then the devotee should accept the Viraśaiva discipline. The stage called Avadhūt in the scripture is also called Viraśaiva (90). No discipline is superior to it and none else may offer the supreme bliss. This Viraśaiva discipline is never different from the Avadhūt stage which is the supreme (91). After attaining this stage, the devotee should observe the vows of Avadhūt. For them, there is no purity nor impurity, neither adorer nor adored, neither worshipper nor worshipped. Here there is no Guru and disciple tradition. For Avadhūt, there is no discrimination between mother, father, wife, and the man of the lowest category and brāhmin (92-93). There is no differentiation among the cow, dog, elephant and donkey etc. There is no consideration for the highest, medium, the lowest or a little, bigger or equal (94). O Śive ! for the stage of Avadhūt, the whole universe is alike. For him everything inheres in the indivisible Absolute, existence-consciousness-bliss and is incorporeal (95). This is incorruptible, substratum of all, without companion, ultimate cause (अप्रतर्क्य), undifferentiated, inexhaustible, non-dual, omniscient, the prime enjoyer, one who is and is not and one who has all pervasive faces (सर्वतोमुख). That is the only substance never falls, conscious and unconscious, only known by himself, he is the knower, knowledge and unknown. This state of Brahman is only the state of mine, the Śiva (96-97). One should be immersed in contemplating the whole universe of animate and inanimate beings as existent in Śiva. He can happily cross the ocean of the endless births and deaths by riding the boat of this contemplation (98). O Śive ! such devotee transcends the cycle of birth and death and attains the supreme state of mine which is free of: maladies of deterioration (99). For such contemplative Avadhūt, there is neither gradation nor affirmative or negative laws nor any defilement. Such Vīraśaiva Avadhūt is Me, the Śiva himself (100). O Goddess ! for him, there is no virtue and sin, no lower and higher stages. He himself is everything and becomes one with me (101). O Goddess ! thus I have briefly

ŚIVAYOGA

Goddess enquires —

O Śiva ! the indweller in the lotus heart of the yogī, the possessor of the nature that is only knowable to the yogīs, revealer of the nature of Brahman, benefactor of all, I bow unto you (1).

Four-fold Anādi etc. Śaiva Discipline

One who is faithful to the discipline of Anādi-śaiva should always observe the due procedure on his own accord. He should perform his duties with a view to good results and worship the Jaṅgamas as per his capacity (2). He becomes eligible to enjoy the desired happiness provided he performs regular, special and desired deeds (nitya, naimittik and kāmya) according to the instructions delivered by Guru and laid down in the scriptures (3). Devotee of Ādiśaiva performs daily only the regular rites. If he performs other rites, he should do it keeping in mind the regular rites while observing it (4). The devotee of Anuśaiva also should observe only the regular rites. While performing the special and desired actions (naimittika and kāmya) he should abandon the desire for the result (5). One who belongs to Mahāśaiva sect should observe the regular rites as per his capacity. He should mainly meditate on Śiva and contemplate everything as embodied in Liṅga (6).

Enquiry Regarding Yoga-śaiva etc. Disciplines

The eligibility of these disciplines is hierarchical. One who has achieved the state of Mahāśaiva should gradually enter into the stage of Yoga-śaiva (7). O the supreme God, the Lord ! whatever you have told me has been followed by me. Now, I have an intense desire in my heart to know the nature of Yoga-śaiva (8). Who is the Jñāna-śaiva ? What is the difference between the Jñāna and Yoga by transcending which sādḥaka (worshipper) achieves the result of Vīraśaiva discipline (9). O Śaṅkara ! please tell me, in detail, all the essentials regarding them, since I am your favourite disciple and you are my revered teacher (10).

Clarification

O Goddess ! I shall disclose to you this supreme mystery, please listen. It is a matter of direct apprehension. This eternal religion can be followed with pleasure (11). I have never described this mysterious religion earlier. Now, I am describing it to you out of love. Please listen and keep it secret (12).

Two-fold Yoga-śaiva

The discipline of Yoga-śaiva is considered to be the supreme in the sect of Yoga-śaiva. As per the procedure there are two kinds of Yoga, namely, Sākāra and Nirākāra (13). Nirākāra yoga signifies the formless meditation where there is no distinction of subject and object. In fact this meditation negates the trilogy of the knowledge, known and knower (14). In this state of formlessness there is no existence of moon, sun, stars, directions, fire, lightening, air, water, earth, meru mountain and even universe (15). This formless end is partless, supreme, of the nature

 यदव्यक्तं मनोऽतीतं तदेकं ब्रह्म केवलम् ॥१६॥

 आस्तीर्य कम्बलं कृष्णं वस्त्रं काषायमास्तरेत् । अभ्येसेदासनं चादावुपविश्य यथासुखम् ॥२१॥

of knowledge, one, pure, immutable, indescribable and beyond the mind. It is only known as Brahman (16). O Śive ! the worshipper who is adept in both the Jñāna and Yoga is only capable of meditating on the formless. O Goddess ! such person is called the Avadhūt in Vīraśaiva discipline (17). If he seems to be extrovert, then also, he remains absorbed in his own real self since he does not have any relation with external not-self. Jñānaśaiva devotee always remains within himself (18). One who is not yet eligible in contemplating the formless and has not assimilated the unity of knowledge and action should practice meditation on the image with form sitting in a secluded place (19).

Yogāsana

One should make a firm seat in the holy place and put the skin of 'Tarakṣu' or deer on it<sup>1</sup> (20). That seat should be covered with black blanket and ochre coloured cloth respectively and then practice to sit comfortably on the seat (21). O Goddess ! if the posture is conquered, then one attains the control over the body easily. Then the worshipper

पार्ष्णिपाणिद्वयो भूत्वा नासाग्रे गतलोचनः ॥२२॥

ध्यानपद्धतिः

मण्डपं च चतुःस्तम्भं वितानावलिशोभितम् ॥२६॥

should concentrate his eyes on the tip of his nose keeping both the hands on the thighs (22).

Procedure of Meditation

Yogī should be seated on a clean place in a steady posture keeping the head, neck and the body straight without making any movement like a trunk of the tree or an unflinching flame of the lamp (23). O Śive! then yogī should meditate on me as the supreme God on one of the lotus centre of the heart, navel, Svādhiṣṭhāna, Mūlādhāra, Viśuddha, Ājñā, Sahasrāra, Brahmarandhra (top of the head), crown of the crest, Dvādaśānta (western crest) or soul<sup>2</sup> (24-25).

Contemplation of Divine Throne

Worshipper should contemplate one of the aforesaid centres as a portico with four pillars which is adorned with the gate of the flowers and leaves and a divine throne is placed in the middle of the court (26). He should contemplate that the garden of Kalpavṛkṣa (tree that fulfils all desires) is situated, grown up on the four sides of the court and this garden is surrounded by a ocean of milk (27). In the middle of the ocean of milk an island full of gems is situated in which a canopy bedecked with pearls and decorated with four gates is to be contemplated (28). The worshipper should contemplate that this canopy is adorned with the series of lamps, gates and various beautiful items of decoration (29). It should also be contemplated that there is pedestal of hard stone in the centre of the canopy on which eight petalled lotus is scribed. This lotus is to be encircled with a line in which sixteen petalled lotus has been drawn which again should be contemplated as encircled by a line and 'Bhūpur' should be drawn with the help of three other lines<sup>3</sup> (30). A triangle is to be contemplated as existing in the middle of hexagon in which is scribed a sixteen petalled lotus with zafran and also an eight petalled lotus in the centre (31). O the great Goddess ! on the point thereupon a beautiful divine throne adorned with nine delightful gems and having effulgence of billions of suns is to be contemplated (32). O Śive ! this throne contains nine steps. All the divinities and their powers (consorts) reside here. This supreme throne is the abode of all hymns and Yantras (33).

Meditation of Śiva

The devotee should contemplate Umā happily seated on the divine throne along with Śiva, the universal benefactor, having four arms, charming body, bedecked with moon on his head, imperishable, having besmeared the sacred ash throughout the body, ornamented with the serpents, holding spade, stag in his two hands, assuming the postures of 'Abhaya' and 'Vara' with the rests of the two lotus hands, the Lord of the universe, with ever smiling face, having three eyes, Lord Īśāna, wearer of the skin of tiger, even having pleasant disposition and beautifully adorned with all the ornaments (34-36).

Contemplation of Other Deities

This way, the knower of the mantras after ever meditating on me should worship other deities around with the original hymn prefixed with Praṇava (37). In the east direction Nandī should be adorned, in the south Gaṇapati, in the west Mahāvīrabhadra and in the north Guha (Kārtikeya) are to be adorned (38). O Śāṅkarī ! in all the four directions of the triangle, the devotee should take round commencing from the east in his front and thereafter he should worship Nandī etc. other deities (39). Again he should take round the hexagon contemplating six 'Āmoda' etc. deities along with their carriers and weapons (40). The names of these six deities are – Āmod, Pramod, Sumukh, Durmukh, Avighna and Vighnakartā. The six faces of Śiva should also be contemplated on the tips of the angles of the hexagon (41). The eight divinities, namely, Bhava, Paśupati, Rudra, Śiva, Śarva, Triyambaka, Trinetra and Pañcabadana should be contemplated on the eight petalled lotus (42). O Goddess ! thereafter sixteen divinities, namely, Vṛṣadhvaja, Vṛṣārūṣa, Jaṭila, Candraśekhara, Kapardī, Kālakanṭha, Pinākī, Umāpati, Bhūteśa, Śaṅkara, Sthānu, Bhālalocana, Īśvara, Pramatha, Pramathādhīśa and Pārameśvara are to be contemplated upon on the sixteen petalled lotus decorated with saffron (43-45). Now sixteen powers are to be imagined on sixteen petals. Their names are Īśānī, Śāṅkarī, Raudrī, Kālakanthī, Kapālīnī, Gāndhārī, Hastijihvā, Piṅgalā, Idā, Suṣumnā, Rākā, Kuhū, Sinīwālī, Bhūtadhātṛī, Girīndrajā and Haimavatī. These powers (Goddesses) should be contemplated upon with their carriers and weapons (45-47). Eight Bhairavas, namely, Asitāṅga, Ruru, Caṇḍa, Krodha, Unmatta, Kapālī, Bhīṣaṇa and Saṅhāra should be contemplated upon and worshipped on the first line of Bhūpur. Then on the middle line of Bhūpur the powers, namely, Brāhmī, Māheśvarī, Roudrī, Hṛllekhā, Gaganā, Karālīnī, Mahocchuṣmā and Jvālāmukhī should be contemplated and worshipped (48-50). On the third line of Bhūpur, the goddess, namely, Umā, Bhavānī, Rudrāṇī, Śarvānī, Sarvamaṅgalā, Śīvā, Īśvarī, Kaumārī and Gaurī are to be contemplated and worshipped respectively (50-51). The conchshell and lotus, the dual symbol of prosperity should be contemplated and worshipped on both the sides of the yantra. God Indra and other protective powers of directions along with their carriers and weapons should be contemplated beyond the three lines of the 'Caturasra' (51-52).

Result of Meditation

The worshipper who deeply meditates on and performs the worship of Śiva commencing right from assuming the proper posture to the rite of culmination of worship achieves everything (53). O Goddess ! one who remains absorbed in the observance of worship is non-attached to the objects of desires and constantly meditates on me, attains me, after leaving the body (54).

Eight-fold Yoga

Devotion, detachment, constant practice, meditation, living in a secluded place, begging, worshipping Liṅga, constantly remembering Śiva are the eight-fold yogas for the Yogaśaiva-liṅgī. The devotees who observe these eight fold yogas are named as Yogaśaiva-liṅgī (55-56).

Dhyānaśaiva

After having accomplished yoga, yogī becomes self concentrated i.e. he develops inward tendencies leaving aside outworldliness. If the Citta of the yogī has still extrovert tendencies, then he should contemplate

दृष्टं श्रुतं च संस्पृष्टमाघ्रातं स्वादितं कृतम् ।
सर्वं शिवात्मकं ध्यायेद् ध्यानशैवः स उच्यते ॥५८॥ that 'everything is Śiva' (57). The yogī who meditates on the concept that all the sensory objects that are seen, heard, touched, smelt and are tasted inhere in Śiva, is called Dhyānaśaiva (58).

Vīraśaiva

One who is devoted and adept both in yoga and meditation is free from all the objects of enjoyment, whose desires are eliminated and ever meditates on the state of 'Śivoham' (identification), is called Vīraśaiva (59). After entering into the discipline of Vīraśaiva, the devotee should contemplate the whole universe of animate and inanimate objects as Śiva and meditates on the idea that he himself is Śiva (60). Such Vīraśaiva devotee worships Śiva with the flowers symbolising truth, forgiveness, having control over sense organs, compassion for all beings and auspicious feelings. The devotee who shows compassion towards all beings and having the finest dispositions, worships me with this supreme flower (61). The devotee who adheres to the flowers of truthfulness, forgiveness and universal equality and discard the discrimination between the higher and the lower, not giving pain to others and indulges in philanthropic (altruistic) activities (62). Vīraśaiva perceives well-wisher, friend<sup>4</sup>, enemy, indifferent person, middle man, jealous without any reason, companion, pious, sinner and wicked in the same way (63). O Śiva ! one who perceives and meditates on everything and everywhere one and the same Śiva without making any differentiation between the persons who belong to his own discipline or other, who is unwise or benefactor, is only eligible for the discipline of Vīraśaiva (64). O Goddess ! one who regularly worships me with aforesaid flowers without letharginess, always worships Śambhu, is called Vīraśaiva (65). Closest unison with Śiva (Śiva-sāyujya) is easily achieved for the Vīraśaiva who is devoid of attachment and aversion and ever remains immersed in worshipping Iṣṭalinga (66).

Synonyms of Vīraśaiva Yogī

Avadhūt, Sanyāsī, Yogī, Pāśupat, Śiva, Liṅgī, Vīra, Vīraśaiva, Mahāmāheśvara and Yati are the synonyms of Vīraśaiva yogī. No work remains to be done for them except enjoying identification with Śiva (67-68).

Rules for Vīraśaiva

O the great Goddess ! Vīraśaiva who desires the closest unison with Śiva should never make any habitate other than that nor should he show jealousy or indulge in inflicting pain to others (69). O Śive ! there is no other discipline than Vīraśaiva capable to produce more results since there is nobody superior to me (70). If one who is established in the discipline of Vīraśaiva inflicts pain to any being, is considered to be Cāṇḍāl, the lowest of all castes while alive and suffers hell after death (71).

Six-fold Disciplines for Vīraśaiva

O great Goddess ! Śama, Dama, Titikṣā, Uparati, Śraddhā and Samādhi (Samādhān) are the six-fold disciplines (virtuous dispositions) to be observed for the liṅgi Vīraśaiva (72). Anybody devoid of even one aspect of the aforesaid disciplines is considered to be low, just as the person not having any part of the body is known as incomplete. Such person is sure to fall (from the spiritual path) (73). One who is having all parts of the body is known as a complete man, otherwise he is called a disabled. The something is applicable here also (74).

Glory of the Mercy

For the Vīraśaiva, much effort is not necessary for collecting the flowers and giving trouble to others for this purpose. For him perceiving Śiva everywhere and maintaining the feeling of compassion for all beings is the supreme deed (75). Having compassion for all beings is the only means for attaining me. So, inflicting pain to others is the only way to the hell for the Liṅgīs (76). O Goddess ! whatever seen movable or immovable, is only me. Everything possessing name, form and action is my body, please note (77). If such devotee of mine possesses jealousy for anybody, undoubtedly he is jealous of me. He should contemplate me everywhere (78). O Goddess ! just as a person has the feeling of fraternity for the whole body from foot to head, so the devotee should form the habit of contemplating one-ness everywhere (79). O Goddess ! one who is established in the discipline of Vīraśaiva should contemplate one-ness by eliminating the sense of discrimination among all beings. Such person will surely attain me (80). O Goddess ! much discussion on this subject

The Glory of Chanting the Pañcākṣara Hymn

O the great Goddess ! blessed is he who possesses Iṣṭaliṅga in his heart and body, whose self is adorned by me and my hymn and whose tongue has become sanctified with the auspicious Pañcākṣara hymn (82). O the daughter of the mountain ! now, I am narrating to you the supreme essence of all principles. You should make all efforts to keep it secret and should preach it only to the devotee-ascetics (83). Vīraśaiva devotee should chant only the Pañcākṣara hymn leaving aside all other disciplines, as it is the bestower of both the enjoyment and liberation (84). Śaiva devotee should ever recite the Pañcākṣara hymn while standing, eating, sleeping, walking, waking, laughing, sitting and in the state of awareness (85). The śaiva devotee should recite Pañcākṣara hymn by accepting many contrary circumstances as an excuse, such as, being by himself, controlled by others, while sneezing, slipping and falling etc. (86). The devotee should recite Pañcākṣara hymn in all circumstances with due procedure or without following the set procedure in the state of tranquility or anger, purity or impurity (87). O Goddess ! the Śaiva-pañcākṣara hymn, the bestower of everything, should be recited regularly, whole heartedly in all places and times. This is the injunction of all the Vedas (88). There is no place superior to Kailāśa, no divinity superior to the supreme Śaṅkara, no discipline superior to Vīraśaiva and there is no happiness superior to liberation (89). There is no friend better than wisdom, no means superior to devotion, no mortal better than śaiva devotee and there is no hymn superior to Pañcākṣara (90). If anything is to be recited, it is the Śaiva-pañcākṣara hymn (91). O Goddess ! if one intends the status of the closest unison with me (Sāyujya) without any effort, he should never forget to recite constantly my supreme Pañcākṣara hymn (92). One should recite the supreme Śaiva-pañcākṣara hymn even in the state of letharginess, wickedness, in a jovial mood, in a deceitful mood or because of his humble nature (93). One who recite the supreme Pañcākṣara hymn once even in the state of dream, pleasure and pain, sexual intercourse, is sure to attain me (94). What to speak of him who chants devotedly the supreme among all the hymns, the divine Pañcākṣara hymn which is the bestower of both the enjoyment and liberation (95). By constantly remembering, singing, meditating, chanting, surrendering, contemplating, worshipping and even by remembering the supreme Pañcākṣara hymn one obtains the happiness of both the worlds (this world and heaven) and attains liberation (96). The devotee who recites the Śaiva-pañcākṣara hymn and worships Iṣṭaliṅga is undoubtedly Śiva Himself in his human form (97). O the daughter of the earth ! one who recites the Pañcākṣara hymn daily for one thousand times after worshipping the Iṣṭaliṅga, becomes one with Śiva (98). I am not able to express the glory of the Pañcākṣara hymn. Even the sinner who has killed a Brāhmin may be condoned undoubtedly by reciting this hymn (99). O the great Goddess ! I have narrated to you the characteristics of Śivayogī, his method of meditation and all procedures. What else you want to listen (100)?

शान्तो वा कुपितो वाऽपि शुद्धो वाऽशुद्ध एव वा ।
 ३९विधिनापि विना वाऽपि शैवं पञ्चाक्षरं जपेत् ॥८७॥

OBSERVANCE OF THE RECITATION OF PAÑCĀKṢARA HYMN

Goddess enquires —

O the supreme God, omniscient, the ocean of pure knowledge, Śaṅkara ! now, I desire to listen to the glory of the Pañcākṣara hymn (1). O Lord ! kindly explain to me the procedure of chanting of and meditating on the Pañcākṣara hymn ? What is the aim of this hymn ? what are the deity, sage and metre of this hymn ? O the great God ! please describe all these in detail (2).

A Clarification

God replies —

The narration of the glory of Pañcākṣara hymn, in detail, is almost impossible even in crores of years. So, I am describing it in a precise way. Please listen (3).

Five Syllable Hymn Becomes Six Syllable

In Veda and in the later part of Veda i.e. Upaniṣad, Pañcākṣara becomes Ṣaḍākṣara prefixed with the Praṇava and in the world only Pañcākṣara without adding the Praṇava is considered to be the main hymn (4). All the attainments are achieved by chanting the six syllable hymn i.e. 'aum namah Śivāya'. By the onset of Grace all are able to attain, in all circumstances, the wisdom of the supreme God manifested in the form of a swan (5). Six syllable hymn prefixed with 'aum' is the supreme among all hymns and is capable of fulfilling all the aspirations of the śaiva devotee (6). This hymn consisting of a few letters as the essence of Veda is the bestower of both the enjoyment and liberation. This hymn is only accomplished by His Grace and undoubtedly is the form of Śiva himself. This hymn as the form of Śiva himself is undoubtedly self evident by this injunction (7). This divine hymn is endowed with the various spiritual attainments and is also pleasant to the common people and possesses specific esoteric meaning, is uttered by the supreme Lord (8). This hymn can easily be pronounced and is the fulfiller of all desires. It is the essence of Veda in a few words and is the provider of both enjoyment and liberation (9).

 वाच्यवाचकयोरैक्यं मन्यमाना मनस्विनः ।
 ज्ञायते योगिभिर्ध्याने बोधानन्दाव्ययाद्वयः ॥१५॥

Glory of Praṇava

This Praṇava is the seed of all wisdom, the prefix of six syllable hymn, extremely subtle, having esoteric meaning and is known to be like the seed of a Banyan tree (10). I am beyond the three guṇas (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas), the omniscient, doer of all, Lord, inhere in the syllable 'aum' and again omnipresent (11). The hymn Praṇava is considered to be superior to Śiva Himself as the recitation of Praṇava results in devotion which is capable to lead to Śiva (12). The hymn Praṇava is known to be superior to the names Śiva, Rudra etc. Contemplation of Śiva through the symbol Praṇava and the recitation of the hymn Praṇava is the bestower of all the spiritual attainments undoubtedly (13). So, the saints (ṛṣis), the knower of Āgamas maintain the one syllable hymn as Śiva Himself on the basis of the identity of the preceptor and the perceived. Yogīs know it in their meditative state as the pure wisdom, bliss, immutability and non-duality (14-15).

Glory of Six Syllable Hymn

All the Īśāna and Pañcabrahma hymn etc. remain inherent gradually in subtle form in monosyllable hymn 'aum' with 'namah Śivāya', the Pañcākṣara hymn (16). Śiva in the form of Pañcākṣara hymn is existent in a subtle way in the letters of this hymn symbolising the unity of preceptor and the perceived (17). Śiva is the object of knowledge and so, it is known as the perceived (vācya) and also the preceptor (vācaka) of the hymn, is the means by which the attainment of Śiva is possible and thus both are united beginninglessly (18). O Śive ! I have created (the six or five syllable) the holy hymns since I am the lord, the knower of everything (omniscient). So, there is no other hymn equal to it (19). The whole scripture of Veda with all its divisions and subdivisions are existent in this six syllable hymn. So, there can never be any hymn equal or superior to it (20). All the seven crores of great hymns along with their innumerable auxiliaries are inseparable from this six syllable hymn just as the details inhere in the Sūtra (21). All the Āgamas propounding the knowledge of Śiva and also the other sources of knowledge are merely the elaboration and interpretation of the six syllable hymn, the form of sūtra<sup>1</sup> (22). What is the necessity of having various hymns and the voluminous scriptures for the devotee whose heart is adorned with the six syllable hymn i.e. 'om namah Śivāya' (23). O Goddess ! one who has established in himself the hymn 'om namah Śivāya' by constant recitation should be considered to have read everything and heard everything and accomplished all good dispositions in his conduct (24). The life of devotee is blessed on whose tongue the hymn 'Śivāya' consisting of three letters along with 'namah' is constantly reflected (25). Devotee who recites the Pañcākṣara hymn with all sincerity and devotion attains freedom from the bondage even if he belongs to the lowest caste, is wretched, moron or a learned person (26). Therefore, the six syllable hymn is the conferrer of all spiritual attainments. One who regularly chants this six syllable hymn which is only the form of mine in this world, such Vīraśaiva devotee gets easy access to the liberation (27-28).

Pañcākṣara — the Saviour

For a Vīraśaiva līngī who has entered into the śaiva discipline, the Pañcākṣara hymn is like a Kalpavṛkṣa (a celestial tree assumed to confer all bounties). The supreme wisdom is extremely blissful. Please listen to its secret nature as the destroyer of sins which I am explaining to you (29-30).

Pañcākṣarī Wisdom

The term 'namah' should be used in the beginning and then the supreme term 'Śivāya' is to be added (30). This Pañcākṣarī hymn becomes six syllable on adding 'Praṇava'. So, it is the matrix of all the words (31). This wisdom validated by the omniscient Śiva Himself, describes His nature by its semantics. The divine form of Pañcākṣarī defuses the radiance of hot gold, having healthy breast, has four hands and three eyes, is adorned with two early phases of moon on her forehead, bears the red and blue lotus, is sublime, assumes the postures of 'Vara' and 'Abhaya' with her hands, possesses all the auspicious signs, decorated with various ornaments, seated on the white lotus seat and has the blue hairs (32-34).

Seed-letter of Pañcākṣarī Wisdom

O Goddess ! the luminous rays emanate from the five letters of Pañcākṣarī wisdom are only of your nature and my nature is reflected by the syllable 'namah' (35). The colours of this five syllables are yellow, black, smoke, golden and red. Bindu and Nāda should be added with each of them if used separately (36). O the beautiful ! the form of Bindu is like half moon where as the form of Nāda is like the flame of the lamp. The seed of other hymns should be evolved from this hymn by contemplating the fourth syllable as long (vā) and fifth as Śakti (ya) (37-38).

Sage, Metre, Deity

O the daughter of the mountain ! Vāmadeva is the seer, Paṇti is the metre and the diety is I myself. O the great Goddess ! Gautam, Atri, Viśvāmitra, Aṅgirā, Bhāradvāj are the five seers of the five syllables of the hymn respectively (39-40). Gāyatri, Uṣṇik, Anuṣṭup, Bṛhat and Virāṭ are the five metres pertaining to this syllable of this hymn (40).

Presiding Deities and the Abodes of Syllable

Śiva, Rudra, Mahādeva, Īśvara and Parameśvara are the five presiding deities of the five syllable respectively (41). The five faces of Śiva (eastern, southern, western, northern and upper) are the abodes of the five syllable respectively (42). O Śive ! the first, second and fourth syllables of this hymn are Udātta (elevated, high), the fifth one is 'Svarit' (mixed tone being between high and low) and the third one is 'Anudātta' (low) (43).

Synonyms of the Pañcākṣarī According to the Sages

According to the sages Mūla, Vidyā, Śiva, Śaivasūtra, Pañcākṣara, Saḍakṣara are the synonyms<sup>2</sup> (44).

Six Abodes

The Mūlavidyā is contemplated as heart, the syllable 'na', the form of Śaṅkara as head, syllable 'ma' as crest, syllable 'śi' as shield, syllable 'va' as the three eyes and the syllable 'ya' represents weapon.

O Pārvatī ! six syllables such as 'namah, svāhā, vaṣaṭ, vauṣaṭ and phaṭ are assumed as the six organs of the hymn (45-46).

Mantra, Varṇa and Nyāsa

The ritual of Nyāsa should be observed on the five fingers i.e. index, middle, ring, little and thumb respectively contemplating the Pañca-brahma image of Śiva by reciting five syllables of the hymn (47). The names of the Pañca-brahma image of Śiva is Tatpuruṣa, Aghora, Sadyojāta, Vāmadeva and Īśāna. Nyāsa is to be performed on the face, heart, legs, anus and head of one's own body (48). The ritual Vinyāsa is to be performed reciting the five syllable without Praṇava on east, south, west, north and upper directions and again vinyāsa of syllable is to be performed with the addition of Praṇava (49). Then Golakanāsa should be performed for self-defence on the heart, face, shoulders, thighs, throat, navel and the two sides (50). The nyāsa should also be performed on arms, elbows and wrists with six syllables hymn (51). O Śive ! the ritual of vinyāsa should be performed on the head, face, heart, arm pits, thighs, two legs, heart and lotus face, throat with the postures of Mṛga, Abhay and Iṣṭa (52). O Goddess ! the ritual vinyāsa should again be performed on the face, shoulders, heart, legs, thighs, stomach respectively with the six syllables hymn (53). Again the ritual of vinyāsa should be performed on the head, forehead, stomach, genital organ and heart with the original hymn. Then extensive ritual of nyāsa should be performed by the learned person with the hymns herein (54). I bow unto the Lord Śiva, the Sthānu<sup>3</sup> who is of the form of eternal luminous Liṅga, the image of the four-fold God (caturmūrti), having besmeared the sacred ash (55).

Meditation

O the great Goddess ! thus the devotee should contemplate on me reciting the hymns mentioned herein after purifying his whole body by performing nyāsa and reciting hymns (55-56). One should regularly meditate on the Lord Maheśa whose body is like a silver mountain, forehead is adorned with the face of moon, body is lumious on account of the brightness of the ornaments of gems, two hands blissfully assume the postures of Vara (conferring boon) and Abhaya (assurance of fearlessness) and holds axe and stag by the rest two hands, who is seated on a lotus, praised by divinities standing around, who wears the skin of tiger, who is the cause of the universe, glorified by all, eradicator of all fear, having five faces and three eyes (56). O the great Goddess ! the devotee whose heart is blissful and pure should meditate on Śiva as described in the previous verse. The original hymn with a little alteration becomes the hymn for Goddess. The twelfth vowel is added into the fifth syllable of the original hymn and thus 'Śivāya' is changed into 'Śivāyai' (57-58).

तत्रास्य पञ्चमो वर्णो द्वादशस्वरभूषितः ।

१८येन केनापि वा देवि पूजा मुक्तिं हि नेष्यति ।

सदा सक्तेन मनसा यत्कृतं परमेष्ठिनः ॥६१॥

Procedure of Worship, Recitation and Oblation

O dear ! worshipper should worship us, recite the hymn and offer oblation by mind, body and speech (58-59). The devotee should perform our worship according to his faith, understanding, time, memory, capability, ability and disposition. If anybody performs worship devotedly any where, any time, in any way, with whatever is available, it leads him to liberation (59-61). The worship performed with full determination, sincerity of faith is very esteemed to Śiva, whether it is performed with due procedure or without procedure (61-62). O Goddess ! all the procedures laid down by me are for the persons who are not under any compulsion (62-63).

Observance of Rites

Now, I shall first narrate briefly all the auspicious procedures laid down in the scriptures without which all the rites are fruitless and by observance of which they become successful (63-64). If rites and rituals are devoid of knowledge, action, reverence and devotion and performed without respectfully paying some wealth to the priest, such rites and regular recitation of the hymn also remain fruitless (64-65).

Serving Guru for Initiation

On the otherhand, true recitation of the hymn alongwith the observance of the rituals performed with true knowledge, proper action, perfect reverence and in accordance with the procedures and consummated with proper respectful submission of wealth to the priest is immensely fruitful (65-66). O Goddess ! so devotee should approach Guru and make all efforts to propitiate him. The disciple should always

वाचा च मनसा चैव कायेन द्रविणेन च ।
 आचार्यं पूजयेच्छिष्यः सर्वदा देवि यत्नतः ॥६७॥

 ज्ञात्वा गुरुमुखात् सम्यग्ज्ञानार्णवमुत्तरेत् । कला तत्त्वाध्वभुवनं वर्णं पदमतः परम् ॥७२॥

devotedly worship Guru with his mind, body, words and wealth (67). If the disciple aspires for the spiritual attainment, then he should respectfully dedicate the elephant, horse, chariot, gems, farm, house, clothes and various kinds of food grains and precious stones to Guru. He should not be miserly rather should submit all kinds of luxurious items for spiritual achievement (68-69). Disciple should surrender everything to Guru along with himself and should worship him as per the procedure laid down to the best of his capacity without any deception (70).

Purification of Six Adhvas

O Goddess ! the disciple should respectfully acquire the hymns and wisdom gradually from Guru and should learn the means of purification of adhvas from Guru for self-realisation. He would be able to cross the ocean of nescience only after acquiring the true knowledge from Guru (71-72).

Initiation of Mantra by Guru

Kalā, Tattva, Bhuvan, Varṇa, Pada and Mantra are famous and called the six great adhvas (72-73). O Goddess ! Guru after having been satisfied with the one year service of the disciple should give him 'Śiva-mantra' after consecrating and decorating him with ornaments (73-74). The devotee who having received the mantra from the lotus mouth of Guru and after having purified the six adhvas by observing various rituals, meditates and regularly recites the hymns remaining completely detached from the objects of the world easily pleases Śiva, the Candramouli (74).

Rites for Empowering the Hymns

O Goddess ! the disciple having been consecrated by Guru and having received the initiation of glorious hymns and after empowering the hymns with full determination should regularly recite the hymn (75). He should meditate on Śiva with full concentration and having full control over his senses should recite the hymn 1008 times during the span of his life (76). One who observes the aforesaid rites attentively before taking food, attains the supreme state. If devotee who recites each and every syllable of the hymn for 4 lacs times and spends restrained moments after taking food at night, then his rite of empowering 'Puraścaraṇa'<sup>4</sup> of the hymn is completed. After performing this rite of Puraścaraṇa, the devotee who regularly recites the hymn becomes perfect and can make others perfect, there is none equal to him in the world (77-79).

Kinds of Recitation of Hymn

After taking bath the devotee should sit on a pleasant seat in a clean place, meditate on Śiva in the proximity of his Guru facing the north or the east, keeping silence with full concentration, purify the five elements of the body by performing the rite of 'Dahan and Plāvan'<sup>5</sup> etc. and by initiating the rite of nyāsa etc. for the 'Sakalikaraṇa' of the body (importing divinity in the different parts of the body) and should meditate on our image practising the procedure of Prāṇāyāma (79-82). Devotee should contemplate on the supreme form, seer, metre, divinity, seed of the hymn, power and the pure form of hymn while reciting the Pañcākṣara hymn<sup>6</sup> (82-83).

Three Types of Recitation of Hymn

Recitation of hymn within oneself is the highest type of recitation, recitation in lowest pitch is called medium and the vocal recitation is called inferior type of recitation by the knower of the Āgamas (83-84). O Goddess ! the hymn pertaining to Rudra is the highest in order, concerning Viṣṇu is of medium category and relating to Brahmā is known as inferior according to the scriptures (84-85). When the words, syllables and letters of the hymn are recited keeping in consideration the high, low and medium pitch as prescribed is known as vocal recitation (85-86). O Goddess ! when the hymn is recited in the lowest discernible pitch in which only the vibration of the tongue occurs and is hardly audible by others, is called 'Upāṅśu-japa' (86-87). O Goddess ! when the hymn is recited within mind contemplating intellectually on the letters, words, syllables and meaning is called Mānasa-japa (87-88). If the result of Vācika-japa is considered as one unit, then of Upāṅśu is hundred times more and Mānasa is one thousand times more where as the result of Sagarbha is hundred times more than the previous (88-89).

Sagarbha Japa

Performance of japa during Kumbhaka (holding of breathe after inhalation) is called Sagarbha-japa. Performance of japa during Recaka (inhalation and exhalation) are called the Agarbha-japa. This type of japa is adorable. Japa should be performed forty times in the state of Prāṇāyāma (89-90). Worthy devotee should recite the hymn of powerful Śiva contemplating on its meaning (as per his capacity). Devotee may perform either Agarbha or Sagarbha japa but Sagarbha among them is considered as superior (99).

Japa with Meditation

Japa with meditation is considered to be thousand times superior to Sagarbha. Devotee should perform any one of the five types of japa according to his capacity (92). If the recitation is enumerated by the fingers, the result is considered to be one only, if performed on the lines of the fingers, it is known to be eight times where as if enumeration is done with the help of the garland of the seed of 'Putrajīvi', it is ten times more (93). If it is performed with the garland of conch-shells, it produces hundred times result of the previous one, if performed with the garland of coral-beads, produces thousand times result, ten thousand times result is obtained by performing japa with the crystal garland and it is said that one lac times result is obtained by performing japa with the pearl beads garland (94). Performance of japa with the garland of lotus-beads produces ten lacs times of result, garland of golden beads is said to provide crore times of results and japa performed with the knots of kuśa and with garland of Rudrākṣa bestows the infinite times of results (95). O Śive ! Japa performed with the garland of thirty Rudrākṣa imparts wealth and japa performed with the garland containing 27 beads showers prosperity (96). Japa performed with the garland containing 25 Rudrākṣa beads bestows liberation. For the performance of japa with malevolent purposes garland of fifteen Rudrākṣa beads should be used (97).

Japa by Fingers

Japa performed by the thumb bestows liberation, by the index finger destroys enemy, by the middle finger provides wealth and if performed by the ring finger peace and tranquility are achieved (98).

Japa performed by the little finger provides protection and specially grants progeny. During the performance of japa with the thumb all other fingers should be used. Japa without thumb is fruitless (99-100).

Special Result of Japa Obtained in a Cowshed etc.

Japa performed in the house provides the result according to its number. If performed in a cowshed, confers hundred times of results than the former, if performed in an auspicious forest and garden grants thousand times of results. O Goddess ! japa performed on a mountain bestows ten thousand times of results and on the bank of a river bestows one lac times of results (100-101). O Goddess ! japa, if performed in a temple, grants crores of times of results and in the proximity of Śiva bestows infinite times of results. Japa performed facing the sun, fire, Guru, moon, lamp, water, Iṣṭaliṅga and cow is always beneficial (102-103).

Glory of Pañcākṣarī Japa

O the daughter of mountain ! the devotee who always observes the rules of good conduct should recite the Pañcākṣarī hymn. If this supreme hymn is fully ordained, all others are automatically accomplished. One who devotedly sings the glory of Pañcākṣarī wisdom or attentively hears it becomes free of all sins and attains my proximity (104-105).

Difference in Result due to Number

If one recites this hymn two thousand times, becomes free of all diseases, there is no doubt in it. If recited three thousand times, it grants longevity. If one thousand is added in the previous one (i.e. four thousand), all desires are fulfilled (105-106). O the daughter of the mountain ! oblations of sesamum mixed with ghee offered respectfully with chanting of hymns for one lac times destroys all kinds of miseries (107). O Pārvatī ! if a devotee performs japa for one hundred lac times, then he becomes Śiva Himself. What to say more, he attains my own form (108).

Attainment of Domain of Śiva by Pañcākṣara

The devotee who performs Pañcākṣarī japa in conformity with the laid down procedure, who has full control over his senses and has purified himself, resides in the place of Śiva or in any holy place or on the mountain, easily ascends to the domain of Śiva and remains in His proximity. (109). O Goddess ! thus I have narrated to you the glory of my supreme Pañcākṣara hymn. What more you want to listen ? (110).

advocating the Śaiva non-dualism while describing the procedure of initiation and the nature of the recitation of Pañcākṣarī hymn ॥ 11 ॥*

Chapter - 12

THE NATURE OF JÑĀNAYOGA

Goddess enquires —

O Śaṅkara ! the Lord of the lords, supreme God, bestower of pleasure and mercy, kindly enlighten me regarding the glory of Jñāna-yoga(1).

Jñāna-yoga and Their Inter-relation

O Śive ! the devotee who always observes the rules of virtuous conduct, ever practices the vow of non-violence, remains engrossed in acquiring knowledge, observes truthfulness, non-covetousness, possesses theistic attitude and reverence for God, has full control over the senses, spends his time in teaching, learning, worshipping and performing sacrifices and oblations, for whom all oblations and sacrifices are really acquiring the knowledge and devotion of God. Such person ever remains absorbed in both the internal worship and external rites and rituals and is always full of wisdom. Thus by practising the aforesaid discipline, the yogī for the fulfilment of the state of wisdom which is also the supreme state of yogī of the jñāna-yoga, acquires the capability to burn the body in a moment with the fire of his knowledge (2-5). By my Grace such yogī destroys all the bonds of karma. All kinds of deeds, whether virtuous or non-virtuous are considered to be detrimental to the liberation (6). So, yogī should abandon yoga itself along with all kinds of deeds whether virtuous or non-virtuous. The deed performed with a view to achieve the result leads to further deeds (which results in bondage). So, one should perform the deeds leaving the thought of result. Such deeds can not become the cause of further deeds (7-8). O Goddess ! one should perform first the karma-yoga i.e. the external worship of Śaṅkara and then observe the discipline of yoga for the attainment of knowledge (8-9). Then on account of the perfection of Jñāna-yoga, yogī experiences the one-ness with Śiva and does not observe the external worship and for him earth, stone and gold etc. are the same (9-10). O the great Goddess ! yogī, who remains absorbed in Jñāna-yoga, fully concentrated and devoted to God, ever remains in the state of liberation. Such Jñāna-yogī only attains the state of 'Sāyujya' i.e. the closest unison with Me (10-11). One who has yet not achieved the state of non-attachment, still desires to worship Śiva, should take up the path of knowledge, rites, ritual and all kinds of virtuous deeds for achieving his goal as only this much is his capability (11-12).

Three and Five Kinds of Worship

External, internal and exterio-internal are the three kinds of worship which is also divided into three categories concerning vocal, mental and somatic, please note.<sup>1</sup> O the consort of Rudra ! the worship of Śiva is of five kinds, namely, penance, auspicious deeds, recitation of hymn, meditation and knowledge. External worship is that which can be seen or known by others, whereas internal worship is experienced by one's own self only (12-15). The tongue which is incessantly reciting the name of Śiva is only worthy of being called the tongue. The body on which is scribed the śaiva symbols of Tripuṇḍra etc. as prescribed in the scriptures and which always remains engaged in worshipping Śiva is worthy of being called body, none the else (15-16). Worship of Śiva is only known as deed, not the other external rites and rituals. Restraining the body through the ascetic practices for Śiva is called the penance, not the rigorous vows like Cāndrāyāṇa etc. (17). The recitation of the Pañcākṣara hymn, Praṇava and the Rudrādhyāya etc. are considered to be only practices, not the other studies (18). Contemplation of Śiva is the only meditation and not resorting to Samādhi (highest state of consciousness achieved by deep meditation also called the fourth state) for self realisation, understanding the meaning the Śaivāgamas is known as the only knowledge and not the knowledge of other things (19). If one has the inclination towards the external and internal worships because of the force of previous life, then, he should worship Śiva in that way with firm determination (20).

Superiority of Internal Worship

Internal worship is hundred times superior to that of external as the wicked is unable to pose any menace and there is no possibility of fault (21). One should try to purify oneself internally and not only externally as the external purification without the internal is considered as impurity (22). One should maintain intense devotion in both external and internal worships. The worship devoid of devotion is not acceptable to God. It becomes only a cause of self deception (23). God Śiva is fully contented and self-satisfied (the supreme Lord). He is least concerned with anybody's deeds. For him only faith and devotion is agreeable (24).

Characteristics of the Superior Śaiva-devotee

There are eight characteristics of a śiva-devotee of superior order by which others know him as a distinguished person (25). He has an intense affection for the Śaiva devotees, conforms their worships, himself worships Śiva and makes all efforts for the same (26). He devoutly listens to the narration regarding Śiva during which exhibits in his voice, eyes and other organs all the external signs of intense internal emotional vibrations, ever remains absorbed in remembering Śiva and always keeps himself away from hypocrisy and deception (27). If these eight fold signs are visible in an outcaste, he should be considered as superior śaiva devotee, ascetic, virtuous, pure and wise (28).

Nature, Kinds and Glory of Devotion

Service with intense feeling is called the devotion. It is again of three kinds according to mental, vocal and physical (29). Devotee who is engrossed in observing the śaiva discipline attains the supreme devotion by which he is able to attain the Grace of Śiva (30). Whether a divinity or human being, animal or bird, insect or worm, all of them attain liberation with my Grace (31). O Goddess ! whether one is in embryonic stage or recently born, child or young, old or about to die, resident of heaven or hell, degraded or virtuous, wise or foolish, all such persons get release from the bondage of the world only by my Grace (32-33). Further, the devotee who has voluntarily sustained the body, adorned with the higher state of devotion and possessed with the auspicious qualities of previous life, either detached or attached to the worldly objects like wife etc. remains unpoluted by the same like a lotus leaf in the water (34-35).

तथैव शिवसान्निध्यान्न ते केवलमानुषाः ॥४१॥

Such pure Śiva yogī attains the knowledge of his identity with Śiva. Contrary to it, one who has not been graced with the compassion of Śiva suffers in the domain of misery (36).

Glory of the Disciplines of Śiva-yogī

O the daughter of the mountain ! Śiva-yogī is not bound by any kind of regulations regarding what is to be done and not to be done. For him, there is no difference between leading the ascetic life and performing the worldly duties. No rules regarding the injunctions or prohibitions are applicable for him as he attains union with me (37). As I am ever perfect, I am under no obligation to perform any worldly duty. In the same way, no duty is obligatory for a Śiva-yogī because he attains perfect contentment (38). Such persons take birth only for the welfare of the devotee of Śiva. They are the Rudras having come down from the sphere of Rudra, there is no doubt in it (39). As the Brahmā etc., all perform their prescribed duties in accordance with the injunctions of Śiva, so all other beings also are inspired to perform their duties as per His will. (40). As the iron in company with the fire assumes the nature of fire, in the same way, Śiva-yogī assumes the nature of Śiva in His proximity (41). Such Śiva-yogī who has attained the state of Rudra himself should never be disregarded by the wise mistakingly considering him as an ordinary man due to the similarity of hand and feet etc. (42). If a unwise disregards him, then that leads him to the hell destroying his longevity, prosperity, heritage and virtues (43). For such great souls, the state of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Indra are considered to be of no use in comparison to Śiva since the feet of Śiva is the only aim to be achieved for them. Liberation is easily accessible for such yogī who is fully endowed with the knowledge of Śiva (44-45). So, the nescience regarding Śiva is the greatest demerit of man. It entangles one in utter confusion and leads him to fall to the lowest order. Such person who has deviated from the path of liberation should never be shown any sympathy (45-46).

Four-fold Path of Śaiva Discipline

O the daughter of the mountain ! Jñāna, Kriyā, Caryā and Yoga are the four fold means advised in the eternal Śaiva religion<sup>2</sup> (46-47).

षडध्वशुद्धिर्विधिना गुवादीनां क्रियोच्यते ।
 वीरशैवप्रयुक्तस्य शिवेन विहितस्य च ॥४८॥
 लिङ्गाचदिः स्वधर्मस्य चर्या चर्येति कथ्यते ।

 वृत्त्यन्तरनिरोधोऽयं स योग इति कथ्यते ।
 अश्वमेधशताच्छ्रेष्ठं देवि चित्तप्रसादतः ॥५०॥
 मुक्तिदं च तदाप्येतदशक्तं विषयैषिभिः ।
 विजितेन्द्रियवर्गस्य यमेन नियमेन च ॥५१॥
 सर्वपापहरो योगो विरक्तस्यैव<sup>२६</sup> कथ्यते ।
 वैराग्याज्जायते ज्ञानं ज्ञानाद् योगः प्रवर्तते ॥५२॥
 योगज्ञः पतितो वाऽपि मुच्यते नात्र संशयः ।
 शिवज्ञानं समासाद्य परं शिवमथाश्नुते ॥५३॥

Knowledge of Paśu (soul), Pāśa (bondage) and Pati (Lord) are considered to be the only knowledge. The purification of the six adhvas duly performed by Guru is called as the only rite. The worship of Iṣṭalinga, another rites and rituals as instructed by Śiva Himself and performed by the Vīraśaiva devotees are known as Caryā (48-49). Observing the path as instructed by Guru, concentrating mind on Śiva and controlling the dispositions of the mind (Cittavṛtti) is called Yoga (49-50). It is superior to the performance of the hundred Aśvamedha yajña as it is immensely blissful and bestower of liberation. Persons having undue attachment for the worldly objects are incapable of performing it (50-51). Persons who have conquered their sense organs and regularly observe the prescribed rules of Yama and Niyama, only such non-attached persons are capable of accomplishing the yoga which is the destroyer of all sins. Detachment causes knowledge and yoga is achieved by knowledge (51-52). The knower of yoga undoubtedly attains liberation even if he belongs to the lowest order. He attains the supreme state of Śiva by achieving the knowledge of Śiva (53).

Necessity of Śaiva Discipline

If a person does not observe the prescribed śaiva discipline despite of his devotion to Śiva and detachment towards the objects of the world, is sure to be involved in vicious deeds (54). O Goddess ! if one desires his welfare, then he should worship the omnipresent Lord of Ambikā in every respect observing all rites and rituals of śaiva religion (55).

Glory of the Pañcākṣara Hymn

One should regularly contemplate on the Pañcākṣara hymn which is the symbolic expression of Śiva and worship the divine Praṇava as the nature of supreme Śiva, the bestower of both the enjoyment and the liberation (56). Devotee should recite with intense concentration the Pañcākṣarī hymn, the supreme wisdom and also should chant the hymn Praṇava for the proper worship of Śaṅkara (57). O the great Goddess ! such person achieves far more virtues than the observance of the thousands of Aśvamedha sacrifices and consequently attains the immutable knowledge of Śiva (58). One who chants the Pañcākṣara hymn while taking dip into the water of Rudra becomes worthy of the supreme virtues and assumes the nature of Liṅga even if he indulges in many misconducts. He should practice Śiva-yoga by taking refuge in Śiva-consciousness (59).

Pati, Paśu and Pāśa

Beginning from Brahmā to all immobiles, all beings are called the paśu of the Lord of the lords, the bearer of the Triad.<sup>3</sup> They all remain in the state of transmigration in the ever changing world. O Goddess ! I am called the Paśupati being their Lord (60-61). That Lord of paśus binds them with mala and māyā. Again it is only He who liberates from the bondage such beings who worship him with devotion (62). Twentyfour elements along with māyā, karma and three guṇas are called the 'Viśayas' that bind the souls and so are called the pāśas (fettters) (63). O the great Goddess ! this Lord of the paśus keeps in bondage with these fettters all the paśus right from Brahmā upto the blades of the grass and makes them work for Himself (64). The sense organs of the paśus remain under my control and they make the paśus work as per their will (65).

Vīraśaiva Initiation for the Removal of the Bondage

O Śive ! so, the devotee who worships the Iṣṭalinga knowing It the Lord of the paśus attains the supreme liberation by eliminating all the bonds caused by the ignorance (66). O Goddess ! I am the bestower of both the enjoyment and liberation and the eliminator of the state of paśu (bondage). So, I should ever be worshipped with devotion and with prescribed procedure (67). The devotee who without being impatient regularly and steadily worships Śiva till the end of his life after taking initiation into the Vīraśaiva discipline which is capable of leading one to the ultimate aim, is called the 'Naiṣṭika' (one who is entirely devoted to the faith) (68). So, the Naiṣṭika Śivayogī is known as 'Atyāśramī' and Mahāmāheśvara'. He is supreme among the ascetics, Mahāvratī and of the nature of Śiva Himself (69). No one is as self-contented as he is among the seekers of the liberation. The initiation duly observed throughout the life is the extinguisher of all deadly sins (70). Nobody is like the devotee who is fully contented, detached, observes the duties of Vīraśaiva and has fully surrendered himself to Śiva (71). The person who pays respect to the devotee who is firmly established in Vīraśaiva discipline, immediately becomes free from all sins like killing the brāhmins and crosses the ocean of the world (72). The potency which is inherent in the fire of Śiva is also existent in the devotee of Vīraśaiva. Therefore, such powerful devotees should ever remain absorbed in worshipping Śiva (73). Just the Veda is for the twice born, husband for the wife, wisdom for the renunciated, in the same way Vīraśaiva religion is the only refuge of all śaivas (74).

Nothing Superior to Śiva

Just as Indra whose vehicle is the cloud, is superior to all gods and Brahmā is superior to Indra and again Viṣṇu is superior to Brahmā, in the same way I am the supreme among all the divinities including Viṣṇu. No one transcends me. So, no order is superior to my Vīraśaiva discipline (75-76).

Relative Superiority of Beings

Animals possess more intelligence than the worms, insects and flies; human beings are superior to animals and the twice born are yet superior among them. Brāhmins are superior among the twice born, learned are considered to be superior among the brāhmins, again the wise who translates the knowledge into action is far superior, the renunciated ascetic is superior to the former (77-78). O the great Goddess ! one who has attained the true knowledge is undoubtedly superior to all stated earlier. The worshipper of Śaṅkara is definitely superior to him. Among the worshippers of Śiva, the wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga is considered to be superior and again the devotee who remains engaged in observing my yoga is superior to the former. The devotee who has been initiated in the order of the Vīraśaiva religion is the supreme among the all (79-80). O the daughter of the mountain ! there is none superior to him in the three spheres (of creation). Just as there is none superior to Me, so also there is no order superior to the śaiva religion. O Goddess ! Vīra Māheśvara is none else but me only (81-82).

Glory of Reciting Name

O the great Goddess ! the devotee having restrained senses who regularly recites the names, Śiva, Maheśvara, Śambhu, Pināki, Pitāmah (prime ancestor), Sansār-vaidya (eliminator of the miseries of the world),

स एवाहं महादेवि मन्नामस्मरणात् सदा ।

 आम्नायसिद्धौ निखिलो धर्म आश्रमिणामिह ॥९०॥

Sarvajña (omniscient), Paramātmā (supreme Self) assumes the nature of mine (82-84). O Goddess ! the devotee should regularly recite the hymn, 'Śiva Śambhu, Śiva Śambhu, Śiva Śambhu Śiva Śiva'. Thus the wearers of my Liṅga should spend the day continuously by chanting and remembering the above mentioned hymn (84-85).

Reverence Causes Devotion

O Goddess ! please listen to whatever I am stating out of affection for you. I am not pleased with one who performs various kinds of virtuous deeds, penance, chanting the hymns, meditation, donations or any other religious activities without proper reverence (86-87). O Goddess ! I am pleased with the devotee who possesses reverence any how, without any reason. So, O Goddess ! Vīraśaiva yogī should ever sing my glory and make effort to touch, see and worship me (87-88). One should try to acquire the sufficient reverence because I submit myself only to such devotees. The devotee who has enough reverence on my religious order develops devotion for me (89). The reverence for me only develops in such persons and none the else (89-90). God Brahmā propagated in the ancient time the religious order as propounded in Vedas in accordance with my instruction. This religion as advocated by Brahmā is very extensive (91). O great Goddess ! by performing all the auspicious deeds the devotee develops intense reverence for me which is not easily attainable. O Goddess ! only such devoted Māheśvara yogis come to my refuge (92).

Power of Devotion

It is my firm imperative that only such devoted Viraśaiva, the wearer of Liṅga, are authorised to achieve the four fold Puruṣārthas i.e. Dharma, Artha, Kāma and Mokṣa by adopting this pleasant path and not the others (93-94). O the great Goddess ! so, the devotee should contemplate Śiva, the cause of all causes, in the heart and devotedly worship me (94-95). By firmly and solely concentrating on me the devotee attains liberation, in whatever condition he is, by assuming Śiva-consciousness (95-96).

Virtuous Conducts

Now, I shall be describing the general virtuous conducts of the śaiva devotees by observing which everybody attains the state of undeviated devotion<sup>5</sup> (96-97). Besmearing the sacred ashes all the three times, worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga properly, following the prescribed procedure, chanting the hymn, meditating on Īśvara, having compassion for everybody everywhere, truthfulness, contentment, theistic attitude, possessing non-violent attitude for all beings, shyness, respect, aptitude for self study, practice of yoga, regular recitation of Pañcākṣara hymn, delivering discourses on and listening to śaiva-scriptures, observing penance, forgiveness, casting aside the prohibited, besmearing the sacred ash and wearing Rudrākṣa, worshipping Śiva, specially on Monday, on the day of Pradoṣa, never abandoning the duties prescribed by the scriptures, refusing the food served on the last rite, specially the stale food and the food offered by a prostitute,<sup>6</sup> not accepting any intoxicating drinks, its odour and even if offered as 'naivedya' - these prescribed rules are for all castes and specially for Vīraśaiva devotees (97-102).

Special Virtuous Conducts for Vīraśaivas

Forgiveness, peace, contentment, truthfulness, non-covetousness, observing restrained life, Śiva-consciousness, renunciation, smearing of the sacred ash and abandoning all kinds of attachments are the ten virtues specially to be observed. While observing the above mentioned general and special virtues, śaiva devotee should imagine the whole world of movables and immovables as permeated with Liṅga (103-104). O Goddess ! thus I have duly stated, in detail, the glory of the Pañcākṣara hymn propounded in the great Māheśvarāgama (105). O dear ! thus the Karma (action), Yoga, Jñāna (knowledge), and the rites to be observed and not to be observed have all been described by me. What else you want to listen? (106).

PROCEDURE OF WORSHIP ON LOTUS-PALM

O the Lord ! elixir of kindness flows from your eyes, you are the abode of all who aspire liberation, O the Giridhanvin ! I bow unto you (1). O Lord ! I have attentively listened to the description, in detail, of the various kinds of Śaiva disciplines and their mystery as narrated by you (2). You have propounded different kinds of disciplines according to the abilities of the devotees so that the devotees may regularly worship Liṅga properly (3). O God ! kindly preach the procedure for the regular worship of Iṣṭaliṅga and the characteristics of the various places and the palm where the Liṅga is installed (4). What are the relative results of the worships performed on the various places? Please tell me, whether all are of equal importance or some one is special (5).

God replies —

O Goddess ! please listen attentively, this peaceful mystery which is to be kept confidential carefully, I am narrating to you because of my affection for you (6).

The Characteristics of the Palm Among Various Seats (Pīṭhas)

There are various 'Pīṭhas' (seats) for worshipping my Liṅga and relative results are undoubtedly obtained from all of them (7). For the devotees, there are many Pīṭhas for my worship, but the palm of the left hand as seat for Mahāliṅga is the supreme among all Pīṭhas for my devotees. The whole world of movable and immovable things are only the manifestation of Mahāliṅga (8). For the Viraśaiva Liṅgi who has attained a higher stage and also remains absorbed in practising yoga, O Īśānī ! heart is a suitable Pīṭha (seat) (9). For those devotees who are of lower order an external Pīṭha and for the devotees of preliminary stage, lotus-palm as the seat for the regular worship of Iṣṭaliṅga is considered to be suitable (10). Assuming the palm of the left hand as a lotus and installing the Iṣṭalinga in the middle of it, the devotee should regularly perform worship of Iṣṭalinga (11). This lotus-palm is known as 'Karapīṭha' and is the impartor of four Puruṣārthas i.e. Dharma, Artha, Kāma and Mokṣa. Apart from this, there are other seats made of wood, stone, iron and earth prescribed in the scriptures (12). The seat of leather, blanket, cloth, leaves, earth, grass, wherever the Liṅga is installed, the devotee should contemplate it as Pīṭha (13). The seat made of wood causes poverty, of stone bestows son and wealth, of iron accords all kinds of attainments and the seat made of earth destroys knowledge (14). The seat made of leather gives pain and diseases, of blanket causes sufferings, of clothes provides all kinds of good results and the seat made of leaves accords gold (15). The seat of earth is the destroyer of all purposes, seat made of grass causes many disturbances. So, O Devī ! the lotus-palm is to be considered supreme as Pīṭha (16).

Nature of Palm-pīṭha

I am specially describing the nature of the palm-pīṭha to you. The devotee should consider his own left hand as an auspicious five-petalled lotus (17). He should contemplate the five fingers as five petals, the middle of the palm as the centre of the lotus and the lines of the hands as pollen (18).

Contemplation of the Five Fingers as Pañcabrahma Pañcāgni

Devotee should contemplate five fingers as the five forms of Śiva (Īśāna etc.) by uttering the hymns of Pañcabrahmānuvāk and should also meditate the centre of the palm as the goddess Pārvatī (19). O Goddess ! learned should contemplate the five fingers commencing from the thumb to the little finger gradually as Gārhapatyā, Dakṣiṇāgni, Āhavanīya, Sabhya, Āvasathya (20). O Śive ! the devotee should also meditate the five faces of Śiva on the five fingers of the hand (21).

Contemplation of Deities in Different Directions

Devotee should contemplate Indra etc. eight protectors on the eight directions starting from the east and should meditate Durgā, Maheśvarī, Caṇḍī, Bhadrakālī on the four directions commencing Nandīśa, Riti, Bhṛṅgi and Tuṇḍi are the four names of the Pramatha nāyaka (courtiers). Nandīśa should be contemplated in Āgneya (south-east), Riti in Īśāna (north-east), Bhṛṅgi in Nairṭya and Tuṇḍi in Vāyavīya directions (north-west) (24). In between the direction, twelve Ādityas, nine planets, Seven oceans and Śrīśaila etc. main mountains, Kāśī etc. main pious places, Gaṅga etc., all the rivers, Kalpa tree etc. all the divine trees, Cintāmaṇi gem and sacred Kāmadhenu, various stars, ten directions, Ṛk, Yajuh, Sām, Atharvaveda along with Purāṇas, history, Mahābhārat as fifth Veda, Mīmāṃsā-Vedānta, Nyāya (logic), Sāṅkhya-yoga, Vaiśeṣika, philosophy and Dharmaśāstras (ethics) should be contemplated and the worship of Liṅga should be performed in the middle of them (25-28). Starting from the elbows to the wrist which is like a stem of the lotus on which five-faced Lord should be meditated upon (29).

Glory of Worship on the Lotus-palm

This lotus is of the nature of all the Vedas and all the sacred places. This lotus-palm-seat is the bestower of all fortunes (30). There is no difference in my worship performed on the lotus-palm whether observed in brief or in detail (31).

Procedure of Worship on Lotus-palm

Iṣṭalinga should be taken out from the door of the casket and kept in the middle of the lotus-palm. Then the wearer of the Liṅga should worship Liṅga by his right hand (32). O Śive ! the five petalled lotus of palm described earlier is to be contemplated upon, then Śivayogī should recite the original hymn hundred or thousand times according to his ability and imagine a throne on which I am seated beside you in a blissful posture (33-34). Starting from welcoming the deity upto the culmination of the worship, the Iṣṭalinga should be kept installed on the lotus-palm. This only is the procedure of worship on the palm (35). Devotee, while performing the worship with ablution etc., to the best of his capability and devotion, should keep the Iṣṭaliṅga installed on the lotus-palm till the completion of the worship (36). Learned devotee should pay obeisance and go around the deity mentally. He should not get up from his seat nor should he move till the end of the worship (37). Devotee after completion of the worship should put the Iṣṭaliṅga inside the casket, close the door and tie up with the Śiva-thread after keeping it in the cloth and also should chant the original hymn hundred times (38).

Rules for the Worship on the Lotus-palm

O Goddess ! one should not leave the seat till the worship is completed even if his Guru enters or the house is on fire (39). O Śive ! if the worshipper stands up in the middle of the worship keeping the Iṣṭaliṅga on his palm, he should undoubtedly be considered inimical both to me and to his Guru (40). So, the worshipper should worship the Iṣṭaliṅga on his lotus-palm as per his capacity with a tranquil mind in a lonely place (41). He should contemplate a divine tortoise beneath the lotus-palm, spread in eight directions, eight protectors of the directions and in the middle the Śeṣanāga decorated with the thousand tongues should also be contemplated again (42). The devotee should contemplate the Iṣṭalinga as immanent in the whole universe being without beginning, middle and end. Because of the intense devotion of the worshipper and the Grace of God, I reside on his lotus-palm (43).

Procedure of Ablution

The Iṣṭalinga may be bathed with the water of one thousand pots, hundred and eight pots, sixty four pots, thirty two pots, twenty four pots, sixteen pots, twelve pots, eight pots, five pots, two pots or the water of one pot only (44-45). The Iṣṭalinga may also be bathed with the water of one thousand pots, one hundred and eight pots or it can also be immersed with only the handful of water. The devotee should anoint the Iṣṭalinga with the scented, purified, cold and pure water as per his capacity and devotion (46-47).

Consecrating Pot

This consecrating pot may be made of conch shell, horn of rhinoceros, golden shell or it may be constructed of iron, leaves or by any other materials (48). O the great Goddess ! if an appropriate pot is not available, the devotee should assume the desired pot and anoint the Iṣṭaliṅga by his right hand as per his capacity (49). O Goddess ! bathing Iṣṭaliṅga with the one thousand handful of water is equivalent to the water of one thousand pots. Performance of ablution with intense devotion is superior to the ablution by the water of the oceans (50). O Śive ! I consider myself anointed with the water of thousands of oceans if my devotee bathes me with the same number of handful of water (51).

Collection of Water for Ablution

O Śive ! all the divinities and pilgrimages inhere in water. Who will not attain Śivahood by reverently consecrating with this auspicious water ? (52). Devotee attains the nature of Śiva by anointing me devotedly with cold, light, scented water and the water which has been filtered with the cloth hundred times (53). The water presently drawn from the well is superior to the water retained in the pot, the water from the water fall is superior to it, the water taken from the pilgrimage pond, the water of a great river are relatively superior to the earlier (54). The water of Ganges is superior to all rivers and the water of Gaṅgā-sāgar is the most auspicious. The devotee should make efforts to obtain water from there and should perform the sacred bath of mine (55).

Procedure of Worship After the Sacred Bath

I always feel pleasure with the meditation, and ingredients of worship like Droṇa flower, bilva leaves, lotus-palm, sound of bell and the sound of conch (56). Devotee should carefully offer me Daśaṅga Dhūp (the ten-fold incense power)<sup>1</sup>, camphor and lamp. Worshipper of Iṣṭaliṅga on lotus-palm should submit the worship in the form of recitation of hymn, praising the glory and paying obeisance (57).

Obligation to Observe the Rules

Devotee who desires to worship the Iṣṭaliṅga on the lotus-palm, should regularly observe the rules and should not get up till the culmination of the worship (58). He should ensure the non-existence of any impediments before commencing worship on the lotus-palm. In other believes, the worshipper may get up and complete the worship after the removal of the obstruction. Otherwise, the vow is broken and the devotee suffers the Rauravahell (59-60). If the worshipper is unable to sit and gets up in the middle of worship after commencing the worship owing to some compulsion, then also he suffers Raurava hell (61). Even if all ingredients of worship are not available, the worshipper should bathe me devotedly by the right hand keeping me installed on the left hand (62). If the devotee is capable, he should perform the ablution with the aforesaid procedure three times a day on the lotus-palm for one year (63). He should contemplate the water of thousand pots or the water of thousand handful in the water for my ablution. Such devotee who leads a restrained life and sleeps on the ground is fortunate to perceive me in the dream (64).

Infinite Results of the Worship on the Lotus-palm

Worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga in casket (sajjikā) by opening its door, the devotee gets hundred times of results; worshipping on the earth by installing the Iṣṭaliṅga on the cloth etc. produces hundred times more result than the previous one; worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga on the jewelled golden seat produces thousand times of results and worshipping on the lotus palm seat bestows infinite times of results than the previous ones. So, devotee should worship the Iṣṭaliṅga on the lotus-palm following the prescribed procedures, knowing it from Guru (65-67). If he behaves contrary to it due to knavery, his longevity considerably diminishes and all powerful God does not accept his worship (68).

Procedure of Worship to be Learned from Guru

There are persons who adopt the means of attachment (to the worldly life) for securing Dharma and Artha, where as others choose the means of detachment (from the worldly affairs) for achieving their ends. They should learn the proper rules of the scriptures from Guru and should act accordingly (69). O Umā ! as the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga is supreme among all worships, as the Pañcākṣarī hymn is the supreme among all mantras and the name of Śrīguru is the foremost of all the names, so, the lotus-palm as the seat of worship is the supreme among all seats (70). O Goddess ! when the learned performs the ablution of Iṣṭaliṅga on the seat of lotus-palm after knowing it from Guru, then he attains me eternally (71). After passing through the hundreds of lives the devotee secures the knowledge of the glory of lotus-palm-seat and that is to be known as his last life. The lotus-palm seat is like a hymn (72).

All the Divinities and Pilgrimages Inhere in Lotus-palm-seat

This lotus-palm-seat exists in one's own body without any effort. This seat is the abode of all the deities and pilgrimages (73). Kāśī is ever situated in the middle of the lotus-palm, where as Ayodhyā is situated at the base of the thumb and Avantikā is situated at the root of the index finger (74). Mathurā is situated at the base of the middle finger, Māyāpurī (Hardvār) at the base of the ring finger, Kāñcī at the base of the little finger and Dvārakā is situated at the wrist<sup>2</sup> (75). O Śive ! the pilgrimage Gokarṇa is situated in the middle of the thumb, Rāmeśvara is in the middle of the index finger, the celebrated mountain Śrīśailam resides in the mid of the middle finger and the famous pilgrimage Kālahasti is ever existent in the middle of the little finger (76-77). The Saptakoṭīśvara pilgrimage is situated on the right side of the palm and the Virupākṣa pilgrimage is existent on the back side of the palm. The sacred rivers Ganges, Yamunā, Kṛṣṇā and Kāverī reside in between the fingers (78). The great Liṅgas Brahmeśa, Pañcaliṅgeśa, Markaṇḍeśa, Cidambaram and Mahākāleśvaram are to be contemplated on the tips of the five fingers (79). Worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga on lotus-palm-seat integrates all sacred hymns and all sacred seats. This supremely blessed seat among all sacred seats provides all auspicious results spontaneously (80).

Glory of Worshipping on Lotus-palm-seat

As my Pañcākṣara hymn is the supreme among all hymns, as I am the Lord of the deities like Brahmā, Viṣṇu etc ; (81). As my worship is superior to all rites and rituals, as the name of Śrīguru is the most benevolent among all the names which are used (82). O Śive ! as devotion to me is supreme among the devotions to all deities, in the same way my worship on the lotus-palm-seat is the supreme among all the types of worships (83). As the Droṇa flower among all flowers, bilvaleaf among all leaves, sesamum and rice among all the ingredients and dūrva among all the grasses are considered to be most pious (84). O Goddess ! even in case of capable or incapable devotee who is able or not able to collect enough items of worship, or in case of non-availability of ingredients of worship, in all such circumstances the worship on the lotus-palm-seat gives pleasure to everybody and provides auspicious results (85). The sacred bath of Iṣṭaliṅga installed on a seat with the water of crores of pots and the ablution of Iṣṭaliṅga installed on a lotus-palm-seat with a drop of water provide equal results (86). The ablution of Iṣṭaliṅga by a prosperous man with the water of hundreds of golden pots and ordinary person with a handful of water imparts equal results (87). In case of any deficiency or surplus, knowingly or unknowingly in the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga on the lotus-palm-seat, all the defaults are condoned (88). In such cases there is no necessity of any atonement since there is no deficiency in the worship of Iṣṭalinga on the lotus-palm-seat and thus everything is accomplished (89). O the great Goddess ! the principal rule for the worship of Iṣṭalinga on the lotus-palm-seat is that the worshipper should not get up from his seat in the middle of the worship, i.e. he should remain seated right from the commencement to the completion of the worship (90). If anybody is unable to perform the ablution and worship etc. adequately with all ingredients, then for performing the worship according to his ability, he should make use the lotus-palm-seat (91). Worshipping Iṣṭalinga on the lotus-palm-seat is valid as per prescribed rules for the common people. There is no default in the installation and worship of the Iṣṭalinga on the lotus-palm-seat (92). O Śive ! there is no appropriate seat for the worship of the Iṣṭalinga, even the mountain Meru and Kailāśa may hardly be equal to it (93). So, the lotus-palm-seat which is the embodiment of all deities and supreme for carefully installing and worshipping Iṣṭalinga (94). Devotee should always perform worship on the lotus-palm by reciting thousand, hundred or even one name and offering equal number of flowers or only one flower on the Iṣṭaliṅga (95). Worshipper should spread a clean cloth on delicate and auspicious palm of the left hand and install and worship Iṣṭaliṅga with the leaves and flowers by the right hand (96). Thus two hands of Śivayogī utilised for worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga are transformed into the hands of Śiva Himself in which He holds the Trident and skull. The shadow of the Iṣṭaliṅga worn by the devotee on the neck casts its image on the throat, thus the Śivayogī becomes like 'Nīlakaṇṭha' (97). O Goddess ! the glory of the mysterious lotus-palm-seat has thus been described (in the scriptures). What more you want to listen (98) ?

 propounding the doctrine of Śaiva non-dualism describing the procedures of worship on the lotus-palm-seat. ॥ 13 ॥

Chapter - 14

INSTALLATION OF LINGA WITH EIGHT-FOLD KNOTS AND WORSHIP OF GURU

Goddess enquires —

O the consciousness, the embodiment of consciousness and the cause of all consciousness ! I bow unto you. You are the benefactor, the bearer of moon on the forehead and my Guru (1). O God ! you have narrated, in detail, the mysterious procedure of worship on the lotus-palm-seat. Now I intend to know the characteristics of Linga (2). What virtuous result is obtained by worshipping differentiated and non-differentiated Linga. If the differentiated Linga is loosened in the middle, what should be the duty of the worshipper (3). O the Lord of Umā ! Kindly describe these principles in detail, so that the people by knowing that get inclined towards you (4).

God replies —

O Goddess ! please listen. I am out of affection explaining to you the mysterious and secret doctrine which you are enquiring to me (5).

Differentiated and Non-differentiated Liṅga

Liṅga is of two kinds viz. differentiated and non-differentiated. Differentiated Liṅga is again of two kinds, namely, differentiated and non-differentiated (6). The former non-differentiated Liṅga is beginningless and endless, of the nature of 'Śūnya' (transcendental), formless and immutable (7). This non-differentiated Liṅga which is the supreme, of the nature of pure consciousness and bliss, is for the Śivayogī who has attained much higher spiritual level. For the other Yogīs who are still progressing towards the spiritual aim should worship the differentiated Liṅga (Sakhaṇḍa) and meditate on God residing in his heart (8). External Liṅga (Sakhaṇḍa) made of stone etc. are of two kinds, namely, Akhaṇḍa and Sakhaṇḍa as described earlier. This Liṅga is endowed with aforesaid characteristics (9).

The Iṣṭaliṅga worshipped on the lotus-palm-seat is called Akhaṇḍa and the Liṅga and the Liṅgas other than that are known as Sakhaṇḍa (10). All these Liṅgas bestow different kinds of result in accordance with the capabilities of the devotees, though in all cases devotion is considered to be the most important feature (11).

Specification and Wearing of Iṣṭaliṅga

The length of the upper and the lower portion of the base of the Liṅga should be equal to breadth and height of the Liṅga (12). The size of the Somasūtra Liṅga (Pañcasūtraliṅga) should be equal to the aforesaid dimension (13). The dimension of Liṅga should be ascertained according to the dimension of the base and upper portion of the seat (14). O Goddess ! the one fourth portion of the Liṅga should be installed into the base and both the Liṅga and the base are to be attached with the aṣṭabandha<sup>1</sup> (15). Further, after completing the procedure of aṣṭabandha and consecrating the Liṅga, the initiation should be performed. This process of sacred bath is valid both for the Iṣṭaliṅga installed on the lotus-palm-seat and the Liṅgas installed on other places (16). In case of unfortunate destruction of the Iṣṭaliṅga due to theft, delusion or due to onset of misery, the devotee may wear a new one (17). O Goddess ! if the devotee remains without the Iṣṭaliṅga even for a moment after having been initiated and provided the Iṣṭaliṅga by Guru, he is destined to suffer in the Raurava hell (18). The devotee should neither wear two Iṣṭaliṅgas nor should he worship two Iṣṭaliṅgas. As I am only one, so he should never worship many Liṅgas on the same day (19). Both Liṅga and the lotus-palm-seat should be contemplated as one and the same. Accepting this that I am the only Śaṅkara, the devotee should assume the unity of the Iṣṭaliṅga and the lotus-palm-seat (20). For fixing firmly the Iṣṭaliṅga having six or three points standards with the seat, the aṣṭabandha should be used (21). After tying with five or three knots, adhesive lubricant should be used so that the Liṅga may be reinstalled if it is loosened (22).

Atonement on Destruction of Iṣṭalinga

Now, Liṅga or seat should be accepted in case of destruction of Liṅga or seat and eight-fold knots (aṣṭabandha) should again be used if it is loosened to make it steady (23). If the Liṅga is destroyed, re-initiation has to be taken after performing one night ritual with prescribed procedure, if the seat is destroyed, there is the provision of immediate initiation (24). In case of loosening of the eight fold adhesives, devotee should perform oblation in the fire, get initiation and observe other rituals and should offer food to one hundred and eight Śivayogīs to the best of his capacity (25). Further, he should recite my Pañcākṣara hymn for twelve thousand times, otherwise he lands in trouble and suffers Raurava hell (26). In case of the destruction of Liṅga, the Liṅga should be reconstructed, in case of the destruction of the seat, the seat should be reconstructed and in case of loosening of knots, it should again be properly fixed up (27). Re-initiation is essential in case of destruction of Liṅga, seat and adhesive. If the casket, cloth and thread are destroyed, they should immediately be replaced (28). Oblation to fire, offering of wealth, alms and offering of food to the Jaṅgamas along with the recitation of hymn are to be performed in equal number for all the three i.e. Iṣṭaliṅga, seat and knots (29). O the great Goddess ! in the same way recitation of hymn giving of alms and offering food to the Jaṅgamas as per one's capacity are equal in case of destruction of casket, cloth or Śiva-thread (30). O the great Goddess ! I am describing to you something of special importance, please listen. If a devotee is incapable of worshipping me, then he may recite only Pañcākṣara hymn and worship my Iṣṭaliṅga (31). Unfortunately, if the adhesive binding is loosened, it should immediately be repaired by any means (32). One should make immediate effort to firmly establish Iṣṭaliṅga on the seat. One should not be indifferent to it because I feel annoyed in such circumstances (33). Wise should always pay attention to the protection of Iṣṭaliṅga just as he does in case of his life and body; he should immediately wear a new one on its destruction (34). O Śive ! if any part of the Liṅga is separated from the Iṣṭaliṅga of the first worn Iṣṭaliṅga of the devotee, the remainder should be attached to the original and worn as long as possible (35). If it happens in case of second or third Iṣṭalinga of the devotee, he should at once wear a new one for condonment. Devotee should arrange for immediate re-initiation and offer food to Śivayogīs (36).

Nature and Characteristics of Vessel

Vessel is to be replaced if destroyed and same type of vessel should be accepted in place of old one. O the great Goddess ! I am describing to you the nature of vessels in this context, please listen (37). The vessel should be made of gold, silver, bell metal, copper or brass. It may also be made of wood, earth, stone, leaves or coconut (38). The pots are required to be unbroken, big, smooth, circular, new, bright unblemish, dustless, sweetly scented, light and beautiful (39). Devotee should arrange for nine, seven, five or three vessels for worship. He should not take one or even number of vessel (40). Even the poor should never use the vessel made of lead, iron or zinc. Undesirable and various numbers of vessels are prohibited in the worship of Śiva (41). Vessels beautifully made of conch shell and horn of the Rhinoceros are specially acceptable. Vessels made of earth and coconut may also be used in the worship of Śiva (42). Devotee should not move the vessel without any reason and should not let the water fall down during the worship (43). Vessel made of gold may be considered to be the best. In case of its non-availability, the vessels of silver, copper, earth and leaf may be used as per the capacity (44). O Goddess ! the vessel made of coconut shell is uniformly acceptable for all in the worship of Śiva. It increases the longevity, fame and strength and prevents the accidental death (45).

Nature of Śiva-vessel

The vessel which is regularly and adequately cleaned and which is not used for any other purpose but for the worship of Śiva-linga, is called the Śiva-vessel (46).

Welcome of Pilgrimage on the Vessel

While performing worship the devotee should assume the presence of the seven oceans, and the rivers Ganges, Godāvarī,

Description of the Base for the Vessel

Adequate base should carefully be made for keeping the vessel on the ground. Suitable base is to be constructed to ensure that they do not fall down (50). The vessel of water drawn from the well for the consecration of Liṅga should not be kept on the ground rather on a proper base (51).

Rules for the Worship on the Palm

In case of sudden nature's call during the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga on the lotus palm, the wearer of Liṅga should keep the Iṣṭaliṅga on the palm of his disciple for the time being<sup>3</sup> (52). O Goddess ! if no disciple is present there at that time, the Liṅga should be kept into the casket then the devotee after easing himself should properly take bath (53). O My dear ! thereafter he should complete the remaining worship as earlier, otherwise he falls into and suffers the heinous hell (54). One should not worship Iṣṭaliṅga in polluted state, nor untimely, nor indifferently nor should he worship disrespectfully. This is the proper procedure of worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga on the lotus palm (55). Devotee should carefully worship as per the procedure taught by Guru after besmearing the sacred ash, wearing Rudrākṣa and constantly chanting the name of Śiva (56). O Goddess ! the worshipper should not engage himself in other works and in incoherent utterances nor should he be worried or in hurry during the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga (57). O Goddess ! devotee should worship Iṣṭaliṅga with contented , tranquil and pure mind, attired with beautiful costumes and adorned with the ornaments and garlands and sweetly odoured mouth (58).

Facing Direction in the Worship of Iṣṭaliṅga

O Śāṅkarī ! the worship of the Iṣṭaliṅga should be accomplished always facing the east. This bestows on him longevity, prosperity, fame, authority, progeny and achievements as desired (59). O Śive !

दक्षिणाभिमुखः कुर्यान्मारणादिषु सुन्दरि<sup>१७</sup> ।

the worship performed facing south destroys one's enemies. One who aspires for worldly enjoyment should face west and seekers for truth should face north during the worship (60). Devotee should worship facing east in the morning and midday, where as facing north in the evening and night. This is the common procedure for my worship (61). O Śive ! there should not be any deviation in the prescribed procedure unless there is any desired purpose. Devotee desirous of wisdom and liberation should worship Iṣṭaliṅga facing north (62). For the person who is detached from all desires, aspirer of liberation, conquerors of all senses, there is no limitation (63). The devotee who desires for valour should worship facing south-east (आग्नेय), who desires for subjects should face north-west (वायव्य), who intends to destroy enemies should worship facing north-east (ईशान) (64). The devotee performing regular worship (Sandhyā) should face east, indulging in Māran, Ucātan etc. for annihilating enemies should face south-west (नैऋत) direction and the devotee aspiring for various kinds of desires should face direction as prescribed in the scriptures (65).

Unity of Guru and God

A theist devotee of mine who adheres to all these rules and regulations should have firm contemplation on the unity of Guru and God (66).

Remembering Sadguru

In cases of atonement, defilement, all kinds of prescribed injunctions and prohibitions and the deeds worthy to be performed and not to be performed, the instruction of the Guru is the only imperative (67). Whether Guru is near or at distance, in front or not in front, the rules prescribed by Guru are the only laws acceptable since Guru is inherent in everything (68). Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Śiva, Rudra, Īśvara, Śakti, Pitāmah, Sun, Moon, Fire, Air are all surely the manifestations of Guru (69). On rising, going to bed, commencing journey, sitting, from beginning to the end of sleep, devotee should always and everywhere go on remembering divine Guru (70). While commencing a speech, having been injured, having incurred faults, boasting, quarrelling, disciple should always in all such circumstances remember his divine Guru (71). For the destruction of all kinds of sins, enhancement of all pleasures and prosperity, for achieving all desirable results, the devotee should ever remember the divine Guru (72). Attentive remembrance of divine Guru burns the sins of killing thousands of brāhmins and crores of cows (73). After experiencing bad dreams, unnecessary hot discussions, having depression, sudden apprehension, seeing impediments, during intense misery, devotee should ever remember divine Guru (74). Devotee should always recite the name of divine Guru which is auspicious, sacred, virtuous, pure and supremely benevolent for knowing the essence of Veda and Vedāṅga (75). While performing the deeds which may be in conformity with the scriptures or not in conformity also performing such deeds which are ethical or non-ethical, the devotee should always remember the supreme Guru for the condonment of all defilements (76). For the cultivation of knowledge, wisdom and discriminating capacity, for the enjoyment of worldly pleasures and for the attainment of the status of jīvan-mukta (freedom from bondage in life), one should always remember the divine Guru (77).

Devotee should always remember the divine Guru with reverence for immediate cessation of all sins performed by mind, speech and action (78). The sins either small or big, performed either in waking state or dream can never be eradicated without remembering the divine Guru (79). O Umā ! if the wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga possesses true devotion for me, such wise person should ever remember the divine Guru who is only the form of mine (80). Devotee should always remember the divine Guru in the morning as Brahman, the Truth, Consciousness, the supreme Immortality and of the nature of consciousness-bliss (81). Devotee should ever remember the auspicious name of Guru with undisturbed mind in commencing all the deeds (82).

Glory of the Divine Guru

O Śive ! all the deeds performed become fruitless without devotion of Guru just as a vow observed by a corrupt woman (83). O wise lady ! what to say more? Please listen to the essence of all.

For eradication of all deficiencies and completion of a deed, the words of the divine Guru should be considered supreme (84). In all the circumstances and everywhere, whether one is independent or dependent, wretched or miserable, the only means open to the devotee is to remain in the service of divine Guru (85). Devotee is unable to worship in accordance with the aforesaid prescribed rules, should only meditate on the lotus feet of divine Guru for the accomplishment of all spiritual endeavours (86). Words of Guru are the base of all hymns, the feet of Guru are the basis of all worships, the meditation of the image of Guru is the origin of all meditations and liberation is attained only by the Grace of Guru (87). O Goddess ! the devotee who is unable to meditate on me should meditate on Guru, the manifestation of God and one who is unable to recite my name should only remember the name of Guru (88). The benevolent name of Guru is the embodiment of all divine hymns, it is the embodiment of all auspicious scriptures and it is the embodiment of all virtuous wisdom of Vedas (89). O Goddess ! the virtuous devotee who is blessed to have the true vision (darśana) of Guru, directly achieves the supreme perception of mine (90). The devotee who aspires for heaven and liberation or desirous for the enjoyment of the worldly life, should always make efforts to take refuge in Guru (91). All the Vedas, scriptures, Purāṇas, Saṁhitās, Smṛtis and Dharmasāstras are the supreme words of divine Guru (92). The syllable 'gu' stands for the intense darkness and 'ru' for sunrise. So, for the eradication of the darkness of delusion (of the disciple), he is called Guru (93). Seven crores of hymns create delusion in mind, where as two syllabled hymn 'Guru' is the only great hymn that destroys all delusions (94). O Goddess ! the two hymns 'Guru' and 'Śiva' as the bestower of liberation to all and the destroyer of all miseries (95). Wise should ever contemplate on the movable and immovable world, the objects of the senses as the divine Guru, the embodiment of God (96). O Goddess ! the pilgrimage to Guru is a pilgrimage to Kāśī, taking round of Guru is taking round of the pilgrimage Kāśī and having sacred darśana (sacred sight) of Guru is equal to have my sacred perception (97).

Chapter - 15

CLASSIFICATION OF VĪRĀŚAIVA

Goddess enquires —

O Rudra ! you are one, but you manifest yourself into many, again you reduce all manifestations into one. I bow unto you (1). O Lord ! you are the perceiver of all, performer of all deeds, Self of all beings, sustainer of all, bestower of pleasure, omniscient, Lord of the universe and the refuge of all, I again and again bow unto you (2). O Lord ! kindly enlighten me, in detail, regarding the span and glory of Vīrāśaiva religion out of affection for me (3). Nothing remains to be known regarding your principle after this, still my mind is not fully satiated (4). If any mysterious preaching is left off, which may either be sacred or worthy of disclosure, kindly enunciate that for me (5). If you kindly allow me, then I intend to give vent to my inner feelings, since there remain some doubts in my heart which is required to be removed (6).

God replies —

O the graceful ! O the pious ! please enquire without fear. I have nothing that cannot be told to you. Who is superior to you for me? (7). O Śive ! even if you desire to listen to something most confidential, I shall surely explain that out of affection for you. Please listen, contemplate and keep it secret (8).

Goddess enquires —

Special Features of Vīraśaiva Discipline

O Lord ! you have explained to me the mysterious principles of Vīraśaiva and other Ādiśaiva disciplines along with their past background (9). What you have explained in the beginning and in the middle regarding these disciplines is enough to be known for me or there are some relative specialities among them (10). O the great God ! if there is any difference, relative similarity or some specialities among them, please explain to me (11). O God ! please elucidate to me whether the conduct of the followers of Vīraśaiva discipline and that of the other śaiva sects are similar or different. Please also state the special features, if any, of Vīraśaiva discipline (12). O Hara ! in the circumstances arising owing to the unfortunate or intentional destruction of the Linga etc. (casket or base) for the authorities of Vīraśaiva and other disciplines, are the rules and regulations uniformly practised by them or every one of them have their own special rule (13-14)?

Appreciation of the Queries of Goddess

O the Goddess of the universe ! hail to thee ! very appropriate is your query. Please listen carefully to the answer of your very altruistic enquiry (15). O Goddess ! if you had not made this enquiry, the followers of Vīraśaiva religion would have gone astray due to the ignorance of the mystery owing to the non-rational attitude (16). O the benevolent Goddess ! the whole mystery is perfectly known to you. The queries have been raised by you for the redemption of the ardent follower of Viraśaiva (17). O Śive ! on account of the ignorance of the essence and the mystery of the śaiva religion from the stand point of ultimate Truth, the wretched followers of other principles fall into the blind well (18). O Goddess ! such fallen people come out of the well easily with the help of the hook of the Viraśaiva discipline and the ladder of your queries (19).

Ignorant of Viraśaiva Mystery Falls

O Śive ! as the bird trapped in a net is sure to die owing to the ignorance of the exit of the net (20). As the person fallen in a blind well suffers immense miseries, in the same way, the follower, ignorant of the classification of Viraśaiva discipline, unfortunately suffers much as he enters into the great lake of Viraśaiva religion (21). O Śive ! one who does not serve his Guru, the form of mine, nicely, can never be conversant with the mystery of this religion merely by asking others (22). One who possesses incomplete knowledge can neither attain the Truth nor enjoy happiness. One should not shy from the service to Guru as no ignorant can learn without enquiring from Guru (23). One who is eager to serve Guru even at the stake of his life, wealth, ego and prosperity, is sure to achieve all desirables as Guru is my own self (24). Sometimes person of little knowledge, ego-centric and corrupt pretends to be Guru. Such deceitful who poses as a wise can never know the Vīraśaiva religion (25). Such extremely cunning deceiver pretends to be all knowing in front of others but himself does not observe the rules of the conduct and is sure to fall (26). So, desirous of entering into the discipline of Vīraśaiva religion should listen to the essence of the scriptures from the mouth of divine Guru and ponder over it. One should not enter into this discipline without ensuring his intense inclination and capability (27).

Special Features of Vīraśaiva Discipline

O the great Goddess ! please listen to the description of my Vīraśaiva religion, its special characteristic features and rules of conduct which I am narrating to you as it is (28). O Goddess !

starting from the Ādiśaiva upto the Viraśaiva discipline, as mentioned above, there is not much difference among the six aforesaid disciplines (29). Viraśaiva discipline has its own unique features. Please listen attentively, merely by knowing which one attains the state of Sadāśiva (30).

Three Kinds of Viraśaiva Discipline

O Goddess ! three kinds of Viraśaiva discipline has been enunciated by me in accordance with the eligibility of the worshipper for the redemption of my devotees (31). O Goddess ! they are Sāmānya Viraśaiva, Viśeṣa Viraśaiva and Nirābhāra Viraśaiva, in which the later is superior to the former and Nirābhāra being the super most (32). O Śive ! whatever is being elucidated here by me regarding the kinds, special features and the result there to about the Viraśaiva discipline, is the ultimate Truth (33).

Nature of Sāmānya Viraśaiva

O Goddess ! I have already narrated about the Viraśaiva discipline. The rules of conduct and the procedure of worship have also been described earlier by me (34). Truthfulness, compassion for all beings, non-violence, sublimation of the sensuous propensities, repression of the evil tendencies, generosity, worshipping God with undivided devotion in a lonely place, remembering, praising, meditating, practising contemplation of Śiva-consciousness, possessing intense love for my devotees, contemplating union with Śiva, serving Guru with devotion, worshipping thrice by prescribed procedure as accepted by one, accepting food without giving pain to others are the characteristics as described earlier and the devotee who observes the aforesaid rules of conduct are known as Sāmāya Vīraśaiva (35-38). Sāmāya Vīraśaiva should beg for alms only from one house; if any devotee prays for accepting the food, he should mercifully receive the same (39). Devotee should meditate blissfully on Me or Guru in a village or forest, wherever he feels pleasant (40). Unfortunately in case of destruction of Liṅga etc., the devotee should wear the same again fulfilling the due procedures, so that there should not be any lapse and the vow should be continued

Nature of Viśeṣa Vīraśaiva

Now, I enunciate the nature of Viśeṣa Vīraśaiva for the attainment of the highest state (42). Viśeṣa Vīraśaiva devotee should always reside outside the village and enter the village only for accepting alms but should never sleep there (43). He should never accept the company of women nor should he have the contact with the person having relation with the women, nor should he indulge in listening to the gossip of the villagers, nor should he live in company with the ordinary run of people (44). While entering into a house for alms he should not raise his voice but make his presence felt by blowing conch shell or ringing the bell observing the silence (45). If alms is not available after entering into a house, he should never re-enter again in the same house twice after coming out once (46). Observing the vow of silence he should keep full control over his propensities. He should not indulge himself in useless activities and save himself from the troubles caused by the provocation of others (47). O Śive ! this Viśeṣa Vīraśaiva devotee should ever remain engrossed in worshipping, meditating on and remembering Śiva and should abandon all kinds of desires, sensuous pleasures and greediness. He should observe the vow of Vīraśaiva, truthfulness and maintain compassion for all beings (48). O Śive ! in case of unfortunate destruction of Liṅga etc., he should again wear the same observing the prescribed procedures. In case of inability to observe these prescribed rites and rituals and the tenets of religion, the Viśeṣa Vīraśaiva devotee, after destruction of Iṣṭaliṅga, should assume his own body as the Iṣṭaliṅga, the form of Śiva, which has acquired the true nature of Vīra due to the constant observance of the vows of Vīraśaiva (49-50). O Ambike ! this wearer of Liṅga (Viśeṣa Vīraśaiva) should beg for alms every day and should not save for other days. He should observe the vow of silence, remain firm in meditating Śiva, live alone in lonely place (51). This saint who has established himself firmly in the discipline of Viśeṣa Vīraśaiva religion and has control over his self, should enter into the next higher stage of mine only after attaining the eligibility for the same (52). O Goddess ! in case of anybody doing otherwise, he

Nature of Nirābhārī Viraśaiva

Now, the person who has the eligibility and desire to enter into my supreme religion, then only he should join this order of Mahāśaiva, the apex of all spiritual disciplines (54). He should always reside in a forest and should not come in contact with the villagers. He should not live in the city, village or house of the householder (55). O the great Goddess ! if a devotee offers alms on his own accord, he (Nirābhārīśaiva) should neither show any inclination, cordiality nor should he think beneficial or harmful (56). He should neither care for adoration nor disrespect, praise nor reproof, rather remain always engrossed in the meditation of Śiva and think simple like children<sup>1</sup> (57). O Goddess ! he should not intentionally look at women, cut joke with them, hear gossip of common men and should not wander unnecessarily (58). He should not try to cross the inundated river by swimming where it is difficult

If he is trying to cross the river on foot, he should not proceed further when the water level is upto his chest. He should neither take food nor collect anything while crossing the river (60). O Śive ! he should sleep on the ground and discard the cot etc. and should like only the loose and faded clothes (60). O Śive ! he may prefer to remain shaven headed, with crest, with matted hair or loosened hair. Devotee with shaven head or with crest may massage his head if he desires (62). Devotee with matted hair will not massage with oil. If he has already matted hair, he should not get himself shaved (63). O Śive ! devotee having crest on his head may get his head massaged as desired. He should not touch the oil kept in a pot made of leather (64). He should not use any beautifying paste on the body, he should neither visit a village nor should enjoy dancing and singing nor should he see pictures and should always reside in a lonely place (65). O Goddess ! the devotee who has entered into the Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva order should live like this, otherwise he is deviated and sure to fall in a well like a blind person (66). The devotee who has entered into this discipline should keep himself away from the malconducts like pretension, non-truth, deception, egoism, anger, inflicting pain to others and indulging in satiating various desires (67). He should neither collect things for himself nor should he be inclined towards enjoyment nor he should have much attachment with his body. He should maintain similar feelings for the persons adoring or inflicting pain to him (68). If the Iṣṭalinga of a devotee who is established on a high stage of Nirābhārī śaiva order, is unfortunately lost, then what should be his duty? Please listen to the procedure (69).

Duties of Nirābhārī on the Loss of Iṣṭalinga

If Iṣṭalinga is found after making all efforts, he should wear it again. I am describing its proper procedure (70). O Ambike ! the devotee should offer food to one thousand Turya Viraśaiva for my pleasure, in case of non-availability of such devotees, delicious food should be offered to one thousand Nirābhārī Viraśaiva. He should devotedly observe fast for three days and offer oblations to the fire as described earlier. Whole performance should be completed after offering 'dakṣiṇā' to Guru (71-73). O Goddess ! if the Iṣṭaliṅga is not found after much effort and if it is ascertained that it will not be available again, the devotee should end his life without any hesitation by using sword, keeping fast unto death, entering into burning fire of cakes made of dry cowdung and by falling down from the top of the hill<sup>2</sup> (73-74). He may end his life by abstaining from food, stopping inhalation and exhalation, drowning himself in the water. He should not remain living even for a moment after loosing his Iṣṭaliṅga (75). He should abandon eating, drinking, seeing, inhaling, talking to wise men. If any foolish person, due to attachment for his body does it, he suffers much miseries. He should rather meditate on the lotus feet of Guru and end his life (76-77). If anybody helps such Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva ending his life, then he attains the highest status, the basis of all pleasures (77-78). If such Vīraśaiva yogī of highest order ends his life like this, then he attains the nature of mine as I am the benefactor of all (79).

Abandoning Vows Ruins

Such yogī is established in the order of the highest Turya Vīraśaiva. If the wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga performs otherwise, he is deteriorated from the spiritual order and is born as a pig. No devotee should see a person who indulges in such misconducts and abandons the vow of observing my principles (79-80). One who forcibly kills such a person, achieves me (81). Such defiled Śivayogīs are not able to comeback from the heinous Raurava hell even upto the final dissolution of the world (81-82).

Observer of Vows Remains Happy

Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva should end his life under such circumstances (82). He achieves my nature and remains happy for ever. So, O Goddess ! Śivayogī should make all efforts and think about the special situation of this order and join it if only capable of adhering to all rules. If not, he should accept any other discipline (83-84). If devotee is ignorant of this mystery and the special situation of this order, he, being a wretched person, reaps the fruit of his conduct and badly suffers due to the attachment even after the end of his life. He goes through the unbearable miseries and the achievement of my feet is unattainable for him (85). Because such ego-centric person who is extremely attached to his body is unable to attain that status. Such deluded person suffers the misery during this period and on the contrary, the other, undeluded devotee, enjoys happiness in the same period (86). Virtuous result obtained from the service of mine is eternal and bestows supreme bliss on him. The wise should always observe all the disciplines (of religion) and abandon the attachment knowing that this body is ever mortal and always remains in the mouth of death (87-88).

Rules to be Observed for Nirābhārī

Knowing that the odour gives pleasure to the olfactory organs only, yogī should not be inclined towards it (88). Such yogī who has full control over his senses should always besmear sacred ash and sleep on the ash (89). O dear ! he should never accept oil, flower, drink or food, cooked or uncooked, as desired, if touched by a non-

Liṅgī, specially cooked food should be discarded (89-90). If the devotee is extrovert he should remain engaged in worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga, if introvert, he should be absorbed in meditating on me (90-91). O the great Goddess ! there are no other differences in Viraśaiva religion, there is no doubt about it (91-92). Rogue who has fallen from the state of renunciation after attaining the highest apex of Viraśaiva spiritual attainments can never again be considered adorable even if he performs hundreds of atonements (92-93). Devotee should enter into the order of Nirābhārī Turyavīra after having full considerations of the teachings of the scriptures, preaching of Guru and his own determination<sup>3</sup> (93-94). Devotee, on accomplishing this spiritual states with devotion, attains complete liberation. If he falls down in the way, then hell is the only alternative for such imbecile (94-95). Devotee who abandons his attachment with the body, does not inflict pain to others, renounces his near and dear one, attains me only through the means of my

SIX-FOLD LINGAS

Goddess enquires —

O the essence of existence-consciousness and bliss, fully manifested and the epitome of wisdom, O my Guru ! I bow unto you (1). O Śaṅkara, the Lord of the universe, the eternal, hail to Thee ! you are the beginningless infinite, the emancipator from miseries, O Śambhu ! I bow unto you (2). O the sinless ! you have elucidated to me the various kinds of the Vīraśaiva religion and also the other categories (3). O the great God ! there remains nothing in this respect for me to ask nor there is any doubt regarding it. Now, I intend to ask a question for the removal of my doubt (4).

Enquiry Regarding Mercury Liṅga

What should be the dimension of the Liṅgas made of mercury etc. and others? Are they of the same type or different? What are their standards of dimensions and nature described in the scriptures (5)? O God ! may the dimension be according to one's choice. Liṅgas made of stone etc. have the same dimension or are they different? Please tell me (6). O the glorious ! the supreme God ! since I am endowed with your affection and also your devoted disciple, therefore I am enquiring. Kindly enlighten me (7).

movable are the six-fold Liṅgas (9). O Pārvatī ! I am gradually describing their characteristics. Please listen, knowing which the Śivayogī attains liberation immediately and achieves the nature of Śiva (10).

Characteristics of Immovable Liṅga

The Liṅga made of stone which is installed in a temple on 'Pānipīṭha' after consecrating it with the procedure of 'aṣṭabandha' is called the immovable Liṅga (11). O Goddess ! this immovable Liṅga is considered excellent for worship, holy perception (darśan), service, rites and rituals and the means like meditation for all beings (12).

Characteristics of Movable Liṅga

Movable Liṅgas are worshipped along with the Sun, Goddess, Gaṇapati and Viṣṇu by other than Vīraśaivas also (13). Liṅga made of crystal or emerald remain in the house. Liṅgas made of stone are of the same dimension as others (14).

Characteristics of Immovable-movable Liṅga

Liṅgas which are worn by my devotees and which may be made of desired dimension is called immovable and movable Liṅga. The characteristics of such Liṅgas are the same as described earlier (15). Now, I shall tell you regarding Anādi, Ādi, Sāmānya and Jñānaśaiva disciplines and specially the three aforesaid categories of Vīraśaivas and their special features. Please listen (16).

Characteristics of Movable-immovable Liṅga

Liṅga named movable-immovable is considered to be excellent for the worship of Sāmānyavīraśaiva. The very body is assumed as Liṅga by them and is worshipped as such (17). The Iṣṭaliṅga worn on the body of the devotee and the body that wears the Iṣṭaliṅga are both of the nature of mine. My devotees that wear the Iṣṭaliṅga do not discriminate between them (18). The nature and the dimension of the devotee represent the Liṅga and so the nature and dimension of the Liṅgas are the same as that of the body (19).

Characteristics of the Movable-movable Liṅga

According to my Vīraśaiva order the Caracaraliṅga is said to have the cosmic nature (20). The world is comprised of both movable and immovable things and my Liṅga is cosmic in nature. The Vīraśaivite who has entered into this religion should contemplate that the whole universe of movables and immovables and everything is imbibed in the Liṅga. So, the devotee should worship me in the Liṅga since I eternally remain there (21-22).

Non-differentiation in World, Liṅga and Body

O the great Goddess ! wise devotee who is established in the Vīraśaiva order does not discriminate in the world, Liṅga and body (23). The whole universe is the body of Liṅga and the Liṅga is the soul of the universe. The universe is the body of Liṅga and this (corporeal) body is the body of the Liṅga according to my order (24). Therefore, the devotee established in Vīraśaiva order, contemplating the unison of the universe, Liṅga and body serves me as the Lord of the universe (25).

O the great Goddess ! for the devotee confirmed in the Turyavīra state I am the Turya, the apex of this spiritual order and the Lord of the universe. I am also the Liṅga. So, the devotee should ever meditate on me as 'I am Śiva' (सोऽहम्) (26). I am the all pervasive Liṅga, the Soul of the universe, omniscient Śiva. I am the inspirer and the guide of the Turyavīra, Nirābhārī śaiva who wears Liṅga on his body (27). O the great Goddess ! Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva should perceive the world as entirely mine, though it is also different in some respect. He should contemplate the universal unity and that the world is my soul (28).

Duties of Nirābhārī

Wherever the mind of the Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva ponders and whatever he perceives anywhere he should always and every where contemplate me<sup>1</sup> (29). Devotee should neither maintain the sense of discrimination among the persons who are of equal, lower and higher status nor should he have the feeling of competition<sup>2</sup>, envy and condemnation towards anybody. This he should always keep in mind (30). The Turyavīra devotee is not required to observe the prescribed rules for vessel, rite of affirmation of purpose and offerings nor is he bound by any rule regarding time and place and other rules prescribed in the scriptures for worship (31). O Śive ! he is not required to collect the flowers, leaves etc. by himself for worship; if any devotee makes arrangement reverently for the same, then he should worship me (32). O the great Goddess ! in the absence of leaves and flowers etc. he should worship the Self by offering his own self meditating on the idea that his own soul and the Soul of the universe and Me (Śiva) are one and the same (33). If Nirābhārī śaiva intends to worship me with vessel etc., then he must scribe the symbol of Liṅga on the vessels, seats and clothes etc. (34). Vessels and other accessories for worship on which the symbol of Liṅga has not been scribed or if they are touched and brought by the non-wearer of Liṅga are prohibited in my worship (35). O Śive ! the Nirābhārī Viraśaiva should also ensure that no non-liṅgī is observing the accessories and the Liṅga during my worship (36).

Characteristics and Dimensions of Liṅga

I am narrating the various characteristics and dimensions of Liṅgas other than those that are made of mercury or Śāligrāma stone, self emanated Liṅga, Vāṇaliṅga, Liṅgas made of jewels or earth etc.

Please listen (38). Liṅga made on the basis of five-fold standard<sup>3</sup> that are unblemished, unbroken and having brilliance should be utilised for my worship (39). The measurement of the palm-seat should be taken by the thread. The upper and the lower portion and the height should be of the same measurement, middle portion should be half of the aforesaid. The measurement of the Liṅga should be half of the size of the height and the measurement of the Somasūtra should be half of the breadth. This is called Pañca-sūtra-Liṅga (40-41) The Liṅga possessing white colour imparts knowledge, red colour encharms, blue colour destroys enemy, yellow colour grants desired results and black colour is said to fulfill all desires. Such is the glory of my Liṅga. There is neither fixed measurement nor characteristics of body, universe and soul assumed as Liṅga (43). If the devotee wears a Liṅga, made without following the prescribed rules (on his own), then such Liṅga becomes the cause of all destruction and miseries (44).

Eligibility for Entering into this Sect

Before entering into my order of Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva, eligible entrant should have full understanding regarding the nature and characteristics of Liṅga, sects and their inter-relations (45). Devoted worshipper who is capable of observing the aforesaid prescribed rules of this sect enters into me in this life only, other wise he falls into the ocean of Raurava hell after being corrupted by his selfishness (46).

Rules to be Observed by Nirābhārī

Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva should not wander on the land unnecessarily. He should never demand anything from anybody and should never abandon the accepted faith even at the stake of his life (47). He should neither hanker after the objects of pleasure nor should he enjoy them. He should neither indulge in thinking about women nor should he insult anybody (48). He should neither discriminate on the basis of caste nor should he be jealous to that, he should neither praise nor condemn anybody on the basis of merits and demerits (49). He should neither accept the food cooked or uncooked by a non-Liṅgī nor should he accept such food after being touched by them. He should accept food only brought by a Liṅgī for the maintenance of the body (50). The Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva should never spend the day only in negligence, letharginess and sleep and should not remain neglectful even for one moment (51). O the gracious ! he should not study the scriptures of Vaiṣṇavas and others. He should ever contemplate on scriptures of my order learning them from Guru (52). He should never aspire for the results to be obtained in this world and the world beyond nor should he indulge in egocentricity. The Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva should never indulge in denouncing others, nor should he have fear and greed (53). I myself always remain in the body of the Turyavīra Nirābhārī śaiva. So, nobody should ignore him nor be envious towards him, since I myself inhere in the whole world (54). Everything has always the non-differentiated existence in me and the devotee who possesses such non-differentiating attitude both within and without, is known as 'Śivavratī' (one who has taken the vow of Śiva) (55). Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva should always reverently perform my worship, contemplation, intense meditation, yoga, deliberation on the scriptures residing in a lonely place (56).

Śaiva devotee established in Turyavīra state should neither reside in a village nor should he be a hypocrite and should never desire for voracious eating (57). Nirābhārī vīraśaiva should neither be provoked by anger, nor possess the feeling of envy nor should he have any discriminatory attitude and oversensitivity. He should never reveal his inner thoughts even at the stake of his life (58). Nirābhārī vīraśaiva has the same type of attachment with this movable and immovable world as he has for Iṣṭaliṅga, his body and my religion (59). Nirābhārī who always remains absorbed in observing Turyavīra vows should always wear Iṣṭaliṅga on his body and observe the vow of silence. He should never be very cruel towards his opponent even if he is rogue (60). Eligible devotee possessing such dispositions should take refuge in and enter into the Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva order. He should never live anywhere except in the vicinity of Nirābhārī śaiva and this discipline brings about the cessation of the duality of both the pleasure and pain (61).

Injunctions Regarding Ending Life on Loss of Liṅga

Thus I have stated the rules and regulations regarding the conduct of Turyavīra śaiva. After the loss of Liṅga ending of life is essential (62). O Śive ! the person who observes this rites and rituals without knowing the mystery of this great religion from Guru or the Guru who does not disclose the known mystery to his pupil, are both considered deviated from the path (63). Right from the followers of Anādivīraśaiva to the follower of Vīravīraśaiva, there is an injunction for wearing the Iṣṭalinga again after its destruction but Turyavīra śaiva should end his life in such cases (64). If the follower of Anādivīraśaiva etc., in such circumstances end their lives, they are sure to fall into hell, on the contrary, if Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva devotee does not end his life, he is also sure to fall in the hell (65). If the Guru preaches the religion without acquiring adequate knowledge himself, it amounts to killing the disciple. Such inadequate knowledge of the mystery of religion received by the ignorant pupil causes the destruction of Guru and his Guru (66). O Śive ! Both Guru and disciple who preach and follow the knowledge as contained in the scriptures and obtained from their tradition reside in my sphere (67).

Turyavīraśaivas do not Pay Obeisance

Śivayogī who is established in Turyavīra state is of my nature and so is not obliged to pay obeisance to anybody, rather he should be paid obeisance by others (68). Turyavīra śivayogī neither should stand nor pay obeisance to any incoming person as he is the most praiseworthy reverent devotee, even more than me (69). The modest Turyavīra Nirābhārīs donot exchange obeisance among themselves, they do not bow even unto their Guru, to me, the Lord of the universe or to any other Liṅgī (70). The imbecile who does not pay regard to the śaiva who is intensely engrossed in Turyavīra vow, falls to the Raurava hell even if he has attained a higher spiritual stage (71).

Fruitfulness of the Service to Nirābhārī

If the worshipper has sufficient devotion towards him, then he should pay obeisance, worship and serve the Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva to the best of his capacity. Such person is sure to attain liberation (72). O dear ! he should adore him by sacred perception, pious touch, affectionate conversation, service and worship. He should remember the Turyavīraśaiva whenever he is in misery (73). The devotee who perceives an unclad Turyavīra with torn begging bowl and 'kanthā', who has arrived of his own will, is free from all his sins (74). The wretched who does not respectfully rise and pay obeisance to the renunciated detached Turyavīra Nirābhārī śaiva, goes down along with his hundred previous generations to the ocean of Raurava hell (75). The enlightened person who intends to attain my closest unison easily, should worship the Nirābhārī Śivayogī who has attained the highest state of Turyavīra to the best of his capacity (76). If the leaves, flowers, fruits, water, food, drinks, clothes etc. are offered with reverence to the Turyavīraśaiva even in a small quantity, still it provides inexhaustible virtuous results (77). O Goddess ! even if Turyavīraśaiva sits on a place for a moment or part of a moment, that place becomes a temple of mine (78). Whatever comes into the span of his vision, undoubtedly becomes pure even if it is polluted because such Turyavīraśaiva is only the form of mine (79).

Nature of Nirābhārī

Nirābhārī Śivayogī who, out of modesty, thinks himself insignificant, does not hinder anybody, resides in a lonely forest, observes vow of silence, accepts alms and remains absorbed in devotion, worship and meditation (80). He lives in a place which may not be indicated, does not inflict pain to anybody rather has respect for others, non-attached, peaceful, keeps himself away from sensuous pleasure, greediness and other such vices (81). He does not enter into a village, has no desire for acquisition and is also compassionate. Such Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva is adept in yogic postures, intense meditation (samādhi) with firm determination and maintains equality between desirable and undesirable (82). Yogī who never loses his patience even in very painful circumstances does not show any audacity even if in possession of immense wealth. Such yogī possessing these characteristics is known as Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva (83). He remains tranquil both in the situation of praise and reproof, shuns the latherziness and ever remains engrossed in praising, remembering, worshipping and meditating on me (84). Such yogī remains indifferent to the objects fortunately received without any effort and keeps himself ever alert in contemplating the whole world inseparable from his own self and Śiva (85).

Result of Adoration of Turyavīra

Devotee who adores the yogī established in the state of Turyavīra, as per his capacity and tries to satisfy him with his devotion, resides in my sphere for ever (86). O Śive !-perceiving a Turyavīraśaiva approaching towards the house of a householder, all the ancestors of the family start dancing and singing with joy and state, "we are blessed that such yogī should arrive, is to be worshipped by us, that yogī should cast his pious vision on the house and the sacred dust of his feet should fall on the ground". O Goddess ! all the ancestors are thus extremely elated (87-89). The good result obtained from the devoted worship of a yogī of Sāmānyavīraśaiva state is the same which is obtained from the simple worship of a yogī of Turyavīra stage (90). Hundred ancestors and progeny of the devotee who adore the Nīrābhārī yogī are redeemed of all maladies and he himself is free from all miseries and is glorified by residing in my sphere (91). O the beautiful ! a Turyavīra śaiva should be worshipped devotedly in accordance with the procedures and should respectfully be offered food, drinks etc. as per capacity (92). Arising on his arrival, receiving respectfully, paying obeisance, conversing sweetly, touching his feet, making him peaceful and comfortable and fanning him to please, serving and acting according to his wishes, bringing things desirable to him, provide the householder all the objects of desire such as animals, sons, happiness longevity, prosperity, auspicious qualities, energy and power and he attains my sphere after enjoying all aforesaid objects of enjoyment (93-95). All such persons who condemn and insult the Turyavīraśaiva cause the burning of the virtues of the thousands of the ancestors and themselves land in the sea of hell (96). If a householder desires happiness and enjoyment of pleasures, he should worship a Turyavīraśaiva who is the apex among all the wearers of Liṅga (97). If the Iṣṭaliṅga is lost (destroyed) out of carelessness, the yogī established in the Turyavīra stage should immediately end his life. This is his liberation (98). If any Sāmānyavīraśaiva or other wearers of Liṅga, out of idiocy, ends his life due to ignorance of rules, then he is sure to fall (99). So, the devotee after pondering over the preachings of Guru and understanding carefully his welfare and otherwise, adhering to the rules and regulations instructed by Guru, ever remains happy (100).

Glory of Turyavīra Vow

O Goddess ! whatever Turyavīraśaiva does, is vow for him. Renunciating everything is a special part of his life (101). O dear ! what to say more ! please listen to the essence of my principles of Vīravrata (102). There is no vow, penance, yoga or samādhi superior to Turyavīra vow. One may easily achieve me by adhering to it and not following other aforesaid method, if deviated he falls into the ocean of miseries (103). O Goddess ! thus I have stated the principles of Vīraśaiva, though mysterious and other śaiva principles for your pleasure, what else do you desire to listen (104)?

Chapter - 17

CLASSIFICATION AND DESCRIPTION OF VĪRĀŚAIVA

Goddess enquires —

O the omniscient, substratum of the universe, enemy of Kāmadeva, annihilator of all sins, eradicator of fear and pain of the devotees, sea of compassion ! O Śaṅkara, kindly protect me (1). O the immanent ! whatever is special to be known which yet remains to be known regarding the Vīrāśaiva religion, please enlighten me for the well-being of the people (2).

God replies —

The observer of sacred vows, the blessed, pious, most fortunate and graceful Goddess ! please listen. I am revealing to you the most secret mystery out of affection for you (3).

Classification of Śaiva Order

There are five-fold categories of śaivas such as Śuddhaśaiva, Miśraśaiva, Mārgaśaiva, Vīraśaiva and the fifth one is Avāntaraśaiva (4). O Goddess ! these differences are due to the differences of the castes. Sometimes differences among the bearers of Liṅgas are due to their castes and related deeds (5).

Śuddhaśaiva

Brāhmin Vīraśaiva maintains crest on his head and wears the sacred thread. He wears Iṣṭaliṅga, Rudrākṣa and besmears his whole body with the sacred ashes, remains engaged in performing rites and rituals related to Brāhmins (6). O Goddess ! he is adept in observing the disposition of śaivas, remains ever engrossed in worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga, always contemplates on Śiva. So, they are very dear to me (7). O the great Goddess ! they are known as Śuddhaśaivas and when they are with wives, they are called householders (7-8).

Miśraśaiva

O the great Goddess ! Miśra śaiva is one who is born in the family of Kṣtriya, Vaiśya and Śudra (8). They are modest, possessed of good conduct, submissive, wearers of Lingas, adept in worshipping Iṣṭalinga and always ready to offer food grains to others (9). O Goddess ! they pay obeisance to other Gods also, perform pilgrimage and other religious rites. They behave in accordance with the customs of these families and remain immersed in devotion to Guru (10). People belonging to the various castes like Śudra etc. and spend lives in accordance with the customs of their castes. That is why they are called the Miśra śaivas as they remain engaged in various types of rites and deeds (11).

Mārgaśaiva

O Pārvatī ! now, I shall briefly describe the nature of Mārga śaiva. Please listen. They are very prosperous along with their sons, friends, wives etc. (12). They remain engaged in two kinds of worships, wear Iṣṭalinga and some times they are kings. Their duty is to protect the people of all varṇas and destroy the enemies in the war (13). They protect their subjects from the rogue birds, animals and wretched persons and have control over them. They should maintain faith only on the Śivayogīs and not on others (14). At the time of contact with the women, adequate protective measures should be adopted and gather the sensitive informations through the dispatch of the intelligence agents (15). O Goddess ! he should always have his weapon with him and smear the sacred ash, wear protective armour, always ride on the elephant or horse etc. and adore the deities and Brāhmins (16). They offer alms to Śiva-devotees and specially to brāhmins. This is the eternal religion of the kings following the preachings of Śivāgamas (17). Many people belonging to the Mārgaśaiva category are the followers of the Viraśaiva order. Viraśaiva are regarded as the supermost among all the categories of śaivas and others (18). O Goddess ! there are many categories among them. Please listen. O Pārvatī ! among them some worship other deities and others do not (19). O the daughter of the mountain ! some, out of them marry and others don't. Sometimes it so happens that women wear Liṅgas where as the man are the devotee of Viṣṇu (20). On the contrary, there are men who wear Liṅgas and women follow the order of Vaiṣṇavas. I ensure redemption to the devotees of Viṣṇu and Śiva, as I have equal affection for both (21).

Avāntaraśaiva

The śaiva devotee whose head is clean shaven, ever recites the original hymns with his mouth, wears Rudrākṣa on his neck, wears saffron clothes and besmear the sacred ash on the body; O Goddess ! such devotees who ever remain engrossed in worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga are known as Avāntaraśaiva (22-23). O Pārvaṭī ! the Liṅgī who accepts the food touched by a non-Liṅgī and even eat the same, such Liṅgīs who accept drinks everywhere and from everybody are regarded as Mahāśaivas (23-24). O Goddess ! they besmear the sacred ash, wear Rudrākṣa and remain engaged in worshipping Liṅga, recite the hymn of six syllables and are called the Aṇuśaiva (24-25). Barber, washerman, prostitute, potter, oil extractor, business community, Śūdra and outcaste all may belong to the category of Avāntaraśaiva (25-26).

Turyavīraśaiva

What to speak more ? Among all the Viraśaivas, non-attached and renunciated Turyavīras are at the apex (26-27). O Goddess ! these devotees are wise, free from all desires, sustain their lives on the alms, always wander and are known as Caragaṇa (Cara Jaṅgama) (27-28). They are renunciated, full of wisdom, modest in conduct, possess virtuous dispositions; such Liṅgīs who avoid contact with others and are non-attached are called Turyavīra (28-29).

Description of Śaiva Principles

O the daughter of the mountain ! now, I am enunciating the principles of śaivism. Please listen. O Śive ! there are five gross elements (earth, fire, water, air and sky ), five subtle elements (sound, touch, sight form and odour) and sensory (eye, ear, nose, touch and tongue), motor organs (feet, hand, vocal organ and two excretory organs), skin, blood, flesh, fat, bones, semen etc. (five dhātus), prāṇa etc. (prāṇa, apāna, vyān, samāna and udān five airs), mind, ego, intellect, guṇas, prakṛti, puruṣa, rāga, avidyā, kalā,

Ten Virtues of Detached Śaiva

Forgiveness, peace, contentment, truthfulness, non-covetousness, control over the senses, knowledge of Śiva, renunciation, smearing of the sacred ash and the cessation of all desires are the ten unique qualities for the renunciated as described in the scriptures (33-34).

Goddess enquires —

O Śiva ! O God ! I intend to listen to the regular and occasional duties as prescribed in śaiva scriptures for the devotees of Śiva who follow the śaiva religion (35).

Regular Duties of Śaivas

After rising from the bed in the morning meditating Śiva alongwith the Goddess Pārvatī, pondering over the works to be done, at the time of rising sun, coming out without hindrance and approaching a lonely place, one should perform necessary nature's call (36-37). After purifying himself according to rules, brushing the teeth — if the proper branch of the tree is not available for the brushing, cleaning the teeth with the leaves of Jāmun, Neem (margo) and Āmra (mango), gargling the mouth twelve times, cleaning the mouth with Apāmār, washing the face upto the ear and hands upto elbow and washing the legs upto the thighs are all included under the 'cleaning of the mouth' (38-40).

Rules for Bathing

This body is quite polluted. For its purification one should take bath in the river, natural pond, lake or in a well located in the monastery. Bath may also be taken with a wet piece of cloth or with sacred ash concentrating on God (40-41). After casting off the clothes worn, fresh clothes should be worn again. If anybody is unable to take bath in the pond, then he should scrub and clean his body from head to feet with the wet piece of cloth. Contemplation on Śiva is itself a great purifier and so it is regarded as the spiritual bath<sup>1</sup> (42-43).

Procedure for Making Sacred Ash

For the preparation of Śivāgni-bhasma (sacred ash prepared in Śivāgni)<sup>2</sup> the cowdung of pure odour specially of Kapilā cow should be collected before it falls on the ground (44). O Śive ! the cowdung should neither be very wet nor should it be too solid nor have bad odour nor should be stale. It should be collected from the middle, leaving the upper most and the lower portion (45). Round balls prepared from the cowdung should be put into the fire called Śivāgni chanting the original hymn. Over baked and unbaked balls should be cast aside and the white ash should be prepared from the remainder (46). O Goddess ! that white ash should first be filtered with a clean cloth and should be kept in an auspicious pot which is strong, pure and has duly been washed and wiped chanting the original hymn. O the daughter of Menakā ! the pot should be made of metal, wood or earth. This pot may also be made of other materials which is pure and fine and it should be kept in an auspicious, pure and benign place and should be preserved like wealth (47-49). In case of going out of the house, the sacred ash should either be carried by himself or by a faithful servant. It should never be handed over to an unworthy or non pious person (50). The sacred ash should neither be in contact with the lower portion of the body nor should it be crossed over by the legs and the sacred ash should thus be prepared by the adherant of the Śivāgamas (51).

Besmearing the Sacred Ash

The devotee should take the sacred ash for besmearing reciting the original hymn and 'Agnirīti bhasma'<sup>3</sup> along with the six Ātharvan hymns and should besmear gradually from the head to feet. Then the procedure of 'Bhasma-uddhūlan'<sup>4</sup> should be completed as stated before (53). O the Goddess ! besmearing the ash on the whole body should be performed reciting either the Praṇava or the original hymn. Then 'Tripuṇḍra'<sup>5</sup> (three horizontal lines drawn on the forehead by the three fingers) should be drawn reciting the original hymn (54). After attaining Śiva-consciousness Śivayoga should be practised. Considering selflessly that it is his duty, the Vīraśaiva should ever surrender himself to Śiva. There is no one similar to him (55-56).

Glory of the Sacred Ash

The devotee covered with the sacred ash is Śiva himself even if he is a great sinner. He immediately becomes free from all the sins and is liberated from the ocean of the world (56-57). The supreme energy born out of Rudrāgni is known as the sacred ash. So, the devotee, smeared with the sacred ash, always remains powerful (57-58). The devotee whose whole body is glorified by smearing the sacred ash, 'Tripuṇḍrak' drawn with ash illumines his forehead, one who always sleeps on the sacred ash is considered to have full fidelity in sacred ash (58-59). Ghost, evil spirits, demons, diseases vanish all around from the proximity of the devotee who has smeared the sacred ash (59-60). As it makes a man glorified, it is called 'Bhasit', it extinguishes all the sins, so it is called the 'Bhasma', it imparts prosperity, so it is called the 'Bhūti' and as it provides protection, it is named as 'Rakṣā'<sup>6</sup> (60-61). What to say more on the subject ? It is because of the eminence of sacred ash that the devotee who besmeers the sacred ash on his whole body, undoubtedly becomes Me (Śiva). This sacred ash is the main weapon of the God and is only my own form (61-62).

Wearing of Rudrākṣa Garland

The Vira Māheśvara who wears garland of Rudrākṣa in his neck, draws 'Tripuṇḍraka' of the sacred ash on his forehead, chants the original hymn with his mouth and wears Iṣṭaliṅga in his neck is none but Śiva himself (63). O the great Goddess ! the yogī who has matted hair, either shaven or having crest or with the scattered hairs, naked, with the sacred ash on his forehead, wearing Iṣṭaliṅga in the neck, ornamented with the garland of Rudrākṣa, ever recitor of the Śiva-pañcākṣarī hymn, is none but Me, myself (64-65). Yogī who has control over his senses, clad in the saffron robe, devoid of shame, naked, wearer of the tree-skin, carrier of the sacred stick, vessel and the wearer of brief cloth, wanders happily wherever he likes (65-66). In a pleasant monastery or a canopy or a forest, sitted in a delightful posture, covered with a neat and pure cloth, having installed Iṣṭaliṅga on his palm, duly consecrated with the 'Pāṇi hymn' and anointing with pure water, yogī should recite Pañcākṣara hymn worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga on palm<sup>7</sup> (67-68). The palm should be assumed as the lotus and Iṣṭaliṅga should be installed in the middle of it and worshipped. Goddess should be contemplated in the middle of the Liṅga and should be worshipped properly by yogī and adored with the flowers, rice and the sixteen ingredients. After worshipping by the aforesaid procedure with milk, water etc. offering should be submitted devotedly to enable a Vīraśaiva to be a non attached devotee. On completion of the procedures, he should again wear the Iṣṭaliṅga devotedly chanting the 'Tryambaka hymn'<sup>8</sup> (69-71).

Rules of Begging for Renunciated

After completing the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga, the yogī should come out for begging. One who accepts the food as alms is considered to be observing fast and the food received in begging is not vitiated by the sin of accepting donation (72). Yogī obtains the fruit of observing fast if he regularly accepts the food from alms. Every day or on Monday yogī clad in 'Kanthā' and holding the stick in his hand, ringing the bell or big bell or bell attached with the stick, attracts the attention of the house holder devotee anyhow (74). The householder, after knowing the arrival of the renunciated yogī, should respectfully offer the food and water and should pay obeisance considering him as Śiva himself (75). He should dedicate food reverently to the yogī considering him as only the form of Śiva. Thus the renunciated Viraśaiva should go round in the forenoon (76).

Conduct of Viraśaiva Till His End

O Goddess ! thus the devotee should observe this Viraśaiva vow till the end of his life. With this determination that he has to adhere to the aforesaid vow, he ever surrenders himself to me selflessly, none is equal to him in this world (77-78). Begging in the day, ever remaining absorbed in worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga are the two special injunctions prescribed for the Vira Māheśvara (78-79).

वीरमाहेश्वराणां तु<sup>२९</sup> हीदमेव विशिष्यते ।

 स्वयमभ्यर्चनं चैव तदर्थं चाङ्गचेष्टनम् ॥८४॥

Worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga in the evening, chanting the Śivapañcākṣarī hymn and engaging himself in conversing about the glory of Śiva are the special features of the great Māheśvara (79-80).

Five-fold Sacrifice for Vīramāheśvara

Giving trouble to the body for the purpose of Śiva is known as 'Tapa', not only observing the 'Kṛccha' etc. vows.<sup>9</sup> Worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga is the real duty, not the performance of external rites and sacrifices (80-81). Recitation of the Pañcākṣara hymn, Praṇava hymn and the hymn of Rudrādhyāy is the real recitation and not the other discourses, meditation on the form of Śiva is the real meditation and not the meditation on the self (81-82).

Eight-fold Characteristics of Vīramāheśvara

Yogī who adheres to such conducts is a great Māheśvara. O Goddess ! there are eight-fold characteristics of śaiva devotees of such higher state, namely, maintaining affection for śaiva devotees, encouraging the worshippers of Śiva, worshipping Śiva, making efforts for collecting the accessories of worship, reverently listening to the narration regarding Śiva, distortion of voice, vision and other organs (due to overwhelming devotional feelings), regularly remembering the name of Śiva and abandoning the tendency of deception for ever (83-85).

तत्कथाश्रवणे भक्तिः स्वरनेत्राङ्गविक्रियाः ।
शिवानुस्मरणं नित्यं सर्वदा तदकैतवम् ॥८५॥

एवंलक्षणो म्लेच्छोऽपि मम प्रियः

Infidel Dear to Me if Possessing These Qualities

If the eight-fold signs are visible even in the persons belonging to other religions, such devotees are very dear to me and such yogīs are my own (86). O Goddess ! thus I have narrated the prescribed duties and the conducts of the devotees adept in observing the vows of Śivayogī. What more you want to listen ? (87).

Chapter - 18

LAST RITES PROCEDURE

Śaṅkara whose forehead is adorned with the moon, who is the God of gods, who holds stag in his hand, who is illumined by the spiritual aura, who is the essence of bliss, existence and consciousness, the essence of rationality, immovable, transcendent, pure, abode of wisdom, conqueror of all, O Śiva-Śaṅkara ! I again and again bow unto you (1).

Goddess enquires —

O Candrasekhara ! the soul of the universe, omniscient, self-conscious God ! you have narrated to me all the procedures of the Viraśaiva discipline (2). O God ! I have listened to and understood the mystery of the Viraśaiva religion. Now, I desire to listen to the prescribed procedure of the Niryaṇa yāga i.e. the last rites of the devotees (3). You have already explained the duties to be performed for the wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga in life time, now please tell me as what is to be done at the time of his death (4). O the God of the universe ! in such circumstances what duty is to be performed by a wearer of Liṅga or by his devoted pupil, sons, etc. at the time of his death (5). I have got full faith in you, I desire to listen to your discourses with full reverence, after listening to which all the Liṅgīs may be absorbed in your meditation (6).

God replies —

Niryāṇa Yāga

O Goddess ! please listen carefully ! I am describing to you the details of the Niryāṇa yāga i.e. the last rites which is the means to achieve me for my devotees, the wearer of Liṅga (7).

Directives to be Followed at the Time of Death

O Goddess! one who is afflicted by a painful disease should either by observing the symptoms or by ascertaining it, by consulting the physician, assume the danger to his life (8). Abandoning the worldly view under such circumstances, regarding the body, sons and the property etc. and discarding the expectations of enjoyment, the devotee should meditate on Me, the only God (9). If the strength allows, he should sit in the 'Sukhāsana' posture and should put on the new pure clothes after casting off the old ones (10). O Śive ! the devotee should smear the sacred ash all over the body, wear the garland of Rudrākṣa and should worship the Iṣṭaliṅga devotedly as earlier (11). He should first assume the posture of the 'Swastikāsana', keep his hands on his thighs, concentrate on the tip of the nose and silently be absorbed in meditating Śiva<sup>1</sup> (12). He should firmly concentrate on the Ājñā-cakra (having two petals) and meditate on Me remembering my name in thought and speech (13). If there is no sense of impurity arises at the time, the Iṣṭaliṅga should be kept in the mouth or it may be put in the casket or installed on the palm (14). If the devotee installs the Iṣṭaliṅga on the hand, he should meditate on Śiva having four hands, beautiful body, calm, all pervasive, assuming the postures of 'Vara' and 'Abhaya' with his hands and also holding the Trident in pious illumined lotus hand.

O the daughter of the mountain ! if he is unable for proper meditation, he should only remember and recite my name, 'Śiva' continuously (15-16). If he is even unable to assume the sitting posture, then he should only remember and recite the name 'Śiva' in sleeping posture (17). O Goddess ! what to speak more ! that devotee should devotedly meditate on Me and contemplate with full awareness during the time of expiry (18).

Duties for Son and Pupil at the Time of Departure

The disciple and the son of the Liṅgī should perform the last rites after his departure. O Goddess ! the performer of the last rite should take bath carefully with sufficient water and worship the Iṣṭaliṅga as per the prescribed procedures (18-19). He should besmear the sacred ash throughout the body, wear the garland of Rudrākṣa and gem and should bathe the body of the deceased Liṅgī with sufficient pure water (20). Reciting the Pañcākṣara hymn, the Ṣatarudra hymn<sup>2</sup> or the other verses concerning Rudra, the performer of the last rite along with the other respectable wearers of Liṅga should consecrate the body of the Liṅgī with four, five, ten, eight or with the water of one to one thousand of pots according to the capacity of his intimate associates (21-22). The consecration of the Guru, old man even if he is ignorant or wise, may be performed only with the sacred water of the feet (23-24). The body of the deceased first should properly be wiped, the sacred ash should be sprinkled all over the body and kept in a clean place in sitting posture and is to be adorned with the Rudrākṣa as per his capacity (24-25). Then sweet odour along with the paste of sweet smelling herbs should be smeared on the body with full respect. Again the body should also be adorned with flowers, incenses, garlands, clothes and the silken clothes and sufficient incense powder should be burnt. O dear ! there after the body should properly be worshipped like an Iṣṭalinga (25-26).

Carrier for the Body of Liṅgī

Now, a strong carrier should be prepared for carrying the dead body. O Śive ! this carrier may have either four or three doors and should have four stands and also four pillars alongwith a high pinnacle (27-28); and that carrier should be decorated with the beautiful clothes etc. according to the prosperity of the performer (29). It should also be decorated with the sweet odoured garlands, mirrors, gems, beautiful fans, banners and legs (30). The performer of the last rite should touch the carrier and recite the auspicious Pañcākṣara hymn one thousand times, one hundreded eight times, one hundred times or eleven times and should install the body in the carrier reciting the original hymn adding Praṇava as per his capacity (31).

Procession of Carrier Towards the Place of Samādhi

The body of the deceased should be kept in the posture of 'Svastikāsana' as it is in Samādhi, both the hands should be kept on the thighs and should properly be bound by the strong ropes (32). Four old wearers of Liṅga who have duly been purified by wisdom, devotion and penance should carry the carrier alongwith the dead body reciting the original hymn to the newly dig pit. Other people should also accompany with Āndolikā etc. the signs of prosperity reciting the Pañcākṣara hymn (33-34). Many auspicious musical instruments should be played alongwith the Bherī, Tūrya, Mṛdaṅga according to the prosperity of the performer (35). Many people should accompany for taking the carrier to the desired place singing, praising, dancing and reciting original hymn etc. and also reciting the hymn of Śatarudra making it an occasion of celebration (36). Accompanied by the series of elephants, horses, cart etc. and many Vīraśaiva Liṅgīs, the carrier should be taken to the east or north of the village (37).

Digging of Pit in a Sacred Place

Pit should be dug in an auspicious place at the bank of river, in a forest full of trees, near a hill, in a garden, beneath the bilva-tree, in a monastery, in the proximity of Śiva temple, in an old and worn cowshed, near a road-crossing or in a hermitage of an ascetic, wherever a place is easily available (38-39). Samādhi should be dug in accordance with the length and breadth of the deceased and the surface of the pit should be made plane, sandless, stoneless, thornless and devoid of anything polluted (40).

Dimension of the Pit

The depth of the pit should be of nine or seven steps of the deceased (41). If it is less or more, it shortens the longevity of the performer. Another pit should be constructed inside the wall of the pit in the direction of the east, south or north from the pit. The pit should be square and of five steps length (42-43). In the middle of it, there should be a square pedestal of three steps length. For going down into the pit, three steps should be constructed. First step should be of one foot measurement, second should be of two feet measurement and the third one should be of three feet measurement (44-45). Inside the pit, there should be a triangular pit for keeping the series of lamps. There should be nine divisions in this triangular space and its measurement should be of three feet standard (46).

Keeping the Dead Body into the Samādhi

Now, the dead body should be lowered into the pit thus constructed. The dead body should first be sanctified by the original hymn and then kept inside the pit by Guru of the respectable person of the family reciting the original hymn again (47-48). O the great Goddess ! then the dead body should be worshipped in the pit with the incense and other accessories like an Iṣṭaliṅga (48-49). Some break the coconut on the head of the dead body and some do not do it. I agree to both (49-50).

Procedure for Burial of Wife Along with Husband

If the wife desires to accompany her husband, then she should be buried in the same pit in the sitting position either in front or on the left side of her husband (50). If the person has second wife, she should be buried in the southern direction of her husband. In case of numerous wives, all of them should be buried separately in the same pit (51). The pit thus dug, should have sufficient space for all of them. If he has kept many mistresses for enjoyment and they intend to accompany the person, separate pits for them should be dug, this is the injunction of scriptures (52-53).

Prohibition for Burial of Pregnant Wife

O Goddess ! if the wife is pregnant or has a child, then she should not leave her body along with her husband. If she does it, then she is liable for the sin of abortion (53-54). Lunatic, wretched, corrupt, diseased, scared, whore, woman living in a distant place, woman who has had recently a child, prostitute, separated from husband, menstruated, mother of infant, immatured girl, woman having many children, imbeciles and young belle should not be engraved along with their husbands (54-56). The Iṣṭaliṅga of the woman who is buried along with her husband should be kept in her mouth. In the absence of Iṣṭaliṅga, the betel leaf is to be kept in her mouth and should firmly be established in the pit (56-57).

Filling up the Grave

The dead body should fully be covered with the salt up to the head, then the salt should strongly be pressed with the legs and the remainder should be filled up with the earth. The face of the deceased should carefully be covered either with the sacred ash or with the bilva leaves (57-58). O Goddess ! if the grave is scarcely filled up with the salt and bad odour starts emitting, then the progeny of the deceased will be destroyed (59). If the worms attack on the dead body, the animals like jackel etc., are attracted by the bad odour and dig the body and devour it, then the progeny of the performer of the last rite is destroyed (60). So, the grave should be established by repeatedly applying pressure by the legs. The grave should be filled up by the soft earth alone and not by hard stones etc. (61). If the grave is scarcely filled up and is not in accordance with the procedure laid down, then the performer of the rites will suffer from incurable disease and will be devoid of progeny (62).

Construction of Samādhi

The ground should be levelled and then Samādhi should be constructed on it. The Samādhi should be of the dimension of one 'Pauruṣa'<sup>3</sup>, its half or one fourth (63). The dimension of the Samādhi should be double the size of the pit and should be constructed on the surrounding ground. It may either be square or circular and should be adorned with the three girdles (64). It should be made smooth by smearing and adorned with arch gateway and surrounded with thread.

Then a canopy should be arranged over head to keep it cool and the flag, banner etc. should be tied up above the Samādhi for the portection from the crow etc. (65-66).

Installation of Preta-liṅga Made of Earth

A liṅga made of earth should be installed in the middle of Samādhi. O Goddess ! this liṅga is called 'Preta-liṅga'. It is neither worshipped nor prayed. It is a provisional liṅga. After the fulfilment of the last rites, a new liṅga is installed (66-67). O my dear, the daughter of the mountain ! a liṅga and bull made of stone should be installed on the left side of the Samādhi and should be worshipped regularly (68).

Construction of the Śiva-Temple

O Goddess ! assuming that the Iṣṭaliṅga which was installed on the palm-seat, is now being installed on the samādhi, a temple of Śiva should be constructed (69).

Procedure of Worship

This Iṣṭaliṅga should be installed and worshipped in the same way as it is done for the Liṅga installed on the palm-seat and the same procedure of worship should be followed (70). Incense, lamp and other offerings are also submitted as it is done in the regular worship. The rite of the assumption of divinity should be performed reciting the original hymn and at the sametime 'Pañcānuvāk'<sup>4</sup> hymns should be recited twelve times along with the original hymn again (71-72). Further, if possible the hymns of 'Śatarudrādhyāy' should be chanted while consecrating it with the milk (73). Thereafter the Iṣṭalinga is to be bathed with the pure water as far as possible. O the great Goddess ! one should perform these rites according to his own capacity and not less, otherwise it is considered a lapse (73). This provision has been made keeping in view the common man. Prosperous person should make arrangement for the music, dance etc. on this occasion (74). O Goddess ! lamps should be kindled on all the three steps and the gram, coconut, banana, sugarcane should also be kept there (75). Duly washed and pure sesamum seeds are to be mixed up to prepare the five kinds of eatable 'Apups' etc. to the best of his capacity (76).

Worship of the Sacred Dais

After submitting the offerings, the dais should be adored with the Sadyojāta etc. five hymns. Worship should be performed in the upper direction reciting the Īśāna hymn and in east and other directions reciting the Tatpuruṣa and other hymns. Eight protectors of the direction should be worshipped in eight directions and Nandikeśvara should be worshipped in front of the Liṅga (77-78). Goddess, Vināyaka and Vīrabhadra are to be worshipped in the west and its two sides. Huṇḍa, Tuhuṇḍa, Mārtaṇḍa, Pracāṇḍa, Caṇḍam, Mahābala, Bala and Pramatha called the associates of Rudra are to be adored in the middle as prescribed and Nandi, Bhṛṅgi, Riti, Tuṇḍi, Moda, Āmoda and Pramoda also are to be adored reciting the original hymn (79-81).

Submission of Offerings After the Worship

O Śive ! sufficient donations should be offered after the culmination of the worship of Liṅga and the remainder of the offerings like betel leaves, clothes, money etc. should be distributed among the present Liṅgī devotees (82). O Goddess ! no differentiation should be made between the Liṅgī and non-Liṅgī in distributing the offerings. All those who are present there are like God and should be offered according to one's capacity (82-84). The Liṅgī devotee should specially be worshipped here. They should be adored with the gifts, clothes etc. and one hundred Śivayogīs should be fed properly (84-85). He is not vitiated by non-bathing, touch, impurity, non-pious and inauspiciousness, as such Liṅgī is Śiva himself. He should fully satiate with food one or ten persons to the best of his capacity (85-86). He should donate cows, land, gold etc. as per his capacity. He should offer his daughter along with sufficient wealth to the worthy person (87).

Abandoning of the Bull Duly Scribed with the Sign of Liṅga

Then he should abandon the bull, duly scribed with the auspicious sign of Liṅga on it and regularly worship the bull for one month<sup>5</sup> (88).

O the graceful ! the bull may be worshipped either for fifteen days, ten days or for three days and there is no injunction for adhering to the rules of initiation and the vow of celibacy etc. (89). He only should abandon the contact with woman and may continue doing other deeds as before. O Goddess ! during this period messaging with oil is volitional where as accepting betel leaves is common for all. He may use the incenses and flowers etc. according to his desire as prevalent in society (90-91).

Duties in Niryaṇa Yāga

As long as the performer of the Niryaṇa yāga is in the process of the rites of the yāga, is obliged to satisfy anybody who demands food. O Goddess ! there should not be any discrimination of caste, even if the visitor is a discarded out caste (Cāṇḍāl) (91-92). Delicious food should be offered to crows, dogs and other invisible beings. Delicious food should also be offered, as per capacity, to the bull and at the end of the ceremony 108 great Liṅgīs should properly be served the food. In any case, at least ten Liṅgīs should be entertained with food after the end of the ceremony to the best of the capacity (93-94). If the performer is still incapable of performing the aforesaid offering, he should satisfy only one with food. The performer should worship the Iṣṭaliṅga installed on the samādhi with the flowers of Droṇa, Dūrvā, Bilvaleaves, Apāmārga, Pāṭal, Karavīr, blue lotus, Lotus etc. as far as possible (95-96). Worship should be performed every year on the day of attaining Śiva-hood by the deceased specially. The dais on which the Liṅga is installed is to be worshipped by the performer with the understanding that this is the Liṅga itself (96-97). O Goddess ! worshipping it every month, season, fortnight or on a particular day of the week or everyday is considered gradually superior (97-98).

Construction of Garden

The performer should first arrange for a land according to his capacity, then construct a boundary either of earth or of the thorns and prepare a garden. He should worship Liṅga with the flowers grown in this garden (98-99). O Śive ! he should grow the Droṇa, Rudrajati, Bilva, Karvīr, Māru and other sweet odoured flowers there (100). He should regularly worship the dais (of the samādhi) with these flowers and collect the flowers also for the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga. If he alone is not able to protect the garden, then he should hire someone and pay him remuneration. He should regularly worship the Samādhi as far as possible, specially on festival days when celebrations like dance, music and other pious activities should be performed for the whole night with devotion (101-102).

Virtuous Results of Niryāṇa Yāga

On the occasion of the procession of the attainment-day of the deceased Liṅgī, the person who follows the process, obtains the eligibility to reside in Kailāśa for the same period that he spends in procession (102-103). One who has the direct sacred vision of the carrier of the deceased Liṅgī, actually have the vision of the apex of the mount Kailāśa, as the Liṅgī is my own form. Those who exhibit lamps, incenses, ring the bell or blow the conch shell with devotion in this procession become the inhabitants of the mount Kailāśa (104-105). Person who goes in front of the procession praising the deceased spirit, attains the oneness with Śiva, even in the body (106). The person who takes round of the Samādhi three times or eleven times, obtains the same results which one obtains from going round the earth (107). The person who eats the offerings of the Samādhi including the sugarcane, fruits etc. becomes Candraśekhara after death (108). O dear ! I am narrating to you a very secret mystery. Please do not disclose it to anybody, not even to Nandī, Skanda and Gaṇeśa etc. (109).

Special Procedures in Kārtika

On the onset of the month of Kārtika, devotee observing the vow of taking the meal only at night should worship regularly the Samādhi with the flower of Droṇa, leaves of Bilva, seeds of sesamum and rice etc. (110). If he worships reciting the thousand names of Śiva or the original hymn and also recites the Śaiva-pañcākṣara hymn for twelve thousand times, then he surely becomes God having five, four or one face (111). For him, even Kailāśa is nothing more than a blade of grass. What to speak of the pleasures of heaven etc. progeny like sons, grand sons etc. and other material objects. Whatever he wishes to obtain may obtain as this samādhi of the deceased Liṅgī is extremely auspicious (112-113).

Conclusion of Niryaṇa Yāga

The performer of the Niryaṇa yāga should make efforts to construct the wells and ponds etc. for preserving water and entertain the needy pilgrims by offering water and food according to his capability (114). He should regularly kindle the lamp containing oil or ghee in the evening in the proximity of the Liṅga (115). Big bell, bell, conch, Sṛṅga (instrument made of horn) and big drum are considered adequate in the worship of Śiva (116). The mirror should be shown three times a day with intense devotion, the place should be cleaned by a broom and smeared with water to ensure cleanliness. Then the devotee should reverently listen to the sacred five-fold recitation (Kavaca, Kīlaka, Hṛdaya, Stotra and Sahaśra nāma) (117). O Goddess ! thus the devotee who reverently worships the Liṅga and the samādhi of the Niryaṇa yogī attains the closest unison with me and the liberation after the end of his life (118). O Goddess ! I have thus narrated the characteristics of and all the procedures of Niryaṇayāga. Now what else do you intend to listen (119) ?

rites to be performed on the attainment day

O Śiva ! hail to thee ! O Śivaśambhu ! the bearer of tranquil half moon on the forehead, bearer of the stag, spear in two hands and assuming the postures of 'Vara' and 'Abhaya' by the rest two hands, the soul of the universe, embodiment of bliss and of the nature of existence-consciousness and bliss, O the Lord of Pārvatī ! please reside in my heart for ever and save me (1).

Goddess enquires —

O Śaṅkara ! O the Lord of the universe ! inherent, indivisible and is said to have nine, eleven, five, one and three types of nature, I bow unto thee<sup>1</sup> (2). O the great God ! you have preached me, in detail, regarding the nature and characteristics of the Yogī Liṅgīs starting right from their initiation etc. to the rituals of the last rites (3). O the unpolluted and ever free ! you have also stated the other categories of śaiva disciplines and the persons who have the eligibility for the same and also their methods and the conduct to be observed (4). You have narrated in detail, alongwith the mystery of the rites, rituals and the duties regarding the Niryānayāga to be performed by the devotees, disciples and sons of the deceased (5). Kindly enlighten me if there is any special duties for the householder, king, yogīs, devotees, the ascetic person with wife and without wife, poor and wealthy. O Lord ! kindly also enlighten me regarding the duties to be performed yearly on the auspicious day (6-7). Further, you are requested to kindly state the result of the performance of duties concerning the last rites of the deceased Liṅgī and his samādhi (8). Whether the rites and rituals performed on the samādhi is fruitful or useless ? O the great God ! please narrate it to me in detail (9).

God replies —

O the Goddess of all ! hail to thee. You have put a relevant question. By knowing it one secures the excellence in all the scriptures (10). O the great Goddess ! please listen to the argument presented to you, by knowing it one may easily and undoubtedly become adept in my great Vīraśaiva religion (11).

Guru and Disciple Tradition

Whom do you consider Guru ? Guru is he who fastens the Iṣṭalinga in the neck of the disciple at the time of the initiation and preaches the Pañcākṣarī hymn (12). Disciple is he who is preached. Disciple has to adhere to the injunctions of Guru. This way the tradition goes on and the principle of Guru prevails (12-13). In all the disciplines of śaiva religion, it is advocated that all the bearers of the Iṣṭalinga are of the nature of Śiva. Thus the Guru is undoubtedly the all pervasive Lord of the universe (14). O Pārvatī ! the sustainer of the universe, is there anyone who does not worship the Liṅga ? Therefore I am the only Guru of all (15). Here there should be no distrust. I am out of affection for you, divulging the essence of the supreme Principle. Please listen carefully (16). O dear ! I am depicting to you the glory of the samādhi, its location and the effect of my principle. I am also elucidating to you the essence of the ultimate Reality. Please listen to it attentively (17). One should try to adhere to, in complete or incomplete way, this principle of this great religion in accordance with his capability and interest. I am also stating the achievements obtained by the deceased Liṅgīs in adhering to their duties (18).

Attainment of Status

If the bearer of the Liṅga is the householder, he attains the state of 'Sālokya' (attainment of the same sphere), if devotee, attains Sāmipya (attainment of proximity), if renunciated, attains 'Sārupya' (attainment of form), the Dhyāna Liṅgī attains Sāyujya (closest unison) and the Jñānayogī attains liberation. O the Goddess of the universe ! my devotees attain the spiritual positions in accordance with their relative capabilities (19-20). The yogī established in wisdom becomes God himself. The devotee who adheres to the rites and rituals of the religion secures the position according to their devotion and eligibility (21). The disciple should adhere to the tenets of religion on the samādhi of Guru. Thus the disciple is free from the obligation of Guru and both of them attain the auspicious status (22).

Construction of Canopy Over Samādhi

Now, I shall describe the duties and their results of the householder's son. If the performer of the last rite is a theist, he should prepare a canopy of stone, wood or grass as per his capacity in the place where the samādhi is located. If the sanctification of the land is required, the procedure is being narrated (23-24). If the deceased person is married and his wife has followed him in the samādhi and pilgrimage, their bones are desired to be offered in Maṇikarṇikā, should be taken out and the place of samādhi should be purified with the water (25-26). He should make the same arrangement for the women of his family and for other women as desired by them. The whole body of the renunciated devotee should not be taken out (27). The samādhi of the yogī established in wisdom, should never be deformed; as his whole body is an embodiment of Liṅga (28). O Śive ! if anybody, out of ignorance, uproots and destroys the pit and samādhi of the jñāna-yogī, then he suffers from the sin of uprooting and destroying the Liṅga and goes down to Raurava hell after death (29).

Fulfilment of the Desirables

After santifying, the ground should be levelled. A pavilion should be constructed out of stone, wood, grass etc. (30). The pavilion should contain a marked central place and should duly be decorated with an apex containing auspicious golden pots alongwith the beautiful fencing wall and frontal gate (prākāra and Gopura) as per capacity (31). Around the pavilion, there should be a pleasing garden with trees, well, pond, place for drinking water and sanctuary of flowers (32). There should also be cow-shed, dispensary, night

In the vicinity, there should be a free boarding and lodging place, market and opportunity for occupation for the people living in that village and its surrounding. Even a little act of kindness like this surely provides enormous good results (34). Houses should duly be constructed on the levelled ground and various arrangements should be made for the cart festival and 'Varṣāsana' etc. (35). Service men should be paid remuneration and adequate arrangement should be made for all types of pilgrimage and ceremonies and servers should also be provided with decorative umbrella, food, lamps etc. musical instruments and bells (36). Proper arrangements should be made for satiating the hunger of all the spirits, animals and arrangements should be made for providing delicious food everyday to them (37). All around the place proper lamp pillars, flag poles should be constructed and the sun and other planets, deities of the directions including the family deities should respectfully be installed and in the end, the worship of Śiva should be performed (38). of Pipal, Bilva, Āmalak, Tulasi, Droṇa, Śami, Apāmārga, Dūrvā, Karavīr and other various types of flowers should be grown around the place (39). O the great Goddess ! arrangement should be made for the revered worship of Liṅga with the incense powder, lamps, offerings and other services etc. (40). O Goddess ! for the continuity of worship, festival etc., donation should be made for the constuction of market, village, place for lodging and boarding. Such person becomes eligible for infinite benefits (41). There are many beggars, orphans, poors and donation seekers in this world. He should try to satisfy all such beings and fulfil their desires (42).

No Discrimination of Castes

O Goddess ! there is no discrimination of castes in and around the samādhi campus nor there is any discrimination in between Liṅgī and non-liṅgī because everything is of my nature (43). All the seekers for charity should be satiated with the food, clothes and water etc. He should satisfy the poor, weak and humble cravers and specially Liṅgīs (44). He should also make arrangement for the food and other necessities for the whole year, upkeep of health, their habitat and the cows that ever provide milk for the wearers of the Iṣṭalinga (45). Wise, well versed in Vīraśaiva religion should deliver discourses on the śaiva scriptures inwhich my principles are discussed. Other people, also should be made conversant with the śaiva scriptures for the enhancement of devotion in me (46). O the great Goddess ! even if one out of the above is duly adhered to by a person, then he becomes entitled to inexhaustible good results and his ancestors are elevated to higher and higher spiritual stages. The preaching of the religious procedures as above have been narrated keeping in view the economic state of the performer (47).

Religious Disciplines for Non-privileged

If the financially non-privileged person has sufficient devotion he should observe the religious disciplines with physical endeavour (48). One who irrigates and sustains the trees, creepers, flower gardens cultivated by others with devotion, obtains the similar good results like the cultivator (49). O Goddess ! one who repairs and renovates the dilapidated area of samādhi, undoubtedly obtains twice good results than the person who constructed it (50).

Worship of Husband's Samādhi by Widow

If unfortunately a woman with a son loses her husband, she should worship the samādhi of her husband like Śiva for the attainment of Śivahood (51).

Duties on the Day of Union with Liṅga (Śiva)

Every year this 'union-day' is equivalent in importance to millions of solar eclipses and the devotee should celebrate it by donating food, clothes and wealth to the śaiva devotees with devotion (52). O Goddess ! the devotee who aspires for liberation should donate the Liṅgī the Liṅgas, casket, clothes and sacred Śiva-thread (53). O Goddess ! the devotee should donate a strong bull to a physically handicapped wearer of Liṅga (Jaṅgama) with this concept in mind that Śiva Himself will ride on the bull and wander as per His wish (54).

Religious Rites on Auspicious Days

The devotee who observes the prescribed religious rites, the auspicious days<sup>2</sup> like solar eclipse, lunar eclipse, resides with honour in the sphere of Śiva along with his millions of ancestors and progenies (55-56). Devotee should donate money and make arrangement for the livelihood for the preacher of the Purāṇas, specially for the person who recites the epics regarding Śiva (57). Devotee should worship Śiva according to his capacity with bilva leaves etc. every day, Monday or on the full moon day in the month of Kārtik (Oct-Nov) (58). Devotee should have regard for Liṅga as he has regard for himself and also in the same way he should have regard for the person who is my devotee, for the renunciated Liṅgī, wise persons and also for the persons who are adept in śaiva scriptures (59). O Goddess ! devotee should perform all the rites and rituals on the samādhi assuming it as my form according to his capacity without showing miserliness and with firm devotion (60).

Devotion is the Principal Means

O Śive ! devotion, for the devotee, is the only principal means for achieving everything. For the attainment of liberation and Śivahood devotion towards Guru, śaiva principles and śaiva scriptures, is the only means (61). Having compassion for all beings, abandoning envy, considering and treating all beings equal, discarding enmity for all beings and worshipping samādhi (of Nirābhārī) with respect are the characteristics of the śaiva devotees who properly worship me (62-63). Devotee may cause redemption of his ownself and the persons residing near him or those who are under him. Such devotee becomes happy and attains Śivahood by removing all the obstacles of the physical world (64). He should make arrangement for boarding and lodging for the brāhmins, devotees and yogīs and he should also make additional arrangement near the samādhi area for their families by donating village etc. for their sustenance (65). Devotee who endeavours to attain Brahman, performs the virtuous religious rites achieves everything in life and attains me after death (66).

Equal Participants Both in Virtuous and Sinful Deeds

Both in virtuous and sinful deeds the doer, the abettor, the provoker and the approver, all the four are considered equally responsible (67). The fruit of the installation of the Liṅga is also received even by the diseased, poor, incapable and the family members of Śiva-devotees (not only by the devotee who actually installs) (68). As far as the religion and samādhi area are concerned, all beings are subject to compassion for the observance of religious rites on the samādhi, but the wearer of the Iṣṭaliṅga should be given preference to others (69). My devotee may achieve liberation merely by besmearing sacred ash, wearing Rudrākṣa, reciting my name constantly or by worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga. What to say of wearing of Liṅga (70).

Precaution in Śiva-worship

O Goddess ! therefore, the devotee should worship as per his capacity only one wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga, Rudrākṣa and the besmearer of sacred ash for the attainment of Śivahood (71). Other renunciated vedic sages worthy of veneration should also be worshipped. Then the worshipper obtains the result of worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga (72).

Worshipping the Place of Samādhi

Devotee should worship the samādhi regularly three times a day or in the evening as per one's capacity in the month of Māgh (Jan-Feb.) specially on Śivarātri day (73). Such devotees who worship the Mahāliṅga on Śivarātri day installed in the middle of the samādhi area with the bilva leaves etc. attain liberation and me (74). O Śive ! the person who donates even a meagre amount to the devotees of Śiva specially to Liṅgīs as per his capability achieves inexhaustible good results (75). Devotees should make arrangement for shade for cooling the samādhi place in the auspicious summer month of Vaisākha (April-May) and duly perform the religious rites according to their capacity (76).

Glory of Donation in Samādhi Area

The person who provides drinks, wooden sandals, umbrellas, fans, shoes, cold water, food mixed with curd, incense, flowers etc. to the best of his capacity to the devotees of Śiva-liṅgīs, Jñāna-yogīs and ascetics considering them the form of Śiva, becomes entitled for 'Śiva-mukti' (attaining Śivahood) (77-78). People use the unproductive cows for tilling the land. One who relieves that cow from such burden becomes Śiva himself (79). O Śive ! people use the bulls duly marked with the symbol of Liṅga for carrying weight and tilling the land. The religious person who after seeing them liberates them from this burden according to his capacity resides in the sphere of Śiva and achieves liberation along with his millions of ancestors after demise (80-81). O dear ! the religious person who eradicates the sufferings of the Liṅgīs who are afflicted by credit, poverty and diseases according to his capacity, is worthy of being worshipped like me (82). One who takes round of and bows down to the place of samādhi and Liṅga atleast once, secures the result equal to the donation of the whole world (83). As the worshipper of the parents achieves the sphere of mine along with them, so also the disciple who adores Guru and serves people with regard is sure to attain 'Śiva-kaivalya' (84). The person who performs the last-rite of an orphan wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga who is my form only, becomes Śiva himself after conquering the sphere of Śiva (85).

Installation of Images on Samādhi

O Goddess ! one who installs the images of six deities concerning six religious disciplines (Śiva, Śakti, Gaṇeśa, Skanda, Viṣṇu and Sūrya) around the place of Samādhi and performs the religious rituals achieves everything (86). The person who specially adores the brāhmins, adept in Vedas, devotee of Śiva and the Liṅgīs who have besmeared sacred ashes and worn Rudrākṣa achieves everything as described in scriptures (87). Apart from them, the person who adores other ascetics and the wearers of Liṅgas also surely attains me and becomes all pervasive (88). The person who carries the body of the deceased Liṅgī in a carriage and also one who subscribes atleast a little amount for this purpose, becomes Śiva Himself (89). The person who worships the Liṅga installed on the Samādhi considering it as Guru or Iṣṭaliṅga specially on the auspicious occasion of Guru-pūjā, becomes Liṅga itself (90). O Goddess ! the devotee who devotedly worships the samādhi every year on the particular day of his (deceased) union with Liṅga, becomes Śiva himself (91). O Umā ! what to speak more. Please listen to the essence of my principle that is the essence of all principles that I am narrating to you. By that all your queries will be answered (92).

Glory of Worshipping Samādhi

The person assumes the form of mine by worshipping the samādhi which is like me with full devotion to the best of his capacity and accepting the deceased as me (93). One who is incapable of worshipping samādhi himself should inspire the rich Liṅgī to perform the same as all become the form of Śiva (94).

Creator of Obstacles Falls

The person who intentionally creates obstacles in the worship of samādhi becomes outcaste of the lowest category in life and enters into the dead darkness of hell after death (95). Such person is born and remains in the species of dog for hundred lives, spends hundred lives as worms in the excreta, then becomes boar in the village and in the end suffers as a poor person (96).

Service of Samādhi by Disable

Brooming and smearing are the only service to be rendered by the inables, children, widows and old ladies, for achieving the higher state (97). If a devotee wishes to attain the sphere of Śiva, he should sprinkle sufficient water around the samādhi place so as to make it cool during summer (98).

Duties for Widows

The widow who smears the samādhi of her husband with cowdung never becomes widow in millions of future births (99). In the end she takes birth as a Śiva devotee man and leads a prosperous and healthy life devoid of poverty and diseases and enjoys everything auspicious (100). If a poor person regularly and devotedly worships the samādhi for one year, then he progressively achieves the esteemed prosperity till the existence of sun and moon (101). O the great Goddess ! there is no religion (duty) higher than the service of the husband for a wife. O dear ! after the expiry of the husband, their only religion is to worship Śiva regularly (102). The woman who performs the religious vows and rites neglecting proper service of her husband, falls down to the hell, this is my injunction (103). The husband who is initiated in the religion of Vīraśaiva is like Śiva himself for the wife. In case of husband's demise, devoted wife ends her life along with her husband (104). If she is a mother of the son, she should not end her life, nor should she be 'Sati'. Such woman should engage herself in worshipping Liṅga and remain engrossed in contemplating Śiva (105). She always should donate food to the renunciated wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga, sleep on the ground, have control on her sense organs and take food once in the night (106). She should take bath with the sacred ash three times a day and wear the ochre coloured clothes. Further she should possess forgiveness, compassion, observe the vow of silence and should not indulge in conversation with man (107). She should duly keep fast on Monday and worship

Śiva. She should recite the Śiva-pañcākṣarī hymn and listen to the epics of Śiva happily (108). She should have affection for the śaiva devotees, smear the sacred ash, wear Rudrākṣa, visit Śiva pilgrimages and should remain engrossed in the devotion of Śiva (109). She should not remarry, if she does, then she falls to the hell. Thus I have narrated briefly my eternal religion (110). O Goddess ! śaiva devotee should ever meditate on Śiva and recite the six syllable hymn. This secret religion of mine is the destroyer of all sins. O dear ! now, I shall describe to you the procedure of 'Mokṣadīpa' related to the last rite. Please listen (111).

Chapter - 20

KINDS OF INITIATION

O Śiva Śambhu ! ever knowable by Veda, Vedānta, revealer of the essence of Vedānta, pure existence, consciousness and bliss, I humbly bow unto you (1).

Goddess enquires —

I pay obeisance and bow unto the eight faced Śiva on whose shoulder hangs the robe like a container of arrows. O Lord ! I am your disciple. Please remove the doubts remaining in my heart (2). You have narrated to me various kinds of śaiva initiation and also their subdivisions, procedures and characteristics (3). O God ! you have also described the relative results to be obtained from the different kinds of initiations. Thus I have listened to all the solutions given by you of all my queries (4). Is there any similarity or relative differences concerning the procedure of initiation among the six śaiva disciplines starting from Aṇuśaiva to Vīraśaiva ? (5). Please tell me the characteristics provided there are of any differences. If the initiation is similar among all the disciplines, then the devotee should end his life after the loss of Iṣṭaliṅga. O God ! why the follower of only one (Vīraśaiva) is required to end his life ? Why this discrimination ? Kindly state (6-7). Same rule should have indiscriminately been applicable to all. O Lord ! you are under vow to redeem your devotees. I am your devotee, beloved and fully surrendered to you. Kindly have mercy on me (7-8).

God replies —

O Goddess ! you have put a good question for the welfare of the world. You are adept in listening attentively various kinds of initiations (9). O the daughter of the mountain ! you have put an apt question for the revival of the śaiva discipline. If you would have not asked this question, the common man would have been misguided (10). If a devotee enters into the discipline of the wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga after knowing all kinds of differences, attains liberation; otherwise he wanders in darkness (11). There are many a specialities in these disciplines worthy of knowing. Please listen attentively. It should be kept secret as a poor person conceals his wealth (12).

No Initiation for Ineligible

O Śive ! this principle should not be revealed to any unauthorised person, to a selfish crafty person, to a person who has not been examined for six years and found worthy and the donar who donates to satisfy only his ego (13). Guru should have mercy and examine disciple for his knowledge, detachment, wisdom, conduct, tranquility of mind and desirelessness (14). He should not preach every body the kinds and procedures of initiation.

Characteristics of the Eligible Person for Initiation

Only the person who is fully competent, calm and quiet, respectful to Guru, theist, pure hearted, eager to attain liberation, conqueror of senses, modest and the devotee who perceives God in everything should be enlightened (15-16).

One Kalaśa – Initiation for All Six Sects of Vīraśaivas

The procedure of initiation as stated above in which the initiation is performed with one pitcher (Kalaśa) is also applicable to six sects of śaivas including Aṇuśaiva (17). O Pārvaṭī ! three kinds of initiations have been prescribed for all the three sects of Vīraśaiva discipline. Please listen to it one by one (18).

Eligibility for Entering into Vīraśaiva Order

If a person after having been duly initiated in six types of śaiva initiations resulting in the exalted deeds, intends to achieve liberation, should enter into my supreme Vīraśaiva order after knowing its eligibility and characteristics from the mouth of Guru (19-20). The wise attains the equilibrium of mind by acquiring the insight of the scriptures, preachings of Guru and self-determination<sup>1</sup> (21). Devotee of Śiva discards all kinds of wealth, viz, animals etc. remaining non-attached with the body and life, is scared of the bondage of this world and the world beyond, possesses the discriminating knowledge of real and unreal, is endowed with six virtues of sublimation and repression etc., seeker of mokṣa, realises me as the supreme and the Lord of the universe, has compassion for all beings, does not inflict pain to others and considers each and every one like his own self with the speech, mind and deeds (22-24). He should make efforts to abandon all his vices, should not allow accumulation of sins, nor should he desire for the satisfaction of the senses and should not try to acquire happiness by evil means (25). He should be able to tolerate pain caused by the intense cold, air and heat. He should also be above the praise and reproof given by the atheist who considers the physical body as the soul (26). He should never exhibit his nature to anybody else, nor should he propagate the faults of others and condemn or suspect anybody (27). One should not unnecessarily ponder over the recovery of the trouble suffered by his body. One should discard the extreme indulgence in easily procured enjoyment (28). Considering everything as the manifestation of his own self, living in a lonely place, the Śivayogī should constantly contemplate

Śiva internally and externally (29). O Goddess ! O the supreme Goddess ! the Śivayogī should have adequate control over his speech, food, mind and action and should perceive the whole universe as the manifestation of mine (30). He should not live in the company of the person who always hankers for food and sex. The seeker of the self should keep distance from the company of women and their friends (31). The alms received without much effort should be accepted only for the sustenance of life, not for pleasure. He should never desire for any physical pleasure even in dream in the circumstances of severe misery too (32). He should not pile up means even for maintenance of the body. He should firmly depend on whatever he receives by providence (33). One who is endowed with all the pious virtues and the aforesaid characteristics and has acquired firm determination by patiently studying scriptures and listening to Guru, if intends to enter into the vow of the Vīraśaiva order, O Pārvatī ! for him there are some special rules for initiation (34-35). There are three types of Vīraśaivas viz. Sāmānya, Viśeṣa and Turya.

The Initiation of Sāmānya Vīraśaiva with Three Pitchers

Out of the three, the initiation of first two is performed with the three pitchers (36). For this, the Pañcabrahma and Pañcākṣara hymn are truly prescribed. The first pitcher should be installed in the middle and the other two are to be installed in the north and south of the centre (37). They should be consecrated with the hymns from Śatarudrīya, Nidhana<sup>2</sup>, Pañcabrahma, Pañcākṣara and Praṇava (38). In case of destruction of the casket, sacred thread and cloth, new ones should be accepted and in the event of destruction of Liṅga, a new Liṅga should be worn performing all the rites and rituals as prescribed earlier (39).

The Initiation of Turyavīraśaiva with Five Pitchers

If a Liṅgī-śaiva intends to take initiation of Turyavīra order, Guru should perform initiation respectfully to him with five pitchers (40). This initiation is to be performed reciting the hymn Śatarudra, Pañcākṣara, Pañcānuvāk, Praṇava etc. This procedure is to be adopted everywhere (41). Consecration during the worship of Śiva should be performed chanting the eleven anuvāk, Śatarudra hymn and the turban should be worn reciting the Pañcākṣara hymn along with the Praṇava (42). The oblation to fire should again be completed reciting the Pañcākṣara hymn along with the Praṇava. After the completion of the whole initiation ceremony and turban wearing ceremony, the Pañcākṣara hymn along with the Praṇava should be recited hundred and eight times and again Guru should also be worshipped reciting the same aforesaid hymn and then the regular worship should be accomplished (43-44).

Turyavīra Śaivas are Beyond Assertions and Denials

Turyavīra śaiva may perform the regular and occasional deeds (nitya and naimittika karma) without attachment and desire for the result. For him, there is no atonement nor resulting progress (45). Such Turyavīraśaiva is not affected by the pleasure and pain, letharginess and mental perversion. He is neither pained by the destruction of his possessions nor elated on acquiring anything (46). He resides in a lonely place renouncing all the objects of enjoyment and abandoning all desires, is unscared, calm and quiet, observes the vow of silence, having conquered all the senses and remembering and contemplating God, assumes adequate postures for meditation and after accomplishing it, practices Prāṇāyāma yoga related to inhalation and exhalation (47-48). If desired, the Iṣṭaliṅga should be worshipped for the eradication of the attitude of apathy and inaction. The devotee should ponder over the knowledge received from the scriptures and the respectful preaching of Guru (49). He should respectfully praise Guru regularly and worship me, the supreme God three times a day and should consider all beings of higher, lower and middle categories like his own self (50). O Goddess ! he should perceive the whole universe in me and should contemplate it also inherent in me. If there seems to be any difference between me, self and the universe, he should only perceive the non difference (51).

Duties of Turyavīraśaiva

Turyavīraśaiva who perceives equality among all should not reside inside the village, rather should make forest his own and should avoid seeing the face of women (52). He should not present himself before the women, nor should he exhibit his feeling to them, nor should he provoke anybody by his conduct<sup>3</sup> (53). He should be free from pleasure, anger, fear, anxiety etc. and should feel equanimity with all, should maintain purity of temperament. Such a Turyavīrayogī attains me (54).

Turyavīraśaiva Ends Life on the Loss of Liṅga

Turyavīraśaiva who has attained such a spiritual height should end his life immediately after the loss of Liṅga due to carelessness (55). It is obvious that sleeping, eating and other nature's call are the regular features of life that man has to indulge, but the Turyavīraśaiva should remain indifferent to such activities like imbecile, blind and deaf and should remain engrossed in contemplating me regularly (56).

Prohibition of Eight Types of Sexual Activities

There are eight types of sexual activities as stated by wise persons, namely, remembering, praising, love, preludes, seeing, confidential conversation, determination, amorous activity, cessation of action. Contrary to the above, there are eight-fold austerities<sup>4</sup> (57-58). Nirābhārī Vīraśaiva should accept mokṣa as friend contemplating on me. Laxity of senses and the control on them are said to be the bondage and the liberation respectively (59). He should not inflict pain on others, nor should he feel pained by others. He is not required to stand up in reverence, nor should he pay obeisance, nor praise anybody even if he is respectful (60). Yogī who has accepted the Turyavīra vow should neither give food to others nor should he accept the same from anybody. He should take initiation by installing four pitchers around and one in the middle (61). He should worship five pitchers starting from the middle one taking round the rest of the pitchers reciting the syllables from Āviṣṭa, Ṛtvija and Stoka along with the Śātarudrīya and the original Pañcākṣarī hymn (62).

Procedure of Sacrificial Rite

Though the worship is the same as before, but there is some speciality in the procedure of sacrificial rite. The worship of sacrificial pit, its girdle and deity are performed after igniting the Śiva-fire (63). Five Ṛtvijas should be honoured first, then are to be worshipped chanting the Pañcākṣara hymn along with the Praṇava. Guru need not perform the rite of initiation himself, rather get it performed by preaching the procedure in accordance with his insight to five Ṛtvijas. Two pitchers should be installed in the name of Guru and Ācārya and worship them reciting the five hymns named Ātma Vāma<sup>5</sup> (64-65). The middle pitcher should be worshipped taking round from the right. Then Ācārya himself should surrender his pitcher to Guru and should consecrate the Liṅgī disciple with the water of the subsidiary pitcher. Guru should not accept wealth as 'dakṣiṇā' (offering) from the disciple. If the disciple has enough wealth, then also he should be non-attached and remain happy (67). If, out of delusion, the Turyaliṅgī is attached to the objects of enjoyment, then he is considered the most fallen person. He becomes an object of ridicule and a wretched foolish donkey in the form of a human being (68).

Turyavīraśaiva Lives Happily After Initiation

Thus the Turyavīraliṅgī who has been initiated and has taken a vow of Śaivism becomes a great soul and wanders around happily after getting this special initiation (69). He has neither the sense of doership nor is he obliged to do any duty, nor he is desirous of any results. Such Turyavīraśaiva who is the form of my ownself neither indulges in enjoyment nor is attached to it (70). The Turyavīra śaiva should defend himself by the sense of discrimination and renunciation on the path of life which is full of thorns of objects of sense-gratification and temptress belle (71). The Turyavīraśaiva, being endowed with the benign shield of my compassion, understanding and remembering the glory of this order, abandons the others' sects (72). If a devotee enters into this discipline after having the full consideration but is tempted towards the objects of desire, then he plunges into the blind darkness and is able to come out of it with great difficulty (73). All the sources of enjoyment like the Animā and other Siddhis (accomplishment) are only the extension of your own 'Līlā' (sport). All these accomplishments are full of six perversions like sex, anger etc.<sup>6</sup> and one should take refuge in me for the redemption from them (74). All these siddhis are associated with the rajas, a constituent of Prakṛti, in the same way, as the nector is associated with the poison. These are only the means for veiling away the time of the beings deluded with Māyā (75).

Knowing this, the yogī should discard all such siddhis. He should also be unconcerned with the enjoyment of this world and the world beyond. Abandoning all aspirations and the empirical knowledge he should contemplate the whole universe as his own self (76). O the graceful ! if one desires to live in my sphere happily without any impediment, then he should regularly contemplate on me shunning letharginess (77). In all the endeavours that are performed by mind, speech and action in the state of wakefulness, dream and deep sleep, my devotee should not waste a moment in doing anything else except remembering me (78). The yogī whose mind is restrained, who is not tired by rigorous labour, happy, free from all propensities, fully determined, ever blissful should follow this path which is the only way for liberation, there is no other way known to wise persons<sup>7</sup> (79).

Goddess enquires —

of enlightenment, I humbly bow unto you (80). O the Lord of the universe ! you have narrated to me the doctrines and principles regarding the Turyavīra śaivaliṅgī, now I intend to know the characteristics of the doctrines other than that (81).

Enquiry Regarding the Relative Differences of the Doctrines

One can never attain liberation unless he takes refuge in Turyavīraśaiva order gradually crossing all the stages of the Vīraśaiva disciplines commencing from Anādi śaiva stage (82). O Lord ! if the devotee gradually ascends the spiritual stages of your order as stated earlier, what are the relative features of liberation, downfall and worldly bondage for him? (83) O Saṅkara ! as the initiation is common to all, how the relative differences occur among them and in their results ? Kindly state the purpose of the above (84).

God replies —

O Goddess ! you have put an apt question. I am describing to you, please listen. O Pārvaṭī ! relative differences in the results are caused by the capabilities of the individuals (85).

Anādiśaiva Gradually Ascends to the Turyavīraśaiva Stage

Though the aim is the same, the differences occur owing to the multiplicity of the means, but for the wise, gradual ascendance in all stages is not essential (86). O Goddess ! capable person may proceed further superseding various stages. Perseverance of mind, detachment, wisdom, devotion, firmness in worshipping Śiva, reverence, truthfulness, soft spokenness are the qualities possessed by all such devotees. How can there be a difference in initiation only due to the firmness of the mind ? (87-88).

Differences Among the Anādiśaiva Disciplines

For Turyavīraśaiva, the ending of life is considered a special rule on the loss of Liṅga. If the devotee has firm faith in Anādiśaiva, he attains liberation in this life as a result of his own virtuous deeds and due to the possession of reverence, alms giving, compassion and firm devotion. In the same way, different orders like Ādiśaiva etc. are able to accomplish their ends (89-90). Capable yogī may surpass the stages, where as incapable should gradually pass through all the stages as enunciated. If an incompetent Liṅgī dares to ascend surpassing the stages is sure to fall in the abominable dreadful darkness (91). If a devotee intends to attain unison with me, he should always take refuge in Guru and adopt the knowledge and action as means. This is said to be the only way for the spiritual progress<sup>8</sup> (92). In case of loss of the Iṣṭaliṅga and the casket etc., devotee should immediately arrange for a new ones observing the rite of initiation. Thereafter he should worship the Liṅga, recite the hymns, praise the glory of Śiva and serve the lotus feet of Guru (93). Remembering Śiva and pondering over my deeds of piety are considered enough atonement for all kinds of defilements, but for a Turyavīraśaiva immediate ending of life is the only atonement for the loss of Liṅga (94). The devotee who has lost all desires for the objects of the enjoyment, surely attains the unison with me (Śivakaivalya). O the supreme Goddess ! I have explained everything including the kinds of initiation etc. clearly that you have asked for. Now what else do you want to listen? (95).

Here ends the twentieth chapter of the Pārameśvaratantra propounding the Śaiva non-dualism describing the principles of Viraśaiva initiation ॥ 20 ॥

Chapter - 21

NATURE OF JÑĀNA-YOGA

O the five faced God, sustainer of the Pañcabrahma hymns (Anuvāk), performer of the five cosmic functions (creation, sustenance, dissolution, obscuration and compassion) with your five forms, ever witness to the changes of the world of multiplicity, I again and again bow unto you (1).

Goddess enquires —

Discarder of the accomplishment like Aṇimā etc. siddhis, bestower of eight-fold prosperities on your devotees, satisfied by the triads like knower, knowledge and known, Lord of the spiritually accomplished persons, I bow unto you (2). O the most revered in the universe, Lord of the world, supreme among all beings, soul of the universe, original cause of the creation, bearer of Ganges in your matted hair, O Lord, hail to thee (3). O the great God, kindly have mercy for this disciple of yours.

O Lord ! O Śaṅkara ! kindly bestow affection on me so as to make me eligible for your compassion (4). You have elucidated all the doctrines of the great Vīraśaiva religion to me. I have listen to and understood the various disciplines like the Mahāśaiva, Aṇuśaiva, Anādiśaiva etc. (5). You have also described to me the details of the nature of the deeds and the eligible persons concerning them.

Enquiry Regarding the Nature of Knowledge and Yoga

Now, I intend to know the nature of the knowledge and yoga from you (6). O God ! kindly describe, in detail, this universally beneficial subject as there is none in the world except you who knows your nature (7). You are the Absolute, supreme Brahman, beginningless and endless, even a superman like Kṛṣṇa could not know your nature as they are entangled in the clutches of your māyā (8).

God replies —

O Goddess ! I appreciate your feeling that you certainly desire out of motherly affection for the redemption of the devotees who are worthy of my mercy (9). O the gracious ! now, I want to preach to you the supreme doctrine of knowledge and yoga. It should be protected and kept confidential as the women of good family preserve their chastity (20). Brahmā, Viṣṇu, the great seers, Gaṇapati and Kārtikeya also remain ignorant of my nature without knowing the supreme Āgamas preached by me (11). You should teach this secret knowledge only to the person who is a theist, noble, devotee of Guru, tranquil and a person who is kind to all beings (12). One should never teach this sacred knowledge to a person who is atheist, wretched, devoid of devotion, short tempered, unfaithful to scriptures and a person who is self-centred (13).

Enquiry Made by Kṛṣṇa

O Goddess ! on the day of dissolution, Kṛṣṇa who sleeps on the leaves of the fig tree along with Brahmā, came to me and enquired (14). After worshipping me with intense devotion and meditating on me, the supreme Self, as per their capacity and offering prayer, expressed their desire to know the nature of the knowledge and yoga in detail (15).

O Śivā ! I preached them the nature of yoga and jñāna. I am preaching the same to you. Please listen attentively (16).

Nature of Knowledge

To perceive all the twenty eight elements, namely, Prakṛti, Puruṣa, Mahat, Ahaṅkāra, five Tanmātras, eleven sensory-motor organs and mind, five gross elements, three Guṇas (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas) as inherent, is the real knowledge. This knowledge is borne out of the power of discrimination bestowed by me<sup>1</sup> (17). Devotee who acquires the knowledge by studying the scriptures, from the preachings of Guru and by his own adequate firm understanding, arrives at this truth that Śiva alone is the supreme, becomes Śiva Himself (18).

Nature of Śiva

Śiva is beginningless, middleless and endless, luminous like sun, beyond the darkness (of ignorance), is near to all beings, witness of everything and the Lord of all (19). He is the sustainer, controller and the cause of all causes. He exists prior to the beginning, sustenance and the end of all creation (20). Remaining formless, he is adorned with all forms, unknowable, smaller than the smallest and bigger than the biggest. He is nameless but the source of all words (21). He is uncaused, non-dual, unmanifested but the basis of all manifestations, beyond everything, inherent in all beings, luminous, of the nature of Truth and consciousness and all pervasive (22). Paramaśiva is of the nature of luminosity, consciousness and existence, beyond the beginning, middle and end. Śambhu is devoid of six kinds of evil propensities and six types of perversions<sup>2</sup> (23). He is adorned with six kinds of glorious virtues which makes ineffective the accomplishments (siddhis) like Aṇimā etc. He transcends all means of knowledge, immovable, beyond all causes and examples (24). He is self-luminous, unique, locus of everything, non-dual, formless like space, unaffected by pain and diseases (25). He is indicated by the supreme syllable like "tattvamasi" etc. One, eternal, self-consistent, unblemished, unthinkable and devoid of three qualities (guṇas) (26). He is beyond the three states (waking, dreaming and deep sleep), though non-attached but related to all, being the inner self of all beings, he is the enjoyer, enjoyed and the enjoyment (27). God has the form but is not subject of vision, nobody can see him with his eyes. Wise who tries to know by contemplating him in mind, attains immortality (28). He moves though without hands and feet, he perceives everything though himself remains invisible. He hears everything without ears, nothing is equal to him, yet he is similar to everything (29). Though he is enjoyer yet inexhaustible, pure, without alternative, imperishable, non-attached supreme bliss and devoid of pleasure and pain (30). He is ever in bondage and also in the state of liberation. He is unperturbed, immutable, but the origin of everything but himself uncaused, sinless, all pervasive, indivisible (31). O Goddess ! by knowing the nature of mine, the Lord of the universe, as stated above, the devotee certainly achieves the firmness of mind which is termed as knowledge by the learned (32). Being self-luminous, unborn, unknowable, supreme insight, inherent in all experiences, one, non-dual, unknowable by speech and the highest Principle is Me alone. This is the universal inspiration for all beings (33). O Śive ! I reside in the

Śiva is All

I, myself, am Śiva, the God, Rudra, Sadāśiva, Hari, Vidhi (Brahmā), Kāla (annihilator), Jīva (soul), unmanifested Guṇa (sattva, rajas and tamas), cosmic Buddhi (cosmic intelligence, the first evolute), cosmic Ego, Mind, Citta, Space, Air, Fire, Water, Earth, Smell, Sound, Taste, Touch and Form and these are all my manifestations (35-36). I am the three Savana and three Kālas, morning, midday and the evening. I am also the oblation, sacrifice and the sacrificial rites. I am all the deities including Indra etc. (37). O the Graceful ! I am the demon, Yakṣa, evil spirits, human beings, animals, birds, worms, insects and flying insects (38). O Śive ! stars like sun etc, 27 Nakṣatra like Kṛttikā etc, time measurements like Tuṭi etc. Rāśi like Aries etc. are all the manifestations of mine only<sup>3</sup> (39). O Goddess ! moon-light, light, darkness, origination, preservation and dissolution, all spheres, immovables and movables are also me (40). Vedic scriptures, history and Dharma, Adharma, pleasure, pain, good endeavours and their results are all me. Past, present and future are also my forms (42). O Śive ! the world, worldly lives and their mutations are all me only. The devotee who knows that the enjoyer, enjoyed and the inspirer are the manifestations of me only, is liberated (43).

Accomplishment by Jñāna-yoga

O Goddess ! the power of discrimination (between truth and non-truth) bestowed by me should be known as knowledge and the knowledge that leads to me is yoga. Śivā ! one who has accomplished both knowledge and yoga becomes me (44).

Goddess enquires —

O Śiva ! you are the supreme Lord, indomitable, requires nothing for sustenance and eternal. O the Lord of the souls, I bow unto you. Kindly remove my doubts (45).

How the Absolute Assume the Nature of Jīva

You are the infinite, immutable, pure, existence, consciousness, enlightenment, blissful, perfect, self-content, supreme and the Absolute (46). Enjoyer, changeable, fettered, somatic, affected by pleasure and pain, engulfed in cycle of transmigration is the nature of jīva. O God ! how do you assume such forms, kindly tell me (47). O Śaṅkara ! I am unable to understand how the souls that migrate from sphere to sphere become prosperous and sometimes poor are the same as Śiva (48) ?

God replies —

O the gracious ! I am the possessor of infinite, indeterminate nature, remain ever engaged in blissful sport accompanying you, the power of mine (49).

World as the Manifestation of Śiva-Śakti

O Umā ! I am Śiva and you are the Śakti (Power). You are not different from me nor am I different from you. You are represented in the nature of all womenhood and I am represented in the nature of all men. Thus the whole creation is the manifestation of Śiva-Śakti (50). O Pārvatī ! you are a mirror in the form of cosmic Mahat and I am reflected in it as a soul, though I am non-attached, non-enjoyer and ever remain only Supreme Śiva (51). Pain, pleasure, fear, anger, covetousness, attachment, aspirations, birth and death etc. are born out of ego and are not the nature of the soul (52).

Nature of Soul

O Goddess ! soul is immutable, devoid of attributes, pure, self-luminous, unsheathed, pyretic, essence of substance, non-enjoyer and God Himself (53). Pleasure and pain, slenderness and obese are the qualities that are imposed on jīva by ego and thus the jīva acquires the body (54). As one during dream imposes all the characteristics of dream on himself, in the same way, the ignorant soul indentifies itself with the body and assumes its nature as its own (55). The soul, infact, neither takes birth nor dies. It is not a fact that it never existed in past nor it is a fact that it would never be in future i.e. it exists for ever. It is unborn, eternal, permanent and ageless. It is not perished even on the demise of the body<sup>4</sup> (56).

Māyā Deluded Jīva Misconceives Ātman

O Goddess ! as I am unblemished, non-attached and devoid of all desires, so also the jīva, the image of mine, is like me. There is no relation of image and its reflection (between Brahman and jīva), nor is it perceptible anywhere. O the daughter of the mountain ! the jīva deluded by my māyā perceives himself otherwise (57-58). As one starts singing and dancing perceiving others doing the same, so also jīva follows the nature of buddhi without intention (59). All the worldly affairs are imaginary and happen for the enjoyment of Puruṣa. Not a single enjoyer remains after the attainment of the knowledge of self (60). Your divine power manifests itself in various forms in buddhi.

शुद्धो हि स्फटिको देवि जपाकुसुमसन्निधेः<sup>१८</sup> ।

पुरुषेश्वरयोरण्वपि वैलक्षणं नास्ति

 तदन्यकल्पना ज्ञानमज्ञानं प्रकृतेर्गुणः ॥६६॥

Puruṣa seems to be an enjoyer on account of its impact (61). O Goddess ! though the crystal is always pure, assumes the red colour of 'Jabā' flower in its proximity, in the same way, jīva assumes all the qualities of buddhi by its contact and enjoys them formally (62). As one is scared to see the rope and thinking it a snake but the fear disappears after knowing it as rope, so also, jīva becomes liberated after knowing me as the omnipresent Śiva (63). O Goddess ! how can an unveiled endless entity be measured? As the earth becomes limited by the construction of the houses, in the same way, the limitation of the self is assumed due to aberration of buddhi (64). Puruṣa is unable to know his own self on account of the impact of beginningless 'avidyā' (principle of cosmic ignorance). So, only a 'seer'—the knower of Truth can make him realise, as the puruṣa himself is unable to acquire the self-knowledge (65).

Non-difference Between Puruṣa and God

There is no difference between the Puruṣa (self) and Ívara (God). Thinking otherwise is virtually ignorance and ignorance is borne out of Prakṛti's attributes (66).

Play of Undivided Avidyā

Your Avidyā i.e. Māyā need not move from one sphere to another sphere. This simply is the play of your unique power (72). Souls are only my reflections but due to this miracle of the perception of soul enveloped by avidyā, various effects are created wherever this perception arises (73). The water of this great ocean rises in the form of waves at one place, proceeds at another and is submerged at the end (74). In the same way, my own self is reflected in the form of individual souls as my image and again return to their original form (Śivatva) by following the instructions laid down in my scriptures (75).

Goddess enquires —

O Śambhu ! the sun, moon and the fire are only your eyes. O the supreme Lord ! I bow unto you, the Guru, the supreme goal (76).

How Delusion Occurs

Delusion Occurs Due to Image and its Reflection

The individual self as enjoyer suffers from this delusion, not me, as I am the pure consciousness-bliss. Delusion of māyā can affect only the limited beings and not the unlimited Śiva (78). There is no fundamental difference between image and its reflection. Differences appear due to directions which is only apparent and not real i.e. depth, size and other attributes are only imposed and not real (79). The individual self is a form of mine which is of the nature of knowledge and is the witness of all but is perceived as ignorant. O Śive ! the whole universe has been created by my will and I am the universe (80).

Goddess enquires —

O the universal redeemer, bearer of holy stick, Lord of all luminous entities ! I bow unto you. O the Lord of the five syllable hymn, adorned with hair, Guru, I pay obeisance to you (81). O the Lord of the universe ! kindly be pleased unto me and pardon my failings. O the soul of the world ! please remove my doubts by explaining everything to me (82).

How the Pain can Affect the Waveless Unperturbed Sea of Bliss

How the waveless unperturbed ocean of bliss, the pure conscious self is affected by pain and assumes the atomic form out of his own will or due to any other reason (83). O the Lord of the world ! if it is due to the impact of māyā, then how it is consistent with your god-hood. Inertness is never possible in free and desireless God (84).

World-drama Conducted by Your Power Which is Inseparable From Me

O auspicious ! it is a fact that I am endowed with the attributes of desirelessness etc. But with the grace of my inseparable power, I perform various plays in this world (85). O Goddess ! this power is not independent of me, rather remains under my subjugation. When it assumes various forms and acts, then also it remains under my reign and I am never under its dominance (86). When this power of mine performs various kinds of acts and is affected by the dispositions of pleasure and pain, it is only the play of my three powers, namely, name, form and action (87). One who is able to know this mystery, is not ensnared by doubts. As long as he is ignorant of the identity of his individual self with me, remains entrapped owing to the various dispositions caused by the ego. This endless power which is reflected as names, forms and actions may very well be compared with the air (88-89).

This World is My Body

This power inheres in my body and also it is a fact that this world is formed as my body. There is no difference between me and the world (90). To apprehend some other agency apart from me for the creation and sustenance is the natural disposition of the mortals (91). Śiva is ever blissful, so there is no existence of pleasure and pain in this world. The intellect feels pleasure and pain according to the inclination of the individual self (92).

Pleasure and Pain are the Play of Intellect

As the fire is pleasant for the body in winter and cool shade is desirable in the summer, also is the state of pleasure and pain (93). As

Being One You Assume Various Forms of Names, Forms as an Actor

O the Goddess of all ! though you are one but assume endless forms of names, forms and actions like an actor, unique is your glory (95). O Pārvatī ! I am preaching you a highly secret doctrine. O dear ! please listen attentively. You are eligible to know, as you never find fault with any body (96).

Chapter - 22

GLORY OF DEVOTION

God preaches —

Devotion is Higher than Sāṅkhya-yoga

Only by performing Yoga, Sāṅkhya, rites and rituals as prescribed, self-study, penance, visiting pilgrimage, residing in religious monastery and observing the religious injunctions one can never attain me (1). Further, observance of vows, performance of sacrifice, chanting vedic hymns, being born in a particular caste and adhering to the rules of Āśramas (Brahmacarya, Gārhaṣṭha, Vānaprastha and Sanyās) also are not sufficient to enable one to attain Me, the Absolute, without intense devotion (2). O dear ! observing righteous conducts, perseverance, compassion, religious disposition are also not able to protect the wise and learned person (without devotion) (3). Knowledge, meditation, service and other endeavours are also not able to purify one, if devoid of devotion (4). Persons possessing bad conducts or good conducts, pure dispositions or impure dispositions, estimable or wretched are able to go beyond the cycle of the world only by devotion (5).

Unconditional Devotion is Supreme

O Goddess ! one who is immersed in the self-less unconditional devotion is superior to the person who is engaged in rigorous penance, performs rites and rituals and the seekers of the knowledge of Prakṛti and Puruṣa (6). As the river Mandākinī is the purest among the rivers, Indra is superior to all divinities, yourself is supreme among all women and myself is supreme among all men (7) ; O dear ! so my devotee is the supreme among all of my manifestations and I am not scared of any thing except my devotees (8).

Glory of Devotion

My devotion sanctifies even the heinous murderer of many beings, despicable sinner and also the doer of wretched deeds (9). O the unblemished Goddess ! who will not be able to cross the ocean of the world with the help of the boat of unconditional devotion, an intense love for me (10) ? Devotion is like mother, father, wealth, friend, brother, preceptor (Guru), fellow, wellwisher and a source of enjoyment. It is also the bestower of four Puruṣārthas along with liberation (11). The devotee who reverently and devotedly offers me the leaves, flowers, fruits easily available in villages and forests to even unprivileged person is very dear to me (12). Sweet odoured or without odour or whatever is available like Tulasī, flower etc. if surrendered to me, I am fully satisfied because I only see the intention of the devotee (13).

Devotee is Dearest to Me

Devotee is dearer to me than my own self, than yourself and also dearer than Kailāśa, Nandī, Gaṇeśa and Skanda etc. (14). Devotee is dearest to me because he is humble, self controlled, tranquil, perceiver of equality in all beings, beholder of his own self in all, does not expect anything from any one. Such devotee is my own self (15). O my dear ! the supreme devotees remain ever immersed in the calm ocean of bliss and do not possess even an iota of desire (16).

Devotion Bestows Inexhaustible Results

Devotee who offers me a handful of water — scented, cold, pure and duly filtered by fine cloth, receives inexhaustible results (17). O Śive ! devotee should worship me regularly with the five i.e. Karavīr flower, Bilva leaves, Dūrvā, Tulasi leaves and Droṇa flower (18). If the devotee is unable to offer the above flowers, he should recite the prayers, perform worships, chant hymns, should constantly remember me, sing my glory, practice meditation on me and devotedly dance in joy for me to the best of his capacity (19). O the Graceful ! the devotee who is unable to perform anything narrated above, should constantly remember me by his thought, speech and action. Then only he can attain me (20). If a devotee is not able to perform even this, then he should

Devotion is the Supreme Attainment

For the devotee who is able to perform my worship and has control over his senses, the true devotion is the highest attainment as the wealth is for the poor (22). Devotion to me is the panacea for all the miseries of the world, as the rain is for the horrible fire of sin. My devotion fully redeems the sufferers from the pangs of the world (23). Millions of abominable sins voluntarily committed by human beings are burnt by the huge fire of devotion like a straw, there is no doubt about it (24). Devotion is the only prescribed true means for the person who is painfully wandering in the forest of sufferings being engulfed in the intense darkness of delusion (25). Even if my devotee observes devotion inattentively, by giving excuses or in humour, by pretention, also crosses the ocean of miseries (26). Devotee who desires happiness should observe the devotion as the diseased person demands remedy. Traveller carries food for the journey, so devotee should take refuge in devotion unconditionally without being perturbed (27). Devotee should devotely surrender singlemindedly and taking final refuge in me. I am dearest to him in the world as a beautiful woman is to a sensuous man (28). Woman, man or any other being should take refuge only in my devotion because no one is eligible for the supreme righteousness without intense devotion to me (29). Now, what else remains to be said? What has been stated in innumerable scriptures may be cited in one sentence, 'my devotion is the ultimate goal' (30).

Goddess enquires —

O God ! the drama of this world is the product of your intelligence and its sustenance is due to your acumen. I pay my obeisance to you as the epitome of supreme intelligence, prime mover, the Lord of lords and understanding (31). You are the supreme among all divinities, my lord, your luminosity is brighter than the light of the twelve crores of suns and more soothing than the millions of moons. I bow unto you as the abode of all lustre (32). O the supreme lord ! kindly preach me the nature of devotion by knowing which one attains your nature and is finally redeemed (33).

Nature of Devotion

Remaining engrossed in constant remembrance, meditation, prayer, worship and intense love of Śiva with action, thought and speech in all the states of waking, dreaming and deep sleep (34); wearing Iṣṭaliṅga, worshipping devotees and Liṅgas, observance of non-violence for all beings, having compassion for all, perceiving me in everyone (35); considering the objects scribed with the symbol of liṅga as the holy vision of Śiva himself, prostrating humbly before me without any pretention and expectation (36), O gracious ! taking round of everything considering me omnipresent in all and always visualising me while sleeping and paying obeisance to me (37); always reciting the letters of my name, ever remembering my name, accepting all the eatables and drinks as my offering (Prasāda) (38); engaging all the senses in my service and offering all the objects of enjoyment as the offering for me (39); not feeling perturbed even in the state of unbearable suffering and not being concerned with the enormous acquisition of wealth usually received by privileged person (40) ; considering son, wife, wealth etc. highly temporary like the fellow travellers of the journey ; they are impermanently associated, with the body as the dreams are with the sleeps (41) ; O Goddess ! my devotee does not aspire for the results in this world and the world beyond. O dear ! he even is not desirous to accept the liberation offered by me (42). For such devotee of mine, there is no value for extensive and enormous wealth and the spiritual achievements like aṇimā etc., as he considers eightfold spiritual achievements (aṇimā etc.) insignificant like the blade of grass because of the passion of intense devotion for me (43). O the Goddess of the universe ! whatever my devotee perceives, listens to and ponders over with his understanding, always and everywhere should experience me and feel pleasure as if he is in company with a beautiful belle (44). O Śive ! as the poor, after receiving wealth and the sensuous person after satisfaction of the senses, feels happy and satisfied, in the same way, the devotee, in love with God, experiences the same intense blissful state (45). If the devotion is for the fulfilment of any purpose, it is considered as vitiated with attachment to the object. On the other hand, the pure devotion for attaining me and which is devoid of any other desire is called as 'Sāttvikī' temperament (46). The wise desireless devotee of mine riding on the elephant of devotion is not scared of the dog of the miseries of the world (47). O Śive ! as the vision is for the born-blind, wealth for the poor, speech for the dumb, panacea for the diseased, life for the dying, freedom for scared and fettered, so also, the devotion is the supreme means for getting redemption from all kinds of miseries (48-49). My devotee remains happy in all the three stages (Pāramārthika, Vyavahārika and Prātibhāsika), on the contrary, a non devotee experiences great miseries in all the above phases, it is a certainty everywhere (50).

Origin of Devotion

O Lord ! you have taught me that one crosses the ocean of miseries with the help of devotion. Now, kindly let me know its origin, by taking refuge of which, the devotee becomes dear to you (52).

God replies —

The lascivious person indulges himself in various sexual activities after meeting his desired mate but becomes unhappy and miserable at the end due to excessive enjoyment (53).

Service to Guru Essential for Devotion

Devotee becomes desireless owing to the fructification of the good deeds performed in the previous lives. He should devotedly take refuge in Guru for the cessation of miseries (54). Disciple should gradually surrender his life, property, honour and wealth to his Guru and make him satisfied with his service and acquire perfect knowledge from him regarding me (55). O dear ! he should please Guru by his service. He should get rid off all worldly desires and should take refuge in my supreme devotion for the attainment of the perfect knowledge (56). The devotee who is unable to relinquish his desires and at the same time unwilling to retain them, such an indweller of the middle path, should acquire knowledge from the mouth of divine Guru taking refuge in me (57). O Śive ! the devotee by being firmly established in my devotion, by attaining the perfect knowledge, having equanimity in perception and by conceiving himself as Śiva, ultimately becomes Śiva Himself (58). Devotee should serve his Guru devoutly like a low-born slave till he attains a perfect knowledge of me and my devotion (59). Whatever Guru utters is a supreme hymn and the deeds inspired by him are the supreme deeds. So, the śaiva-devotee should accept Guru as God himself, have faith and serve him with thought, speech and action (60).

Origination of Knowledge and Yoga from Devotion

The knowledge and yoga are originated and firmly established by the practice of devotion. Yoga originates from knowledge and one ultimately attains liberation by accomplishing both knowledge and yoga (61). Knowledge can hardly be originated without devotion. Such knowledge is always disastrous and destructive, as nothing is gained after wasting efforts in pounding the straws (62). One who aspires to cross the river without the help of the boat of devotion, rather only by the strength of his own hands, should be considered a moron (63). O Goddess ! please listen attentively. I want to preach you here a special teaching. Action, devotion and knowledge have clearly been described as three rights in the scriptures (64). O Śive ! one who is attached to the world should take the help of the means of actions, for the nonattached desireless person knowledge is supreme and the renunciated but incapable person should take help of my devotion (65). If a person enjoys the results of the deeds performed in the previous births with non-attached attitude, desirelessly, is sure to develop intense devotion for me (66). For such devotee, knowledge is easily attained and the devotion is firmly established. In this way, the darkness of ignorance is dissipated by the dawn of knowledge and thus, he is sure to be liberated (67). For the wise, affirmative and negative injunctions are not applicable. For him, firm determination for knowledge is supreme, by which only he achieves renunciation (68). Devotee should make all efforts to abandon the forbidden deeds and should always indulge in performing such deeds which have duly been approved (by the scriptures). Such persons always remain happy by taking refuge in devotion (69). The worldly persons should perform atonement for not abiding to the affirmative and negative injunctions. The wise and devotee are purified by the knowledge and devotion respectively (70). O dear ! my devotee and the wise persons are not bound by the law of deeds, as they are free from both the attachment and non-attachment and their lives are righteousness itself (71). Divinities, demons, Gandharvas, Yakṣas, Rākṣas, human beings, women, serving class, animals and birds—all get redemption from severe miseries with the help of devotion to me (72). The devotee of Śiva is not afraid of death, aging, disease, fear, pain etc., as he is intoxicated with the nectar of devotion and the resultant bliss is ever increasing (73). O the daughter of the mountain ! the wise person is superior to the ascetics but my devotee is superior to the wise and the performer of rites and rituals. Thus my devotee ever remains happy<sup>1</sup> (74).

Non-devotee Suffers

Some persons are reluctant to abandon the objects of enjoyment because of being fettered with the evil propensities caused by the deeds of their previous lives, as their intellect remains deluded with the mystic power of mine (māyā) (75). Such persons are the possessor of the nature of Rajaguṇa, having harsh determination, lascivious, charged with anger like snake and are unable to realise their own welfare and of others, as their eyes remain enveloped with the smoke of delusion (76). They fail to recognise me as an indweller in their heart because they only rely on their own eyes, satiate their ownselves like the eyes covered with the mist (77). Persons who are malicious, impatient, verbose, exaggerator remain in trouble as greedy bird seeking flesh is entrapped (78). O dear ! persons fettered by the previous deeds have no inclination for my devotion and knowledge, as the dog interested in chewing the bones and skins has no taste for pious butter-milk (79). How can a person without devoutly serving Guru, practising the injunctions of the Āgama scriptures and being ignorant and devoid of devotion, be able to attain the auspicious highest state of mine (80).

Goddess enquires —

O Śambhu ! if good deeds are not the means of liberation and knowledge is meaningless without devotion, then how the various doctrines have arisen in your religion, kindly explain (82).

Is liberation Possible for a Non-devoted Liṅgī?

O God ! if liberation is attained by intense devotion, then what will be the fate of the liṅgī who is devoid of devotion? (83) O the all pervasive, merciful Śaṅkara ! my companion, the ocean of compassion, adorned with the skin of the sweet odoured intoxicated elephant, kindly explain (84).

God replies —

O Goddess ! you have uttered the truth. Please listen to the final truth. Despite of the differences of opinions, wearing of Liṅga is specially common among all (85).

Liṅgī Crosses the Ocean of the World

O the lotus eyed ! performer of the rites and rituals may observe them for their own satisfaction but for the cessation of the bondage of karma, this (wearing Iṣṭaliṅga) is the only means (86). Wearing of Liṅga is like a strong boat by the help of which one goes beyond the ocean of the world. O Goddess ! who is able to know the karma whose nature is mysterious (87).

Hierarchy of Various Doctrines

It is impossible for a mortal being to abandon entirely and immediately all the karmas. They should be discarded gradually one by one. Thus arose the differences in doctrines (88). For the fruition of the deeds without impediments, for the steadiness of the benefits thus derived for the accomplishment of the work without hindrance and for the avoidance of sufferings, one should wear the Iṣṭaliṅga (89). O Śāṅkarī ! various kinds of worships and prayers are meant for the well-being of the people. They are also for the steadiness of the knowledge and devotion and for the attainment of the liberation (90). O Goddess !

Rest are the causes of bondage (91). All beings right from the Brahmā to the insects should be perceived as inherent in me. One should see everything that is counted in number as indivisible and as an immutable substance in me (92).

Most Secret Knowledge and its Aspects

This knowledge is supreme and secret, rest is ignorance. Whatever we learn from the mouth of divine Guru or scriptures are the aspects of this knowledge only (93). Living in a lonely place, contentment, satisfaction, service of Śrī Guru, abandoning all desires, observing virtuous conduct and vow of silence, study, penance, modesty, non-violence, non-covetousness, truthfulness, compassion, perceiving equality with all beings, perseverance, carefulness, celibacy, being lovable, non-attached to impermanent things, shyness, abandoning ego-centricity, not accepting various castes and creeds, sacrificing enjoyment, honouring others' opinions, remaining satisfied with whatever re-

Perfect Concentration on Śiva is Supreme Yoga

O the Goddess of the universe ! now, please listen to my views regarding the ultimate aim. Devotee should make all efforts to purify his mind and keep it fully concentrated on me (104). O Śive ! this complete concentration and control of mind is called the Supreme yoga. As the farmer secures desired result in agriculture keeping control on his bull, in the same way, the devotee attains the desirable spiritual results after controlling his mind (105).

Knowing World as False, One Becomes Śiva

O Goddess ! knowing that this world, made of the three attributes, is false, the devotee should take refuge in me for attaining me (106).

Chapter - 23

Goddess enquires —

O the three eyed, substratum of the universe, having three navel (representing gross, subtle and transcendental aspects), manifestor of the three sattva, rajas and tamas attributes, bearer of the nature of three categories (pati, paśu and pāśa), O Śrikanṭha, the supreme Lord ! you are my preceptor and dear Lord. This body has been offered to me by you. O God ! kindly explain, in detail, the grave queries put by me (1-2).

How the Formless Becomes Substratum of the Universe

O the all pervasive ! being formless, without body, subtle, how do you become the substratum of the universe? Your gross body is also immutable. How can there be a causal relationship of you with the universe? (3) All the beings and non-beings of the world are subject to mutation and attachment. You would be also affected by their transitoriness and other limitations owing to the close contact and identification with them (4). How can a detached self-contented God remain associated with a self who is fully attached with the world? How can it be consistently expressed in language? (5)

God replies —

O the Goddess ! you have very properly asked an apt and secret question. If one intends to know the truth, he has to abandon the attachment for his own self (6). O Pārvatī ! I am the infinite substratum of the universe despite of being non-attached and formless, please listen (7).

Causality Explained by the Example of Space and Air

I support all beings and the whole universe without touching them as the space bears the air. In this way, I am the basis of everything (8). In fact, I am the matrix of all, even if being perfect and immutable. How can the principle of causation be imposed on me as per scriptures? (9) The grass etc. grow on the hills and die. This function is carried out by the movements of the clouds, rains and the sun. How are they related to the mountain? (10) Possessiveness, agency, causality etc. are all the

How is Non-duality of Śiva Established?

O Lord ! you are the substratum, baseless and the sustainer, perpetuator, fearless, perfect and non-dual (12). You are eternal truth, bliss, effulgent and of the nature of pure consciousness. If there is any other entity, then, how is your non-duality possible? (13). O the God of the universe ! if all traits are existent in you, then, how are you the sole lord of the universe? Kindly remove my doubts (14).

God replies —

Earthen Pots are Only Earth—Upaniṣads Preach

Earth is the material cause of pot etc., and despite of various names, forms and functions, they are considered as earthen only like an ear ring made of gold (15). It is commonly said that the effect is fully inherent in cause which also is supported by the scripture as 'Mṛttiketyeva satyam' and explained by the example of seed and its sprouting (16). Enjoyer, enjoyment and the object of enjoyment are all the same as the gold and the ornaments made therefrom. The brightness of gold remains ever existent in the ornaments (17).

People remain engaged in sensuous and lascivious activities before the dawn of self-knowledge. Till then, the discursive delusions remain. How can that exit on the onset of my knowledge? (18). The person imposing the serpent on the rope and assuming it to be a real serpent in delusion, is so much scared that he is unable to decide as what to do or not to do (19). Śiva is the substratum – the waveless ocean of bliss. This universe of names and forms emerges and submerges into this ocean of bliss (20).

The nature which is dependent and even if it is considered to be independent, then also this creation which is based on the cycle of births and deaths cannot be created by her alone. So, your presence is inevitable (21).
